1991 year in review

It had its ups and downs, but say what you will - it wasn't a dull year.

-January-

*Newly-elected mayor Dave Novotny took office along with new council members Jackie Croft and Ted Felter and re-elected council member Cheri Hoffman. Novotny said that one of his goals was to decrease the number of council work sessions. That has come to pass with council meetings now taking place twice a month rather than every Monday night.

*The council approved an airport master plan. 1991 improvements called for in the plan included construction of a paved parking apron large enough to accommodate 50 planes. Later in the year construction of the apron was postponed for at least a year.

*Several soldiers with Charlevoix connections were stationed in the Persian Gulf. Family members attempted to keep track of them as best as possible. A support group named Show Your Colors was organized.

*Proponents of an indoor community swimming pool continued collecting money and also asked the school board to schedule an election for a $1 million bond to fund pool construction.

*School superintendent Gordon VanWieren announced that he would retire in June after 14 years with the Charlevoix school system.

*A curious situation arose when the 1991 city council voted against funding the purchase of property for a new department of public works building. Late in 1990, the council, which at that time was made up of different people, approved the purchase. Later in 1991, the council reconsidered and funded the property purchase.

*Charlevoix High School track coach Hal Evans was named Coach of the Year by the state track association.

*Charlevoix Township made a major improvement to its water system when it built a water tower south of town.

-February-

*The city council approved a 5-year capital improvement plan which meant that the city's infrastructure (i.e. street, sewer and sidewalk repair program) millage.

Analysis

By L. Scott Swanson

Looking back is easy. Looking ahead is tricky, but that's where things get interesting. So let's polish up the crystal ball and try to take a peak into the future and see some of the things which Charlevoix people may be talking about in 1992.

*Down at city hall, the council's first interesting issue will be one left over from late 1991. In mid-December the council voted 4-2 to change the fire department's administrative structure from one in which there is a fire chief to one in which there is a public safety administrator. Volunteer firemen aren't happy with the decision. In order for the council's decision to be put into effect a city ordinance will have to be change. A public hearing to change the ordinance is

First State Bank placed on the market

By L. Scott Swanson

Tom Duke, the majority share holder in First State Bank, has announced that he is putting his interest in the bank on the market.

Contacted at his home in Florida, Duke said there's no particular time-table for selling the bank and his reason for placing the bank on the market is simply that he's 63 years old and it's time for a change in ownership. He said the situation is similar to 1967 when he and a group of partners acquired majority ownership from Archie Livingston. "Archie Livingston reached an age where it was time to change. Now I have," Duke explained.

The Charlevoix State Savings Bank was founded in 1905. The name was changed in the late 1960s. Up until 1969 the bank was located in the building on Bridge Street which is currently occupied by Village Inn Pizza. From 1969 to present the bank has been on the northwest corner of State and Clinton Streets. This coming March the bank will move into a new building on the southwest corner of the same intersection.

Duke said the move to the new building is something he looks forward to for the bank. He said he feels the new building is going to be a beautiful facility.

Several people, both on behalf of banks and individuals, have expressed interest in purchasing Duke's interest in the bank. He said doesn't anticipate any difficulty finding a buyer. He noted that in Michigan, Charlevoix, Harbor Springs and Traverse City are still considered the "cream of the crop as far as banking goes."

Duke said there's no deadline for a sale and that he's just looking for a fair and proper deal.

"We hope to find somebody who will continue First State Bank as it is," he said.

Bank president Lou Hollow said that First State Bank has a net worth of approximately $5 million. The net worth in banking is determined by subtracting deposits from loans and investments. Hollow said that two other Charlevoix County based banks, Northwestern State Bank and Charlevoix County State Bank, have recently been sold for more than their net worth and it is reasonable to assume that would also be the case for First State Bank.

Hollow and Duke both said they see the sale of three Charlevoix County banks within a short period of time as more of coincidental thing rather than any kind of an ominous trend.

would be increased from three to four mills. (A mill being $1 for every $1,000 of a property's state equalized value (SEV). And SEV being 50 percent of a property's market value.) The one mill increase was partially offset by a .25 decrease in operational millage and a .03 decrease in debt retirement. All told there was still a net increase in city taxes of approximately half of a mill.

The city council also discussed borrowing $3.3 million for electrical system improvements. Later in the year, the city did borrow the money and begin construction of a new electrical substation. Paying the loan back will require increased city electric rates. The council still has not determined exactly by how much the rates will increase.

Speaking of the new electrical substation, people living near the corner of Stover Road and Ferry Avenue and in Hampton Village asked the council to move the new substation away from residential areas. Several sites were considered. Eventually a site at the corner of M-66 and Stover Road was selected.

*Michelle Carlson and Matt Stargardt were named winter homecoming queen and king.

*Three cruise boats announced their intention to operate out of Charlevoix during the summer.

*A woman pulled a gun and a man hit sheriff George Lasater on the head with a screwdriver when Lasater and deputies arrested the couple in Boyne Valley Township. After a standoff, the officers were able to arrest the couple who were wanted for contempt of Grand Jury. The man was the son of a Boyne Falls woman who disappeared in 1988. The woman was his girlfriend.

*The high school drama team qualified for state finals competition.

*With the Gulf War air offensive underway and a ground offensive imminent, the community was very concerned about soldiers stationed in the Persian Gulf. Family members of local soldiers tied ribbons to a tree in East Park. A beautiful patriotic ceremony took place in conjunction with the Mount McSaubia Sno-Challenge. The ceremony included fireworks, patriotic music and skiers carrying lighted poles coming down the front of the mountain.

*City manager Mike Wiesner received a $13,500 raise from the city council. The pay raise increased the city manager's base salary from $40,500 to $54,000.

*The school board consented to a request by swimming pool proponents to call a special election seeking property tax dollars to fund construction of an indoor community swimming pool. The election was scheduled for May 13.

*The varsity basketball team won the championship of the Lake Michigan Division of the Great Northern Conference.

scheduled for the Jan. 6 council meeting. (The Jan. 6 council meeting is the first of the new year and will take place at 8 p.m. Traditionally, the first council meeting of the year begins at 8 p.m. rather than the normal 7 p.m. starting time.)

*During the first few months of 1992 the city council will also spend a great deal of time discussing the budget for the coming fiscal year. In 1991, the city council voted to increase city property taxes by approximately half of a mill. (A mill is $1 for every $1,000 of a property's state equalized value (SEV). And SEV is half of a property's theoretical market value.)

City taxes are divided into three categories: General operational millage which funds the city's general operations; Infrastructure millage (infrastructure being a big word for the city's streets, sidewalks, sewer system etc.) which is used to repair and improve the city's infrastructure; and Debt Retirement which is money collected to pay off city loans. Last year the city cut the general operational levy from nine mills to 8.5 mills while increasing the infrastructure levy from three mills to four mills. Debt retirement millage decreased from 1.76 to 1.73 mills.

Given current economic conditions, the council would likely face significant taxpayer wrath if they attempted to increase taxes again.

However to make last year's general operational cut, they eliminated $21,700 budgeted to add a police officer. Like the school, the city will also face a state-imposed freeze on SEV in the coming year.

*Whether or not city property taxes increase, city electrical rates definitely will. In 1991 the city borrowed approximately $3.3 million to improve the city's electrical system. Paying off that loan will require electrical rate increases. City officials have yet to say how steep those increases will be, but they say that even with the increases city electric rates will still be competitive with other electrical rates in northern Michigan.

*Perhaps notable in its absence will be construction work on Bridge Street. In recent years either sidewalks or the street have been torn up during the spring or fall.

...bank to be sold

In the 1970s big banks were gobbling up smaller banks, but then things quieted in the '80s Hollow explained. In the last couple of years there have been mega mergers of large banks, but he doesn't see that as being related to the banking situation in Charlevoix County. He sees this more as just small, strong banks changing hands in an area that is a good market. "I think it's just a maturity of ownership," Duke said. "I don't see any ominous trend as to the disappearance of the small town bank." First State Bank has 19 employees and several thousand accounts of various kinds. There are approximately 60 shareholders in the bank with Duke holding the majority of the shares.

Letters to the editor

Council harms fire department

Editor,
Why do most of the Charlevoix City Council vote the way they think instead of the way most of the voters want? One man should not run the Council.

When the Council voted for the third choice, they, as far as I'm concerned, dumped the City Fire Department down the drain.

I served the Fire Department for 42 plus years. I see no reason for changing it. There are some minor changes that should be made but not the whole department.

They are putting a man in charge who is to be the public safety officer. He knows how to shuffle papers, but how about the speeding traffic on both ends of the city (Bridge St. and Petoskey Ave.) I have been after him about the speeding for four years. Now they are traveling between 40-60 m.p.h. in a 25 m.p.h. zone.

If he cannot slow the traffic down how is he going to run the public safety position?

He is supposed to be a working chief. How many times have you seen him on patrol?

If there were major problems in the Fire and Ambulance departments, why haven't we seen it?

I was born and raised in Charlevoix and I don't like people voted into office who while not knowing how a fire and ambulance department is run try to change it.

With a few changes, why can't the Fire and Ambulance Department of the City of Charlevoix remain the same as it has been for the past 50 years?

We need more of the old time population to stand up and be counted.

Give the volunteer department some support. We do not need one man running two departments he knows very little about.

I have lived here for 68 years and retired last September. Let's keep the system we have.

Christmas Day in Charlevoix was clear and sunny. Through my hospital window, I look past leafless birch trees at a very placid Lake Michigan. Fingers of frozen snow cut across grassy green lawns. Gentle waves stroke the smooth rocks in Boulder Park.

My smiling nurse comes through the door wearing a large green Hallmark bow in her hair. "There's another one of my Christmas presents!" I think to myself. The breakfast tray she puts before me is accented with a red-robed caroler made from a pinecone, courtesy of the Charlevoix Garden Club. A message on the tray reads, "We are sorry that you must spend this Christmas in the hospital away from family and friends. But we hope you will find comfort in sharing this day with our 'hospital family'." Our best wishes to you for a bright new year." The message is signed, the Administration and Staff of the Charlevoix Area Hospital.

By Laurie Lounsbury

A poetic recap of 1991

'T was the week after Christmas, and all over town,
Not a tree was still standing, the kids knocked 'em down.
Four councilmen tended their chimneys with care,
In hopes that a fireman wouldn't be needed there.

The northsiders grieved for the old railroad bed,
While visions of development danced in somebody's head.
The Bosses kept trying to make snow at night,
So children could ski to their young heart's delight.

The County Commissioners tried to dial nine one one,
But a 911 system is still slow to come.
When in City Hall there arose such a clatter,
Over TIFA fund shifting, but what was the matter?

Wiesner and friends thought the deal was quite jolly,
But it prickled some others like a sharp leaf of holly.
With the SEV frozen, unchanged, for next year,
Novotny tried making his message quite clear:

"Now Russell! Now Haggard! Now Cross! Stop Dancin'!
Now Hoffman and Felter, and Gaskin, you start glancin' around you and see the economy's tight,
We must not let spending get way out of sight."

When what to his wondering eyes did appear,
But the city's idea to buy Kusina next year.
More rapid than eagles the downtown plans grew,
For streetlights and bathrooms and a new bridge Park too.

The moon shining bright on the newly paved streets,
Was proof that the road plans were almost complete.
The year now behind us had moments quite merry,
Some funny, some touching, opinions might vary.

Our Valedictorian kept his speech rather brief,
"We made it. We're out of here!" he said with relief.
The Venetian Fest had a queen for a day,
And the homecoming queen made the hard choice to stay, at home on the night of her crowning event,

Her religious beliefs held a high precedent.
A crisp winter night bathed McSaba in light,
As fireworks gleamed on the Sno Challenge night.

The townspeople's voices echoed on snow,
While "The Star Spangled Banner" kept all hearts aglow.
As leaves that before the wild hurricane fly,
So will issues and problems that fall from the sky.

To the top of our goals! To the top, like the sun, casting warm rays of hope, for the new year to come.

By Edith Gilbert

You can believe that the 'hospital family' came through on all counts! My big problem Christmas Day was twofold — I was supposed to walk the halls to get my strength back from a bout of pneumonia, and I also wanted to stay in my room to receive the numerous anticipated phone calls from my family who are located on both coasts. What to do?

I toddled to the telephone switchboard and posed my dilemma to a nice young switchboard operator in attendance. "No problem," she assured me. "The hospital is practically empty. If you're not in your room, we'll be glad to page you." And they did more than once!

The food was so good that I called the dietitian, Julie, to compliment her. She stopped by for a chat and told me how excited she is about the future plans for the new air-conditioned kitchen and cafeteria to be located on the lower level overlooking Lake Michigan. What a morale booster it will be for the staff and guests to sit overlooking a magnificent view during occasional breaks, instead of being cooped up in an airless, windowless, cheerless room as one is now, an experience I can unfortunately verify.

The future renovation is all part of the hospital expansion program we've been hearing so much about.

A most successful fund drive this year culminated in raising over $1,600,000 thus far. The new wing will greatly accommodate the rising increase for out-patient surgery. It will be completely separated, yet attached to the rest of the hospital. The enlarged operating rooms will accommodate many needed pieces of specialized equipment which are required for modern surgery today. Babies will be delivered in a new home-like unit referred to in hospital jargon as LDRP (Labor, Delivery, Recovery, Post-Partum). This is also to be located on the lower level of the new wing facing Lake Michigan. Traffic flow for other hospitalized patients will be more efficient and far more private. And all the remodeling will be done while the hospital is open to patient care as usual.

Surrounded by poinsettia plants, get well cards and Christmas presents, I hear a troop of Boy Scouts caroling through the halls. And I think to myself how fortunate I am to have access to such a fine hospital, with such good doctors, and such a caring staff. If it weren't for the remarkable wonder drugs that brought me back to full recovery, you'd be reading my obituary here instead of my "Edith" column right now!

FAMILY

Boal - Bohn

Janeen Patrice Boal and David R. Bohn were united in marriage in the afternoon of November 9, at St. Edwards Catholic Church in Racine, Wisconsin.

The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. William Graves of Charlevoix, and the bridegroom is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Russell Bohn of Racine.

The Reverend Charles Westen performed the double ring ceremony, with two hundred guests in attendance.

The bride wore a gown of candlelight bridal satin with a V-neckline, Elizabethan sleeves trimmed in English net and a hand-beaded peplum bodice. The full skirt cascaded into a semi-cathedral train with cut-out detailing. The bride completed her ensemble with a traditional Camelot headpiece of pearls and bugle beads in illusion veiling.

The bride also carried a bouquet of long stemmed red and white roses, tree ferns and Italian ruskus, and baby's breath.

Becky Resch of Charlevoix served the bride as the maid of honor. Bridesmaids were Cathy Boal, sister of the bride from Spokane, Wa.; Chris Stenonich, sister of the groom, Norma Barrientes, and Lisa Rienhardt. The bridesmaids wore tea length dresses with black velvet long sleeve tops, and emerald green iridescent taffeta skirts. They carried long stemmed red roses with dendrobium orchids and ivy.

The flower girl was Ashley Money Penny, and she wore a dress with a black velvet top and emerald green skirt, trimmed with a large velvet bow.

Brandon Stevens, a cousin of the bride, served as the ringbearer.

The groom's best man was Paul Baur, and the groomsmen were Pat Flynn, Mike Caretta, cousin of the bridegroom, David Boal, brother of the bride, and Mark Johnson.

Jeff Stevens, cousin of the bride, and Jack Money Penny served as ushers. They are both from Charlevoix.

The bride's personal attendant was Shelley Stevens of Charlevoix.

A reception was held at the Sheraton Racine Ballroom, hosted by the bride's parents. The rehearsal dinner was given by the groom's parents in their home the night before the wedding. The newlyweds took a wedding trip to Chicago after the wedding. They will make their home in Racine, Wisconsin, where the groom is the assistant manager at Tire America in Brookfield.

OF BLESSINGS

By Rev. Bruce Hamilton

by Rev. Bruce Hamilton

I was reading a passage from Charles Swindoll's book, "The Seasons of Life," that he just happened to have written on his birthday. He was turning 42. It seems his secretary gave him a birthday card that said, "Don't worry if you can't blow the candles out any more... Just beat them to death with your cane."

That said a lot to me. You see I just reached the lofty height of 41 last week. If they put 41 candles on my cake, I probably wouldn't blow them out either. And if I could, the frosting probably would have melted by the time I did.

My secretary did more than get me a card. She remembered my birthday with my favorite weakness, a tin full of Oreos cookies! That was great and I enjoyed them too. The only problem is that I have made a New Year's goal of losing weight. Well, it isn't January, I yet (though it will be when some of you read this - pray for me!).

I remind my church-family that God is good all the time. The more I look back at these first decades of my life, I know how good He has been. Oh, that's not to say that there haven't been moments where I would like to have crawled in a hole and either forgotten or redone a few things. I think that's something we all share. But that's life.

If everything were perfect and we never made any mistakes, where would the adventure be? Where would the growth be? Why do anything at all? Second Corinthians 5:7 reads, "we walk by faith, not by sight." That to me is the key. Instead of living in fear of whatever problems I might face, I'm going to trust in God's solutions. Instead of not taking advantage of opportunities to try new things and possibly failing, I am going to remember that God has lessons I need to learn even in failure.

I want to look back and see how God has worked in everything that has happened to me. I want to look ahead and know that I have not begun to see all the blessings, all the changes, all the growth, all the hopes and so much more that my Lord has in store for the years ahead.

God has given us life. But our lives are what we choose to make them. There are times where 41 does seem old. But there are also times when I know the best is yet to come.

My friend, praise God for everything that you have been through. You are alive! Praise God for what lies ahead of you; whatever that might be. The good, the bad, or the whatever. We all have much to learn. We all have different ways that we can grow. We do walk by faith and not by sight. That's what life is all about.

by a city police officer and cited for having an expired driver's license, fleeing and eluding and operating under the influence of liquor. A subsequent investigation by the State Police found no evidence of wrongdoing on the part of the police officer. The police department has yet to receive the results of an investigation by the Federal Bureau of Investigation. Charges against Reibel have yet to be resolved and are still in court.

*Following U.S. military success in the Persian Gulf, local people looked forward to soldiers returning home.

*The annual K-5 musical was centered around the theme "Celebrate America."

*Ground was broken for a new medical care facility next to the hospital.

*Katherine McCleese, 28, disappeared from a party near Bay Shore. Police began searching for her. Heather Kleiber, 13, had been missing since August 1990. Police were searching for her when McCleese disappeared.

April

*Andrew Wynkoop, 19, was arrested and showed police where to find the body of Katherine McCleese. The body was found buried near the entrance to Fisherman's Island State Park. Wynkoop was charged with kidnapping, rape and murder. The subsequent court proceedings are still in court.

ceedings lasted until his sentencing in December.

*The city council approved hiring a part-time downtown coordinator to encourage new businesses to locate in the downtown area. The $16,000 budgeted for the position is funded by Downtown Development Authority funds. The Chamber of Commerce brought the request for the downtown coordinator to the council. Later in the year, Rod Benson was hired as the downtown coordinator.

*After more than a year of debate and negotiation, the city council took the action necessary to allow township developments to hook into the city sewer system.

*As the Ferry Beach improvement project neared completion there was debate over proposed changes to the parking lot for boat trailers. The proposed plan, which called for islands to be placed in the lot, was amended.

*A proposal to change the school system bus routes so that K-5 students would ride on the same bus as older students - thus allowing the K-5 school day to start and end an hour earlier - met with opposition from parents of K-5 children. The proposal was shelved.

May

*By May many of the soldiers who had been stationed in the Persian Gulf were returning to Charlevoix where anxious family members and friends greeted them.

*Bridge Street was torn up and repaved. When the repaving was completed, downtown merchants who had suffered through torn up streets and sidewalks during construction rejoiced.

*Heather Kleiber's body was found in a wooded area near Medusa Creek by a security guard at the fish weir. The discovery of the body brought to an end a search which began in Aug. 1990. Andy Wynkoop, who was the last person known to have seen Kleiber and who had previously been charged with murdering Katherine McCleese, was also charged with Kleiber's murder.

*In a special election, school district voters rejected a proposal to increase property taxes to construct a swimming pool at the K-5 school. The proposal failed by a vote of 1,163 to 717. The election turn-out was the largest turn-out of voters for a school election in the past several years.

*Operation Petunia celebrated its 10th anniversary.

June

*School district voters approved a tax increase of .59 mills for three years (a total of approximately $500,000) for additional computers and technological equipment for the school system.

*After six years and between $1 million and $1.3 million the Ferry

Beach improvement received finishing touches. The project approximately doubled the swimming area while also adding enclosed picnic areas, barbecue grills, a children's play area, improved launch ramps, horse shoe pits, a volleyball area and a basketball court.

*Ferry Beach was not the only city recreational facility to see significant improvements. The city softball complex added a new small field for tee ball leagues as well as a new concession stand, announcer's booth and fences.

*The proximity of the Beach Haus to the Lake Michigan waterline stirred debate. People complained that the new condominium complex was too close to the water.

Charlevoix based sailboat wins 1,500 mile ocean race

While many Charlevoix residents and summer resorters were putting their boats in storage for the season, one Charlevoixan was crossing the finish line in Virgin Gorda to win the Caribbean 1500 Cruising Rally. Lowell and Sharon Blossom of Belvedere Ave. in Charlevoix sailed their 61-foot boat, the Twowowie, to victory with a clean sweep, being the first to finish, first in their class, and the first overall with the corrected times.

Gene Steele of Charlevoix was a member of the Twowowie crew for the 1,500 mile race. The Caribbean 1500 is a cruising race designed by Steve Black, of Newport, as a way to get Caribbean bound sailors from the East coast to their destinations safely, while providing them with an opportunity to have fun and make friends.

The Twowowie left Norfolk, Va., Nov. 2 and crossed the finish line in Virgin Gorda nine days and 19 hours later. The race took two days longer than last year's race, due to the shift in prevailing winds.

"We had to beat the whole way," Steele explained of the long race. "It gets tiring, sailing at a twenty degree angle for that long."

Had the prevailing westerly winds been blowing, the 22 boats in the race could have run from Virginia to Bermuda, where they made the turn to head south for Virgin Gorda. The Trade winds usually carry the boats easily from Bermuda to Virgin Gorda, but this year the wind was coming almost directly over their bows.

The Blossoms have made Charlevoix the home port for the Twowowie, although the boat won't make the trip back up north for a couple of years. The Blossoms will be taking the boat to St. Maarten for the winter, then on to Venezuela.

and that at times people couldn't walk on the beach without either climbing over Beach Haus stones or wading. Developers of the complex said they can't control the water level. Subsequent discussions led to an agreement in which the Beach Haus will make a grassy area above the stones convenient for people to walk on during times of high water.

*Charlevoix Area Hospital kicked off a fundraising campaign to improve the hospital's reception, obstetrics and surgical areas. The campaign exceeded its $1.4 million goal.

July

*Music filled Charlevoix's downtown area as the Odmak Pavilion in East Park was dedicated. Several bands, including one made up of Odmak's former students and professional colleagues, played throughout the day.

*The city council discussed new zoning provisions for lakeshore property falling under the city's Scenic Reserve classification. City attorney Jim Young had advised the council that without some type of modification, the city's Scenic Reserve zoning was susceptible to a successful court challenge.

*The Charlevoix Ministerial Association proposed to establish a youth center in the old Maxbauer's Dairy building on West Lincoln Street. A board of directors and a youth council for the center have been established. The board of directors is working with city agencies to get paperwork in order while the youth council is planning activities. If everything falls into place properly, the center should open this coming spring.

*Aside from a bizarre situation in crowning the Venetian Queen, the 1991 Venetian Festival went well. Due to confusion between tabulation and the announcement of the queen, the wrong queen was crowned. The mistake was rectified following the pageant.

August

*Dr. Roberta Jackson was hired as new school superintendent. Jackson, originally from the Upper Peninsula, had been working in Indiana school systems. She started work in Charlevoix early in October.

*The school board voted to end the high school building trades program.

*The city council debated a proposed low-income housing development on May Street. The proposed private development eventually received the necessary approval and permits.

*Several athletes from Del Terrill's high school football, basketball and track teams came to visit their terminally ill coach at Charlevoix Area Hospital. They presented Terrill with a plaque which he placed on the wall at the foot of his bed. He died a short time later.

September

*State Police built a portable ramp near the Coast Guard station and launched cars, vans and a school bus into Lake Charlevoix. The cars were submerged as part of a research effort to see what vehicles do when they hit the water and how long people have to escape from them.

*The Michigan Department of Transportation announced that Charlevoix's Memorial Bridge is scheduled for major repairs. Some repairs won't affect car traffic. Repairs which will affect car traffic are scheduled for 1993 and 1994.

October

*School officials and Charlevoix taxpayers cringed as the state legislature passed a tax base sharing bill which will take money from out-of-formula school districts such as Charlevoix and transfer it to other school districts. In its first year, the bill cost Charlevoix school district more than $90,000.

*The city council spent several meetings discussing a piece of vacated railroad right of way property between Mercer Boulevard and Lake Charlevoix. A group of citizens proposed to raise money to buy the property, but that proposal fell through.

*Kristen Ranville and Ryan Eveleigh were named Charlevoix High School fall homecoming queen and king.

*The city of Charlevoix received three beautification awards from the Keep Michigan Beautiful organization.

*Despite their defeat in a May 13 election, pool proponents continued their efforts and released results of another survey.

November

*Charlevoix's boys' cross country team coached by Pete Spies won its fifth straight state title. The Rayders were not favored to take the title going into this year's state meet, but when the dust settled, as has often been the case in recent years, the Rayders made it and the other teams ate it.

...a few things to watch for in the coming year

But this past spring that work was completed and this summer merchants should get in a full season undisturbed. Although one thing that might possibly change that scenario would be the installation of new downtown street lights. The Downtown Development Authority (DDA) is once again moving forward with that project. Even so, the construction disruption of installing new street lights would pale in comparison to the sidewalk and street projects. Another DDA project to watch is the development of a new parking lot between Mason and Antrim Streets at the former Kusina Motors site.

*Much like the city council, the school board also faces a budgetary struggle in the coming year. The school board will find itself caught in the middle of an interesting situation. On the expenditure side, between half and three-fourths of the school's expenses are for salary and benefits. The school's contract with teachers runs through Aug. 31 of 1993 and calls for annual salary increases of six percent. On the revenue side the school faces a state-imposed freeze on property values. In other words, where in the past the school got a revenue increase each year due to higher property taxes resulting from increased property values, they won't be getting that this year. In addition to that, the state has passed a tax-base sharing bill which allows the state to take a portion of Charlevoix school district property tax revenue and distribute to school systems elsewhere in the state. That bill cost the school system more than $90,000 this year. On the plus side, the city's Tax Increment Financing Authority program has ended and that will mean increased revenue for the school system.

Whether or not the school board goes to voters in June and asked for a millage increase remains to be seen. In 1991, voters passed a request for .59 mills for three years to purchase technological equipment for the school system. However, in recent years voters have also shown a willingness to reject school district requests for increased operational millage.

*In another school matter a committee is meeting to develop a school improvement plan as recovered by a new state law. The committee will be discussing goals for the Charlevoix School System and how the school should go about accomplishing those goals.

*In the fall of 1992 the boys' cross country team will go after their sixth straight Class C State Championship.

*The city and school system aren't alone in talking taxes. Late in '91 the Char-Em Intermediate School System was talking about establishing a new vocational education program. Within that discussion, there was talk of a possible millage request to fund the program.

*Efforts to construct an indoor community swimming pool will continue in '92. Regardless of where a person stands on whether or not a pool should be built, you have to admit the pool proponents are certainly a tenacious group. Currently they are attempting to set up a pool authority in order to be eligible to apply for state grants. Given the current economic climate and cutbacks in state programs, successfully securing a grant could prove challenging.

*Charlevoix's business and economy will be interesting to watch in '92. Charlevoix County State Bank is coming under new ownership and First State Bank is on the market.

With the Buy-Low supermarket having closed its doors there's a large retail space available in the Charlevoix Commons shopping center. There's another building available on the other side of M-66 where the furniture store used to be. It'll be interesting to see what, if anything, goes into those two vacancies.

Do these things paint a gloomy picture for the Charlevoix economy in 1992? Not necessarily. People in banking say changes at the banks aren't necessarily due to economics, but are due to other factors. They say Charlevoix remains an excellent location for a bank. Granted, there are a few vacant retail buildings, but they are certainly outnumbered by those which have been filled or built in recent years. Most vacant industrial buildings have also been filled and there have also been new industrial buildings constructed in the industrial park.

Although Charlevoix is certainly not immune to problems with the nation's economy, it can also be argued that Charlevoix stands as good a chance as any community of doing well economically in 1992.

picious vehicle a city policeman and an auxiliary officer stopped an armed robbery in progress at the Weatherlane Terrace.

*When a three-county economic alliance chose to become aligned with Michigan State University, Charlevoix left the alliance. The primary reason cited by people encouraging the city to leave the alliance was that they didn't want the alliance to become entangled with an educational bureaucracy. Charlevoix has its own industrial development committee.

*The city council voted down a proposal to have the Tax Increment Financing Authority, (which is a

City will hire new chief for fire department

Council chooses not to appoint public safety director

By L. Scott Swanson

The city council will change the administrative structure of the fire department, but in a way which is more palatable to volunteer firemen.

Rather than hiring a public safety director who would be in charge of both the police and fire departments, the city will hire a new fire chief who will work a standard work week and a new fireman. Dennis Halverson will continue in his present capacity as police chief rather than having his responsibilities changed to that of a public safety director.

Following a lengthy discussion Monday evening, council members voted 4-2 to reject an ordinance change which would have allowed the police chief and fire chief positions to be combined into a public safety director position. Council members Bill Haggard, Butch Russell, Jackie Cross and Ted Felter voted against the ordinance change. Council members Pat Gaskin and Cheri Hoffman voted for it.

At a Dec. 15 council meeting the council, despite the opposition of volunteer firemen, had voted to pursue the option of hiring a public safety director. Monday evening's action effectively killed that option. With that option dead, the council voted to hire a new fire chief who will work a normal Monday through Friday daytime work week, although he, or she, will also be required to fill in when one of the other three firefighters is sick or on vacation. After the new fire chief has been on the job for six months, the council will review the fire department to see that improvements are being made.

Currently the fire department has three full-time firefighters who work 24-hour rotating shifts. One of the firefighters serves as fire chief. With the new system, the fire department will have three full-time firefighters and a fourth person who is the fire chief. The remainder of the department is made up of volunteers.

The new system will be more expensive than either the current system or than having a public safety director. Cost figures compiled by the city staff indicate the new system will cost at least $20,000 more per year than the present system.

Volunteer firemen had objected to having a public safety director in charge of the fire department. They argued that they wanted the police and fire departments to remain separate and that they wanted someone trained in firefighting to be in charge of the fire department. Supporters of having a public safety director contended that to reduce the city's liability risk, the city had to have better administration of the fire department and that the most efficient and cost effective way to achieve that would be to appoint Halverson as public safety administrator while hiring a third firefighter.

Gaskin spoke in support of hiring a public safety director. She said that given information the council had received from the city attorney regarding potential fire department liability, she felt hiring a public safety director would be better than the present system. She expressed

Historical Society publishes Charlevoix booklet

By L. Scott Swanson

Even though "Historic Charlevoix" is just a small booklet about a small town, getting the book written, edited and published still took a long time. "It seemed like we'd never get it out," said Bill Price of the Charlevoix Historical Society. Price and other members of the Historical Society set the wheels in motion for the booklet approximately two years ago. Finished copies of the booklet arrived at Harsha House (the society's headquarters) late last month with the first copies just now finding their way into the hands of the public.

One of the most challenging aspects of the project was condensing all of the information available into a 48 page booklet.

"It's a guide book. It's not a history," Price explained.

The booklet is separated into three sections: a downtown walking tour; a northside driving tour; and a southside driving tour. Each section is broken down into numbered landmarks. In addition to a brief description of each landmark, the book also includes several photos and two maps.

Sites, events and people discussed in the walking tour section include: The Harsha House; The Battle of Pine River; Michigan Beach; The Pine River Channel; Hoffmann Park and Memorial Bridge; Sunset Park and Father Charlevoix; The City Dock; Round Lake; East Park; The Charlevoix Chamber of Commerce.

Included on the northside driving tour are: The Chicago Club; The Railroad in Charlevoix; The Inn; The Charlevoix Golf Club; North Point; Mount McSaub; Michigan Avenue; Horton Bay; Greensky Hill Church; Pine Point.

Included on the southside driving tour are: Charlevoix Area Hospital; Boulder Park and Earl Young; South Point and the Medusa Cement Plant;

Timsaks, who are residents of Beaver Island, flew to Charlevoix by Coast Guard helicopter Friday when Cheryl's blood pressure became elevated. Bryan arrived on his scheduled due date, Sunday, January 5, at 7:25 a.m., after seven hours of labor and a natural delivery. Bryan will go home to a big brother, seven, and a sister, three. Both sets of Bryan's grandparents are Beaver Islanders, as well as his great grandmother, who is 90 years old and still spry enough to babysit for her healthy, brown-haired, great-grandchild.

Ferry Beach and South Charlevoix; The Belvedere Club; Castle Farm and the Loeb Estate; Ironton and the Ironton Ferry; Sequanota; The village of Norwood; Phelps; and Barnard.

With so many topics covered, it is obviously impossible to go into a lot of depth. Instead the booklet offers a brief summary of the background and historical significance of each subject.

"The whole point is to get people interested in the town and then if they have any further, in depth questions, they can come to us," explained Geoff Reynolds, Historical Society Executive Director.

Given its brevity and concise presentation, the book is an easy read. It can be read from cover to cover in a couple of hours or less.

Price said the booklet is a result of the collaborative efforts of several people. Near the front of the booklet is a list of 29 people who helped in its preparation. At the back of the book there is a list of 15 local individuals and organizations who made donations to fund the booklet project.

At the onset of the project, the Historical Society appointed a committee. After the committee was formed, responsibility for researching and writing about the various subjects was delegated to several individuals.

Once the writers collected and wrote the segments, the available information had to be edited and condensed so that it would fit into the booklet. Price pointed out that a benefit of the booklet project that won't show up in the booklet is historic information which wouldn't fit into the booklet, but has been put on file at the Harsha House.

Several of the book's contributors had writing and editing experience. And the final editing at the publishers was someone with a Charlevoix background. The booklet was published by Harbor House Publishers Inc. of Boyne City. Former Charlevoix Courier editor Dave Knight is now with Harbor House and did the final editing of the booklet.

The Historical Society had 3,000 copies of the booklet printed. Copies of the booklet sell for $2 and are currently available at the Harsha House and at the Chamber of Commerce office.

Price said the booklet is something which has been needed for a long time. It was written so that it would appeal to both residents and visitors. "I think we've done a good job on it," Price said. "And I think it's something we can be proud of."

Proceeds from the sale of the first press run will be used to cover publishing costs when more copies of the booklet are needed. Price also noted that as an extension of the project, the society hopes to eventually be able to put up plaques at each site mentioned in the booklet. The plaques will have numbers which correspond to site numbers in the booklet.

Community thanked for generosity

Editor,

(An open letter to the people of Charlevoix.)

Most of you have no doubt packed away all your Christmas decorations and sorted many recollections of happy Christmas moments. Before you close the door, make room for one more. If you had anything at all to do with the Community Christmas Project this year, you were part of the largest outpouring of the Christmas spirit of sharing that we have ever seen in this community.

169 households were touched in some manner, covering 406 people. 154 homes received the components of a Christmas dinner with extra staples and perishable food.

15 households received gifts only. 175 children, 48 seniors, and 6 other adults received gifts.

Total financial contributions amounted to $4,576.20. Hundreds of people contributed time, labor and material resources. There were 114 identifiable workers (many others behind the scenes). 33 of these were children and young people. There were 28 church groups, commercial establishments, community organizations, as well as 5 youth groups, who made identifiable gifts of money, food, and material items such as mittens, caps, scarves and socks. 10 identifiable sizable contributions of money and material items were made by individuals. Countless others added to the bounty.

We feel one group is entitled to special notice. For several years St. Mary's Church parishioners have contributed most of the children's gifts as well as many workers. This year they added 70 bags of food.

Needless to say, no words can adequately express the appreciation of the planning committee, which includes representatives from most of the churches, for this overwhelming response to our plea for help. I'm sure the feelings of the 406 recipients of your generosity are also expressed as we say, "Thank you from the bottoms of our hearts."

As Tiny Tim said, "God bless us all."

Sincerely yours,
The Charlevoix Community Christmas Project Planning Committee

Dentist addresses AIDS concerns

Editor,

It is with a sense of tragic loss and great concern that dentists near and far have regarding the illness and recent death of Kimberly Bergalis. (She along with four others are believed to have contracted AIDS from the same dentist in southern Florida.)

It is regretful, however, that she spent her last remaining time and energy promoting mandatory AIDS testing for health care workers. Although much is yet to be discovered on how to treat HIV infections to save the lives of people like Kimberly, there is now very sound information and guidelines on how to prevent its spread from person to person.

Mandatory testing would be of little help in slowing its spread through our society. Out of the roughly 1,000,000 people who carry the AIDS virus, only the four from Florida are known to have acquired the virus through contact with their dentist. It is disappointing to all dentists that after more than a year of investigation the Centers for Disease Control still has not provided us with a probable

A cause for these transmissions.

What is now law in a number of states and follows the guidelines set forth by both the Centers for Disease Control and the American Dental Association is that dentists, dental hygienists and dental assistants should wear gloves, masks, and eye wear when treating patients. Whatever the procedure, this practice will essentially eliminate any risk of transmission of the HIV virus or any other infectious disease.

What the press and public often do not realize is that this is not the first time the health professions have dealt with the spread of a major disease. Hepatitis B is still dentists' number one concern. Hepatitis B is literally thousands of times more apt to spread from doctor to patient or vice versa, and it can cause death or increased risk of liver cancer. If not life ending, it is usually career ending for health care workers.

Dentists are proud that there have been no known cases of Hepatitis B passed from dentist to patient in the United States in the last 8 years. So the next time you see your dentist or other health care provider, don't be concerned if he might test positive for AIDS but do make sure he wears a mask, eye wear, and gloves.

Council acted properly in modifying decision

Having criticized the city council for their Dec. 15 decision to change the city fire department structure, it seems only fair to praise the council for their Jan. 6 decision to modify that stance.

At their Jan. 6 meeting, the council voted not to pursue an ordinance change which would have led to hiring a public safety director. (See story page 1.) Instead, the city will hire a new fire chief to replace former fire chief John Martin, who is now superintendent of the city street department.

Rather than being one of three full-time firemen working 24 hour shifts on a rotating basis, the new chief will be one of four full-time firemen. He will work normal daytime hours Monday through Friday and fill in when one of the other firemen is sick or on vacation.

The new system offers both advantages and disadvantages. The main advantage is that it will allow the fire chief time to do safety inspections. The major disadvantage is the cost incurred by adding to the fire department staff. (An additional cost of more than $20,000 per year.)

Perhaps a more desirable alternative would have been to hire a new chief within the three person staff and hire a part time person to allow the chief time to do inspections. As councilman Jackie Cross noted, if that didn't work out, the city could always bump up to the system proposed.

Either way, the council was correct in deciding to hire a fire chief rather than a public safety administrator.

An understanding with squirrels

Hundreds of thousands of years ago, prehistoric man lived in harmony with the woodland animals, sharing the same environment, and peacefully coexisting in the great outdoors. At some point in time, Mrs. Prehistoric Man decided some of the woodland animals probably had cooties and demanded that her mate build her a house so she wouldn't have to deal with yucky cooties all over her living space.

At about the same time, Mrs. Squirrel decided that man was developing some peculiarly disgusting eating habits, choosing to eat dead animals rather than live berries and nuts, so she told her hubby she wanted no more part of man and his living habits. And so it came to pass that Prehistoric man and Prehistoric Squirrel formed the Squirrel/Man Behavior pact, an agreement stating that man would live indoors and eat dead animals, and squirrels would live in trees and eat nuts and berries, and the two would not interfere with one another's space.

This pact worked very well for many thousands of years, with each successive generation respecting the terms of the old agreement, until one millennium Man got a little lax in his child rearing duties and called out to his wife, "Hey honey, while you're telling the kids about the birds and the bees, why don't you fill them in on the Squirrel/Man Behavior Pact?" The wife misunderstood him, and she proceeded to educate her children on how a Squirrelly Man Behaves and Acts: It was useful information, but did nothing to perpetuate the terms of the original agreement.

With the details of the Squirrel/Man Behavior Pact lost forever, Man started doing stupid things like building treeshouses for his children, right smack in the domain of the squirrels. The squirrels were appalled at this new development, and demonstrated their displeasure by hurling acorns at the capricious kiddies in their trees, only to have the whippersnappers start taking pot shots at them with B B guns. The straw that broke the camel's back was when a notably squirrelly man named Yul Gibbons started preaching to mankind to stop eating dead animals and start eating tree bark and nuts and berries. The squirrels were fit to be tied over this new threat to their food supply.

It was in this outraged frame of mind that a modern Squirrel decided to drop in on a modern human dwelling, so drop he did. Right down the chimney and into my home.

After getting his bearings, the squirrel ran through the house, via the picture frames and draperies, checking out the newfangled contraptions. "Wow, squirrel sized Stair Climbers," the squirrel thought as he leaped onto the miniblinds. He liked the concept of bringing an evergreen tree dwelling into a warm home, and was particularly impressed with the mood lighting running around the tree. The decorative art objects were a little too delicate for his taste, he discovered, as he sent them crashing to the ground. After leaving his sooty footprints on every wall and ceiling of the entire home, the squirrel retired to the kitchen curtains for a rest.

That was where he leaped out at me, missing my head by inches. Being a calm and rational woman of the '90s I pursued the only logical course of action: I slammed the door and ran screaming from the house, in desperate search of a man with squirrel knowledge. Unfortunately it was Sunday and men with squirrel knowledge are hard to find, so I settled for a man with a middle linebacker build. When expertise is lacking, size is always the next best thing. It made no matter to me that the enemy weighed two pounds, about 218 pounds less than my friend. The enemy was, after all, Squirrelly. After surveying the devastation to my walls and windows, we decided on a course of action: leaving the front door wide open so that the squirrel could find a safe exit from the house. We went outside and patiently waited for his departure, when, instead of leaving, he apparently sent out the message in squirrel language that the coast was clear, because soon there were two more squirrels on my front porch, sniffing at the open door. The middle linebacker guy loomed up at them and started shouting something about all season tire tracks on their little squirrel backs, causing them to rethink the invitation and head for the maple trees.

After sharing my home with the squirrel stuck up my chimney for twenty-eight hours, I located a man with squirrel knowledge, and he smoked the little bugger out of his hiding place. I bravely screamed and hyperventilated while he caught the squirrel by the neck and returned him to the great outdoors. It is because of this harrowing experience that I want to stress the importance of abiding by the Squirrel/Man Behavior Pact. It's imperative that man stay out of trees and quit eating nuts and berries, or someday, somewhere, someone might come home to a really frightening sight. A squirrel in your easy chair, eating left over roast beef and drinking your last beer.

Watershed group receives grant for planning and zoning study

The Tip of the Mitt Watershed Council was recently awarded $80,226 by the W.K. Kellogg Foundation of Battle Creek as matching funds to complete an extensive planning and zoning program. "Our planning and zoning project is now fully funded, thanks to this grant from the Kellogg Foundation and a previous grant from the Frey Foundation from Grand Rapids," states Gail Gruenwald, Executive Director of the Watershed Council.

The Watershed Council is using the funding to develop sample water quality protection planning and zoning provisions for local governments throughout Antrim, Charlevoix, Cheboygan and Emmet Counties. "The development and adoption of these provisions are critical to the long term protection of northern Michigan's water resources," says Gruenwald. The Watershed Council has already completed a survey of local ordinances throughout this area as well as an opinion survey of area local officials. These two surveys provide the background information necessary to develop the sample ordinance language and to address the needs of northern Michigan's local communities.

The topics to be covered by the sample provisions include: wetlands, floodplains, soil erosion, stormwater, salvage yards, groundwater, lake and stream shorelines, septic systems, open space, high risk erosion, natural areas, and growth management. "We are working with various other agencies to draft and promote these provisions including Charlevoix County Cooperative Extension Service and the Planning and Zoning Center in Lansing," says Gruenwald. "We hope to have the provisions completed by early summer. Local officials and citizens are encouraged to call the Watershed Council at 347-1181 for more information."

Clarification

A story in the Dec. 25 Courier concerning food collected at Charlevoix County State Bank for the Community Food Pantry Christmas Project was incomplete. It neglected to say that food contributed by various organizations, individuals and bank customers was matched item for item by the bank. Approximately $800 in food was contributed and another $800 in food was added by the matching program.

...city to hire new fire department chief concern about the expense of hiring a daytime chief plus another firefighter.

Felter said that regardless of which option the council chose to pursue, he wanted to set a timetable of six months for improvement. He also said that to this point he has not seen a job description for the city fire chief.

"Before appointing someone to a position, I would like to see what his duties are going to be," Felter said.

City attorney Jim Young and local attorney Tom Pointner expressed conflicting opinions regarding whether changing to a public safety director would require a charter amendment (i.e. vote of the people) or whether it could be handled simply through an ordinance change (requiring only a council vote).

Young said the change could be accomplished by ordinance since the council was simply combining two positions and changing the name of the positions to a public safety administrator. Pointner contended that the result of the ordinance would be to change responsibilities outlined in the city charter therefore a charter amendment would be required.

In addition to arguing that a public safety administrator would require a charter amendment, Pointner also argued that would not be the best way for the city to address liability concerns. He noted that Halverson, while a capable administrator, does not have current fire emergency response training. Pointner said the best way for the city to address liability concerns is to hire a qualified fire chief.

Questions were also raised concerning the training requirements for the fire chief. The former fire chief John Martin, although qualified as a fire safety inspector, did not have all of the other training required by the state for fire chiefs. Charlevoix Township fire chief Curt Thompson explained that for a number of years the state required certain training for fire chiefs, but chiefs who had been on duty prior to the new requirement laws being adopted were grandfathered in. But then in recent years the state eliminated the grandfather provision.

Following the vote not to pursue the public safety administrator option, the council voted unanimously to hire a daytime chief and a new firefighter. The first step in that process will be to develop a fire chief job description.

Rayders fall to 0-4 with loss to Petoskey

By L. Scott Swanson

Even though Charlevoix's varsity basketball team played well by streaks Friday night, it's still there. The it is that big ugly 0 in the Rayders' record this year. Following Friday's 75-65 homecourt loss to Petoskey, the 0 now precedes a 4, as in 0-4.

Although they trailed throughout the game and ended up losing by 10 points, the Rayders put a scare into the undefeated Northern. With his team trailing by 11 points with just more than three minutes left in the game, Rayder coach Jim Kanine took a time-out. Rayders came out of the huddle and scored six unanswered points prompting the Northern to take a time-out of their own.

Petoskey built a 22-16 lead by the end of the first quarter. In what was to become a pattern for the game, the Northern had several three-point opportunities as they made baskets while being fouled.

For Charlevoix, senior forward Mike Dobulis had a strong first quarter. Only minutes into the game, Dobulis had the ball on the perimeter and was holding it while sorting out his options. The Petoskey defender was giving Dobulis enough room to shoot and from the bench, Kanine yelled, "Shoot it Mike. Turn around and hit that." Dobulis did as instructed and buried the shot. Later in the quarter he hit three more shots, one of them a three-pointer. He closed the quarter with seven points on his way to an 18-point night.

In the second quarter, the Rayders began to use a full court press. Later in the game they also used what appeared to be a three-quarter court or half-court trap. The press didn't take Petoskey out of their game, but it was successful off and on and changed the pace of the game.

After being held scoreless in the first quarter, senior guard Luke LaBlance began getting his shots and getting them to fall. LaBlance had nine points in the second quarter and ended up leading the Rayders in scoring with 23 for the game.

Charlevoix trailed 39-34 at half time.

A peculiar and frustrating thing happened in the third quarter. This year the Rayders have struggled with rebounding. They've had to work hard just to hold their own on the glass. But at the beginning of the third quarter, the Rayders rebounded well, particularly at the offensive end. The problem was that despite getting the rebounds, the Rayders missed several put-back shots from close range.

The Rayders' shooting problems allowed the Northern to extend their lead to nine points before Charlevoix righted itself and closed back to within a point. Late in the quarter, the Rayders slipped again and ended the quarter trailing by seven, 55-48.

The fourth quarter was another streaky affair. Petoskey led throughout, but the Rayders took a couple of runs at them and it wasn't until the final minute and a half that the game got out of reach.

Kanine juggled his starting line up for the game. Keith Carey started at forward and Wayne Joy started at guard. Joy scored a dozen points.

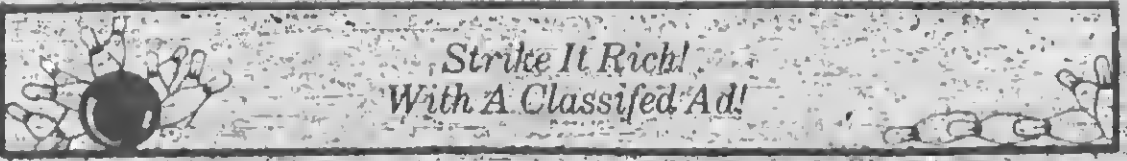

After hosting Harbor Springs Tuesday night, Charlevoix has an off night this Friday evening. The Rayders will resume play Jan. 14, hosting Mancelona.

Over them, around them, through them, whatever it takes to get to the basket. Luke LaBlance (25) started slow Friday evening and was held scoreless in the first quarter. However he picked up the pace in the next three quarters and finished the game with 23 points.

Rotary Club to host pregame chili dinner

Volleyball team opens season with a win

Charlevoix rallied from behind to beat Cheboygan three games to two in the Rayders season opener Monday evening.

The visiting Chiefs won the first game 15-7, but Charlevoix turned the tables in game two to even the match with a 15-4 win.

But Charlevoix lost their momentum in game three and found themselves on the sad end of a 19-17 score.

The Rayders were in danger of losing the match in game four, but hung on for a 16-14 win.

Game five was show down time, winner take all and the Rayders came through with flying colors taking the game 15-6.

Top setters for the Rayders were Stacy Tilton and Liz Grunich. Top servers were Tammy Holm and Tilton. Leading the defense were Tilton and Grunich while Holm and Angelina Doan keyed the offense. Holm twisted her ankle in the final game and is expected to be out for the next two weeks.

Charlevoix also won the junior varsity match. After losing game one, 15-8, the Rayders got their program in order and took games two and three 15-11 and 15-3.

Top setters for the Rayders were Jacklyn Hogan and Trina Holm. Top servers were Gretchen Scott and Holm. Sara Ritt and Scott led the defense while Sharon Rowell and Carolyn Blanchard played well offensively.

Going up for a shot

Keith Carey extends himself above the defenders as he goes up for a shot against Petoskey Friday evening. In a game of scoring streaks first by one team and then the other Charlevoix ended up losing 75-65.

Area hospitals join in national disease prevention program

Charlevoix Area Hospital and Northern Michigan Hospital have joined hundreds of other not-for-profit hospitals across the country in a campaign to help the nation achieve its disease prevention and health promotion objectives by the year 2000.

Called Stay Healthy USA, the multi-year campaign will be conducted by Voluntary Hospitals of America (VHA), the nation's leading alliance of not-for-profit hospitals. The national campaign will encompass hundreds of hospital programs targeting specific disease prevention and health promotion objectives. The objectives, cited in the Healthy People 2000 report, were developed by the U.S. Department of Health and Human Services and consortium of more than 300 health care agencies and organizations, including VHA.

C. Thomas Smith, VHA's president and chief executive officer, said, "Stay Healthy USA is an important milestone in the evolution of VHA hospitals' growing role in disease prevention and health promotion. We believe that greater emphasis on preventive health care will help improve the nation's health and control health care costs."

Over the coming months and years, Charlevoix Area Hospital and Northern Michigan Hospital will conduct a variety of programs - many of them involving other community organizations - that are designed to achieve the specific disease prevention and health promotion objectives in Healthy People 2000.

Stay Healthy USA will provide an opportunity for our institution to collaborate with other VHA hospitals around the country in a focused effort to improve the overall health of our community and the nation as a whole according to Nancy Ellison and Dianne Murray, the Public Relations managers, respectively for Charlevoix Area Hospital and Northern Michigan Hospital.

With 660 hospitals and more than 200 affiliates, VHA is the nation's leading alliance of not-for-profit hospitals. In addition to the two area hospitals, the alliance includes some of the nation's most prestigious institutions. Under the banner of Stay Healthy USA, Charlevoix Area Hospital and Northern Michigan Hospital along with other VHA hospitals will conduct a wide range of health promotion programs tied to the 22 different priority areas of Healthy People 2000, such as physical activity and fitness, nutrition, and heart disease and stroke. These priority areas have three overall goals:

- Increase the span of health life for Americans
- Reduce health disparities among Americans
- Achieve access to preventive services for all Americans

As part of the Stay Healthy USA campaign, VHA will report annually to the Secretary of Health and Human Services on the disease prevention and health promotion programs conducted by Charlevoix Area Hospital and Northern Michigan Hospital and other hospitals in the VHA alliance.

Cardiac nurse Tina Foltz and K Mart Manager Jim Cupp hang a poster by the front door of K Mart, showing walkers where to walk and the total distance of path around store.

People walk in store to get their exercise

"The first thing I tell my patients is to go take a walk," said Tina Foltz, a cardiac rehabilitation nurse at Northern Michigan Hospital. Foltz has taken it upon herself to find indoor places for her cardiac patients to walk when the weather outside is too inclement. K-Mart in Charlevoix has agreed to participate in Foltz's plans to provide an indoor walking course for cardiac patients or anyone else who would like to walk for exercise. K-Mart has a sign posted by their front door which shows a path around the store and the total distance of the path.

Jim Cupp, manager of Charlevoix's K-Mart, is enthusiastic about having walkers in the store. As Foltz pointed out to him, there are probably already people walking for exercise in K-Mart, but nobody would realize it. Older people or cardiac patients might push a shopping cart in front of them so they have something to lean on while they walk.

BUSINESS

New restaurant to open at Edgewater Inn

By Laurie Lounsbury
The Edgewater Inn is a successful venture in many ways, but one problem has plagued the establishment since its inception. The hotel overlooking Round Lake has never been able to maintain a stable restaurant on its premises. This flaw may be cured with the arrival of "Pete and Mickey's", a new restaurant scheduled to open at the Edgewater by late March or early April.

"Pete and Mickey's" will be a new endeavor for established restaurateurs Pete Peterson and Mickey Bakst, owners of the Tapawingo restaurant in Ellsworth. "It won't be another Tapawingo," Bakst said of the new restaurant. "It will be light, casual, fun and very reasonable."

Bakst says that he and Peterson plan to serve breakfast, lunch, and dinner seven days a week. The menus will be seasonal, featuring lighter, more avant garde items in the summer, such as swordfish reuben sandwiches and sauteed whitefish club sandwiches, and heartier meals in the winter, like venison stew.

Jon Hisey, owner of the Edgewater, expressed hopes that Peterson and Bakst will end the long streak of turnovers in the restaurant. There have already been three restaurant owners in the Edgewater since the restaurant began in 1987. Hisey feels that Peterson and Bakst have an excellent track record and solid experience in the business. "You can't get a bad meal at Tapawingo," Hisey said. "The food, the service, the atmosphere, is always great."

Pete and Mickey's will have a brand new look and feel to it after extensive interior redecoration is done. It will feature bright colors and fun music, to create a casual, relaxed feeling.

"The biggest challenge in the restaurant business up here is in getting the right mix for tourists and locals," Bakst said. He and Peterson are striving to create the perfect blend of interesting food and a comfortable atmosphere.

Bakst and Peterson don't have a signed agreement with Hisey yet, but Bakst feels the deal is pretty well etched in stone. They're already paying rent on the space, and have begun renovations.

Peterson and Bakst will continue to own and operate Tapawingo, but plan on being in the new Charlevoix restaurant a considerable amount of time. Peterson will do all of the menu planning, and Bakst will be on hand to oversee the daily operations. "It's going to be a fun place that everyone can feel comfortable in," Bakst said.

Police work slow on New Year's Eve

By Laurie Lounsbury
On a night that is traditionally a busy evening for the city police, this past New Year's Eve was an exceptionally smooth night. The Charlevoix City Police didn't make a single arrest for drunk driving, although they did stop a few people to check them.

Chief Dennis Halverson said of the night, "It went extremely well, from a law abiding standpoint. The level of citizen awareness, and compliance, regarding drinking and driving laws is very high."

In Charlevoix County three arrests were made for drunk driving, two by the Sheriff's department and one by the East Jordan City Police.

Halverson's police force was prepared to start snipping driver's licenses after midnight if the need arose. Cutting the licenses of drivers with a blood alcohol level higher than .1 is the state law now, and the city police are required to follow the new state mandate.

Retiring area industrialists honored

The managers of firms in Emmet and Charlevoix counties were recognized with lifetime memberships for their past service and positive contributions by president Bill Poquette on behalf of the association.

Honored were:
Doug Bain, president, Petoskey Manufacturing. Bain retired in July after serving as president of the firm since 1973. He served as vice president of Petoskey Manufacturing from 1972-73.

He graduated from General Motors Institute in 1949. He started on the line for GM and worked his way to chief engineer of design, overseeing 800 people.

Elben Kaiser, plant manager, Medusa Cement, Charlevoix. Kaiser spent 41 years in the cement industry including 18 at Medusa Cement where he also held several positions at the Cleveland headquarters, including vice president of manufacturing, vice president of operations and director of manufacturing services.

He holds a degree in chemical engineering from University of Michigan and worked for Peerless Cement from 1950-72 where he moved from chief chemist to plant manager.

John Lachman, president, Hoskins Manufacturing, Charlevoix. He started at Hoskins in 1960 in alloy development. In 1962, he became Charlevoix plant manager. In 1977, he became Detroit plant manager. He became

Many gave to make it a holiday for all

(The following story was submitted to the Courier by the Charlevoix County Department of Social Services.)

As the Thanksgiving and Christmas Holidays approach, a certain amount of anxiety exists when you know that families on assistance may not have an enjoyable holiday unless the community helps.

Each year the Charlevoix County Department of Social Services receives a large number of holiday request forms from recipients on assistance who could use extra help through the Thanksgiving and Christmas season.

Many of us don't realize that just a little help during this period of time can mean so much. Vasco Zucchiatti, Volunteer Services Supervisor at the Charlevoix County Department of Social Services has delivered food and presents to recipients on assistance. He found that the help from the community made a big difference during the holidays. Zucchiatti said, "The Holidays should be a time when everyone, especially the children, should feel happy. When families receive food and or presents you can just see the appreciation and excitement. It's hard to be down and out over the holidays. Help came from many sources and in a wide variety of contributions."

The help that the recipients on assistance receive for the holidays would not be possible if it were not for the dedication and volunteers of the three main groups who have for years helped clients by giving food baskets and presents to Social Services recipients. The Care and Share program from East Jordan with community support and volunteers help residents from the East Jordan area. Charlevoix Community Food Pantry helped the residents in the Charlevoix area, and the Community Christmas project helped residents in the Boyne City area. Zucchiatti says "these three groups are the work horses of the holiday season. Without their help most of our clients would not have a very happy holiday."

Even though most recipients receive help through the three large groups, special attention is given through individuals, families, and small groups. Zucchiatti said it's really heart warming to have people call and want to help in any way they can so others may enjoy the holidays. Some of the reasons they give are "I used to be on assistance," "we want our children to help," "it feels good to be able to help," and some say that they just want to do something that feels good. It's really hectic trying to keep track of everyone and matching up donors with recipients, but after it's all over, it's a great feeling of satisfaction knowing that so many people feel good about helping others.

Hundreds of toys, presents, clothes and food items were donated, some delivered by volunteers, DSS workers, or by the donors themselves. One donor provided $500 cash to pay for bills that social services could not help with, but is vital for the family.

The Charlevoix County Department of Social Services would like to thank the donors, volunteers and the many individuals and families that gave so much for those who have so little.

Home tour raises $5,072 for hospital renovation

A gift of $5,072 representing the proceeds from the Kappa Sigma annual Charlevoix Home Tour was presented to Charlevoix Area Hospital recently by Marilyn Wilmut and Rebecca Haney, co-chairmen of the event.

The contribution will be applied toward the furnishing of the planned obstetrical unit at the hospital. The hospital has been raising funds to support the new obstetrical unit and surgical facility over the past summer and fall. Final plans are being drawn for the building program.

Richard Krueger, Charlevoix Area Hospital administrator said, "We are very grateful to all the members of Kappa Sigma, to the community members who worked at the event, and those who attended, for making this a most successful home tour. We know that it takes an extraordinary amount of effort to plan and organize this event. And, we thank the homeowners who so generously allow this public viewing of their homes. We very much appreciate being the beneficiary of Kappa Sigma's generosity."

Co-chairmen of the 1992 home tour Rebecca Haney and Denise Pointner are already at work on next summer's tour. They are currently selecting homes to be included in the tour.

Transformer problem leaves city in the dark

A transformer problem at the Consumer's Power Ferry Avenue substation left the entire city of Charlevoix in temporarily in the dark Tuesday evening.

The transformer went off line shortly before 1:30 p.m. As of press time, the electricity was still out and city officials expected it to be at least mid-night before power could be restored. In order to restore power, Consumer's Power Company had to bring in a portable transformer from down-state.

The substation which broke down is in the process of being replaced. A new substation with a larger capacity is being constructed at the corner of M-66 and Stover Roads.

All of the city's power enters at the substation and then is distributed through various circuits throughout the community. Problems with individual circuits occasionally occur, but it is much less common to have the whole system down.

City officials were in an emergency meeting Tuesday afternoon and planned to open the city and township halls to people whose homes were without heat.

Required emergency training can take hundreds of hours

By L. Scott Swanson

When firemen come to your home or business to fight a fire, do they know what they're doing?

When you have a medical emergency and call an ambulance, are the ambulance attendants going to be people who know enough to take care of you properly until they get you to the hospital?

Training requirements for emergency response personnel was one issue touched upon during the recent controversy involving the city fire department. Although not necessarily central to what was being discussed, questions which came to mind during city council discussions were: Just how much training are local firemen required to have? And how much training do they have? And since, at least in Charlevoix, the fire and ambulance departments tend to be intermixed in many ways, what are the training requirements for ambulance attendants?

Following are the answers to those questions.

According to state law, volunteer firemen are required to complete a 132-hour Firefighter 1 training course within a two-year period. According to Barry Wood, president of the Charlevoix Volunteer Firefighters, the course is normally broken down into two 66-hour units.

The course is offered on an irregular basis. Normally, one department won't have enough new firefighters to justify having a course taught for just its own firefighters. Most courses will have students from six or seven different northern Michigan fire departments.

In a typical course, firefighters would attend class one night a week for four hours and on a couple of occasions an all-day Saturday class to cover certain subjects. Often times the course will rotate locations from week to week through the different hometowns of the firefighters taking the course.

Topics covered in the Firefighter 1 course include: basic firefighting skills; use of ladders, hoses and other equipment; ventilating buildings; varying water patterns which can be used to fight fires; entering buildings; and some basic first aid.

With the exception of three firefighters who have been on the department for several years, all of the Charlevoix City Fire Department volunteers have completed the Firefighter 1 course.

State law requires career firefighters to complete not only a Firefighter 1 course, but also a Firefighter 2 course within a two-year period. The Firefighter 2 course requires an additional 132

Mandated training continues to grow

Incident command (I.C.) training is one example of new and added training being required for northern Michigan firefighters.

"We're doing more training up your way than we ever have," said Bill Dangler, an I.C. course instructor.

Dangler is chief of the Ypsilanti Township Fire Department. He also teaches firefighting courses throughout the state.

I.C. is simply a system of command at a fire scene which insures that everybody has an assignment and that everybody is reporting to somebody and can be accounted for.

"It's just a way of keeping track of everybody on the fire ground," Dangler explained. He noted that "As simple as it seems, fire departments often have not used it."

Dangler said that fire departments that don't use a formalized

County board pushed to act on Shaw Road

Some people want a walkway while others want woods

By Laurie Lounsbury

If it ain't broke, don't fix it. The members of Sequanota Club, a private association on Lake Charlevoix, did not heed that old adage.

Sequanota Club petitioned the Charlevoix County Road Commission to relinquish the county's rights to the Shaw Road right of way, which runs from the intersection of Shaw Road and Sequanota Road to Lake Charlevoix. The Shaw Road right of way extends along the northern boundary of Sequanota Club, and currently exists as a heavily wooded, unused piece of property. Sequanota Club members had some concerns about future development in the area if the county ever cleared the right of way and put a road down to the lake. This concern prompted the club to petition the county to give up the county's rights to the undeveloped right of way.

When the petition became public knowledge, it stirred the interest of many residents in the Shaw Road and Sequanota Road area. Those citizens have now petitioned the county to clear the wooded property and make a public walkway to Lake Charlevoix - which is what Sequanota Club had hoped to prevent when they filed their original petition.

Commissioner Jim Behling was unfamiliar with the right of way, but did say that the county had no plans to develop a roadway or a walkway on the property. Commissioner Don Smith advised the petitioning citizens to hire a lawyer to represent their interests if they wished to pursue having the right of way cleared and made into a walkway.

Commissioners don't intend to take any action on either of the petitions at this juncture, although Behling did say at an earlier meeting that the county is always reluctant to give up any rights to property they currently own.

Shaw Road presently comes to a dead end in the woods, just past the intersection of Shaw and Sequanota Rds. If local citizens are successful with their petition to the county, a walkway would extend Shaw Rd. past the dead end and down to Lake Charlevoix. (Photo by Laurie Lounsbury)

OPINIONS

EDITH

by Edith Gilbert

It takes courage to write a novel, and I have yet to face this fearful challenge. It's tough enough to write a "how-to" book! In the literary scheme of things, writing a "how-to" book is an accomplishment that is rated pretty low on the totem pole. (Never mind the fact that one has been published and has had the pleasure of autographing copies in Waldenbooks and Doubledays from coast to coast, one is still regarded with critical skepticism.)

I was thrilled when I was first asked to write "The Complete Wedding Planner." But later I wondered "How can I hold the reader's attention for 270 pages? Making lists of 'when to do this and who should do that' is definitely boring."

That's when one realized there's more to writing this "how-to" stuff than meets the eye. One has to face the blank page and make some heavy decisions. The first thing one needs to do is find one's voice. This means will the book be written by the author, or written in the third person or from the omniscient point of view? Fortunately, I decided to have a heart-to-heart talk directly with the reader, which approach has greatly helped the book's popularity. Many wedding books are written either by a team of writers, who merely update old material and have little practical experience in handling weddings, or by a ghost writer for a celebrity. Both approaches ring hollow.

Next I wondered what fresh approach could be used that would be helpful to today's couples? For starters, there's the new trend and early involvement of the prospective groom in the decision making process. No longer is he told just to show up! Often, too, we have to consider the careers and life-style of the engaged couple rather than that of their parents. There were many questions regarding how to handle blended families, that is either divorced parents or second marriages. These situations lead to questions of who walks the bride down the aisle, who sits where, who stands in the receiving line, and whose picture is taken with whom? And where do children fit into the scheme of things?

Other questions arose as new opportunities are offered us. To video or not to video? What about marriage counseling? What about the destination wedding which is gaining in popularity? (A destination wedding is when the entire wedding party travels to a vacation area where the wedding/honeymoon takes place.)

Surely there are many more options for couples who are planning a wedding than ever before! The time of day and place for the reception is, of course, still dictated by the budget. Now, however, the wedding is often held in the city where the couple live and work, or in a vacation spot, or in the community of either of the couple's parents.

We find that people today are more innovative and original in their approach to modern weddings. Still this can result in a balancing act. In some cases, couples need encouragement and approval to be creative. In other cases, they need to be reminded that a wedding is a family affair, and that people's feelings need to be considered.

Any kind of writing is a lonely discipline and those of us who do it often wonder why we do it. It certainly isn't for the pay. And often there is little feedback. You have no idea how frequently my phone rings and an unfamiliar voice says, "I am getting married and would you answer a question?" This I gladly do. Many times I add, "Please let me know how it all turned out," but they never do let me know. That's why I was so delighted to receive a note from Jane Straus in Cincinnati, who writes, "Anne went to our local library to get a book on wedding etiquette, as her son, Stevie, will be married in March in Grosse Point, Mich. She found that your 'Complete Wedding Planner' was by far the best!"

On the same day my niece, Maryellen, called from San Jose and reported that the paperback, revised edition by Warner Books was prominently displayed at the local bookstore. That's the kind of thing that makes my day. But by far, the most exciting experience was on my trip to Hong Kong a few years ago, when I passed an English Language Bookstore. On an impulse I decided to go in and ask if they had any etiquette books, and the answer was "Yes." There on the shelf was my wedding book! I do believe the owner was even more excited than I was when I autographed her copies.

It's a pity we don't have a bookstore in Charlevoix anymore, but I'm pleased that the Central Drug Store carries the paperback edition and the Shop of the Gulls carries the hardcover edition. And of course, the library also has a copy, which I am told is in frequent demand.

This is the time of year couples announce their engagements and when many summer weddings are being planned. It's the perfect time to recommend a book such as "The Complete Wedding Planner." Every page is full of options for couples who are planning to say "I do" either at a small private wedding or at a most formal and elegant affair.

Speaking of books and writing, anyone who has ever struggled to compose even a persuasive letter, can relate to a quote by John Steinbeck, author of "The Grapes of Wrath," who said, "I am sure of one thing — it isn't the great book I had hoped it would be. It's just a run-of-the-mill book. And the awful thing is that it is absolutely the best I can do."

...emergency training is a long, involved process

hours of training.

Firefighter 2 training is also broken into segments. It covers more advanced firefighting techniques including the use of airpicks, ropes and other equipment. It also discusses different types of building construction and materials and how that affects the spread of a fire. Different types of fires such as grass fires, barn fires, silo fires and fires involving toxic materials are discussed. The course also discusses hazardous materials and toxic gases which can be caused by fires.

"Your spare time gets to be takin' up pretty fast."

Barry Wood, President Charlevoix Volunteer Firefighters.

"There's a real variety in it," Wood said.

Three members of the Charlevoix City Fire Department are in the process of completing Firefighter 2 training.

Additional courses are available for fire department officers. On top of the 264 hours for Firefighter 1 and 2 training, a fire department lieutenant will have an additional 80 hours of training, a captain 152 hours of training and a chief 212 hours. There is also a 240 hour fire safety inspector course which involves four weeks of training and two weeks of practice inspection.

Kirtland Community College in Roscommon is a regional training center for the Michigan Firefighters Training Council. It offers several specialized training courses on subjects such as: Tactical Operations for Company Officers (two courses, commonly referred to as TOCO 1 and TOCO 2); Records and Reports; Water Supply; Mutual Aid Tanker Shuttle; and Protective Breathing Equipment.

Wood said there's a lot of training available. The challenge for the firefighters is finding the time to take the courses.

"Your spare time gets to be takin' up pretty fast," he said.

In Charlevoix, the fire department and ambulance are often intertwined. Several firefighters are also ambulance attendants. Bob Roloff, who teaches a first responder course for ambulance attendants in Charlevoix, is one of the city's career firefighters.

Training for ambulance personnel breaks down into four levels: medical first responders; EMTs (Emergency Medical Technicians); EMT specialists; and paramedics.

Personnel available to the Charlevoix ambulance include: 10 first responders (that includes two city police officers); seven EMTs; two EMT specialists; and one paramedic.

First responders have approximately 50 hours of medical training. EMTs have an additional 120 hours of training. (Although first responder training is not a required prerequisite for EMT training, it helps and most EMTs have it.) EMT specialists have 85 hours of training beyond the EMT training. Paramedics have a total of at least 350 hours of training.

First responders can do basic first aid, including cardio pulmonary resuscitation (CPR). They can also be trained (and all Charlevoix first responders are) to use a defibrillator.

EMTs are capable of doing advanced first aid including applying splints and bandages. EMT specialists, in addition to doing advanced first aid, can start I.V.s and insert

"As far as the state goes, we're the only licensed basic ambulance service that does what we do."

Bob Roloff, Charlevoix Ambulance Department.

airways. Paramedics can administer drugs and do cardiac monitoring.

Roloff said that a basic EMT can do just about everything that needs to be done in an ambulance. Charlevoix has an EMT in the am-balance on all runs. In addition, there will be at least a first responder and one other person.

Roloff teaches the first responder course in Charlevoix. EMT courses are taught in East Jordan and Petoskey. He said the classes take a long time, normally two nights a week for four months.

Although several people on the ambulance crew are also on the fire department, by design some of them are also not on the fire department. That way there are people available for ambulance duty even where there is a fire. Four members of the ambulance crew are women. There are no women on the city fire department.

Although he chooses his words carefully to avoid sounding boastful, it is obvious that Roloff is proud of the abilities and professionalism of Charlevoix's ambulance service. As an example, he noted that through a special field study program coordinated with the medical control board of Charlevoix Area Hospital and the Michigan Department of Public Health in Lansing, the Charlevoix ambulance service can do some things for certain emergencies such as life threatening allergic reactions which other ambulance services can't do at this time.

"As far as the state goes, we're the only licensed basic ambulance service that does what we do," he said.

...training requirements grow

I.C. structure do what he calls "free-lancing." Volunteer firemen don't all arrive at the fire scene at the same time. First a few arrive and they begin doing something. And then another one pulls up and he looks around and finds something that needs to be done and starts in on that. And the first thing you know, nobody knows exactly where everybody is or exactly what they're doing.

Dangler said the formalized I.C. structure was first developed by California fire departments approximately 10 years ago as a way of dealing with confusion at large fires where several fire departments were involved. Currently there are different versions of I.C., but firefighting organizations are trying to come up with a single universal system.

Federal law now requires that fire departments use an I.C. system at fires with hazardous materials.

Although it's recommended that all members of fire departments take the I.C. course, due to budgetary constraints departments are phasing in the program. First the officers will take the I.C. course and later other members of the department will take it.

Dangler said he realizes the difficulty that new training requirements can cause for fire departments.

"There's so much training required now that people are saying, 'I just don't have time for it.' But how can you have them on the fire ground without fire training?" he said.

Debate team advances to state

Barnadyn and Bickersteth qualify for individual competition

Charlevoix High School debaters took top honors and qualified one senior and one junior for John S. Knight Scholarship recognition at the Class C-D District Debate competition in Grand Rapids Saturday (Jan. 11) in their drive to return to the state championships.

With a 4-2 win-loss record in the all day competition and a total of 316 points, Charlevoix's varsity debate team won the highest honors the high school team has garnered in several years, according to Coach Connie Ford.

The 1992 national debate topic is the complex social issue of how to solve the problem of "homelessness."

Jennifer Barnadyn, with 79 personal points, the only senior on the team, qualified for the John S. Knight scholarship debate competition, backed by the Detroit Free Press, scheduled for late February. The John S. Knight competition can offer top debaters more than $2,500 in renewable scholarship funds for college.

Junior Megan Bickersteth, who took top speaker honors (82 points) overall also qualified and will compete in the 1993 John S. Knight debate. Two other debaters placed high in speaker points: Nancy Dammann (80 points) came in third, and Amber Phillips, with 75 points, placed 11th.

Other high schools qualifying for the state finals out of the district competition were Grand Rapids Southern Christian, second place, with 301 points; Elk Rapids, third, with 300 points; and Grand Rapids City High School, fourth, with 293 points.

"It was a tough competition for everyone," commented Ford.

Ford added that while Charlevoix's debate team has qualified for the state championships every year for the past decade, this unusually young team has an excellent chance to score very high in the finals. The three-day event will take place Jan. 30 - Feb. 1 in Novi.

School planning group to meet

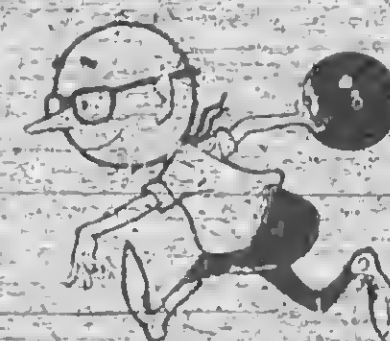

The next meeting of the Charlevoix Public Schools Strategic Planning Committee will begin at 8 p.m. Monday, Jan. 20 at the high school.

The group will discuss the definition of outcome based education and what is meant by school restructuring. High school principal Dave Smith will coordinate the presentation on outcome based education. Jane Bailey will discuss school restructuring.

Interested community members are welcome to attend and participate.

Snowmen have had a tough winter this year. The weather hasn't stayed cold for long stretches. Many a snowman has melted away into a puddle. This fellow from East Park had a smile on his face one day, but the next day his smile had fallen to his ankles. It was a sad sight.

Conservancy adds staff member

The Little Traverse Conservancy has announced the arrival of a new staff Land Protection Specialist, Mark Versch.

Versch comes to the Conservancy from Council Bluffs, Iowa where he has had extensive experience as Executive Director of both the Pottawattamie and Ringold County Conservation Boards. He has also worked as a Natural Resources Planner for the Papio Natural Resources District in Omaha, Nebraska. His education includes an undergraduate degree in Natural Resource Management from the University of Nebraska and a Master's Degree in Forestry and Water Resources from Iowa State University.

Versch will be involved in land protection efforts on Beaver Island and in the Walloon Lake Watershed. He will be working with individual property owners, Lake associations, and other protection-oriented groups to promote the use of scenic easements and gifts of lands to protect natural and scenic lands in these sensitive areas. Of particular importance will be wetlands, waterfront properties, farmlands, and undeveloped and scenic road corridors.

Versch also feels strongly about developing the land stewardship program. He has had much experience working with service and sporting organizations. Because his past public service has been the governmental organizations, Versch is interested in working within the private sector where he sees more potential for new approaches to land protection and preservation. Versch will be joining Doug Robinson, the current Land Protection specialist. The Conservancy will soon be hiring another land protection specialist.

BEACONS

by Rev. Philip G. Schirbaum

Last November, I had the opportunity to be in Atlanta, Georgia and to visit the Martin Luther King Jr. Center for Nonviolent Social Change. The center is incorporated into a large urban complex of building and properties that is managed by the National Park Service. As I toured this national treasure, which includes the Ebenezer Baptist Church where Martin Luther King Jr. served with his father who was Sr. minister, I was impressed once again with the character and stature of this man who moved our nation closer to the Christian ideal of "liberty and justice for all."

On Monday, January 20, many will observe Dr. King's birthday, a national holiday. For some it will go by practically unnoticed, except for the fact that there will be no mail delivery that day. All of us would do well if we took some time to reflect on the heritage which Dr. King left us. For he was a man of great courage whose Christian life and actions serve as a model not only for black Americans, but for all people.

When in the King Center bookstore, I purchased a new book, "The Works of Martin Luther King Jr.", a collection of quotations from King's best sermons and speeches. The first entry reads: "An individual has not started living until he can rise above the narrow confines of his individualistic concerns to the broader concerns of all humanity." That was the foundation of Dr. King's life and work, and is an echo of Jesus' words, "I came not to be served, but to serve."

As we observe the national holiday honoring Martin Luther King Jr., I pray it will be a time of dedicating ourselves to the teachings and actions of Jesus which Dr. King exemplified so well. And, I hope, our commitments to the Christian way of life will be as deep and abiding as his.

(Rev. Philip Schirbaum is pastor of the First Congregational Church. Beacons of Blessings is provided to the Courier by Schirbaum and other members of the Charlevoix Ministerial Association.)

Volleyball team playing well

Strong tournament performance follows two match wins

In some ways, the Charlevoix varsity volleyball team brings to mind the Charlevoix softball team. Many of the same girls play on both teams and like softball team, the volleyball team has been quietly improving in recent years until it is now one of the better high school teams in the area.

Charlevoix has opened the season at 2-0 in dual play and had the best finish of any area team in the 10-team Petoskey Volleyball Invitational Saturday.

After opening the season with a win over Cheboygan, Charlevoix hosted East Jordan last Wednesday and simply overpowered the Red Devils 15-1, 15-5 and 15-9.

The Rayders set the tone for the match in the first game. Liz Grunch served first for Charlevoix and sent nine cannon shots hissing over the net. The few serves that were returned were bumped, set and mopped up by the other Rayders. By the time Grunch was finished serving, Charlevoix was up 9-0 and any suspense that may have been present entering the game was pretty much out the window.

Top servers for the match were Liz Grunch and Mary Jane Grunch. Top setters were Stacy Tilton and Liz Grunch. Top defensive players were Angelina Doan and Tilton. Top offensive players were Mary Jane Grunch and Melissa Eaton.

Charlevoix also won the junior varsity match handily 15-3, 15-13. Top setters for the Rayders were Trina Holm and Julie Rowbotham. Leading the defense was Carolyn Blanchard while Sarah Ritt led the team's offense.

In the Petoskey tournament, Charlevoix placed fourth behind Cedarville, Kalkaska and Sault Ste. Marie. Tilton was named to the All-Tournament team.

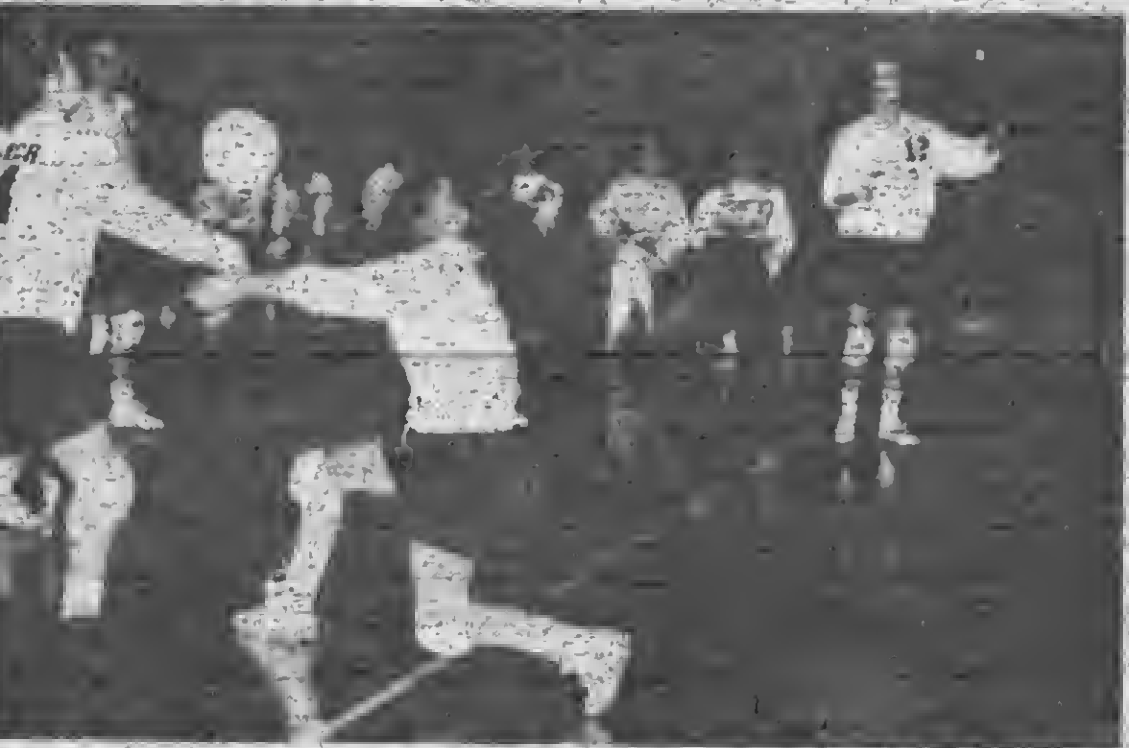

In preliminary play the Rayders went 5-3. In the opening match they beat Petoskey 15-11, 15-6; split with Grayling 15-8, 11-15; beat Harbor Light 15-4, 16-14; and lost to Sault Ste. Marie 15-6, 15-10.

In the semi-finals Charlevoix lost to Kalkaska 15-4, 15-5. In the consolation finals, the Rayders lost again to Sault Ste. Marie 15-4, 18-16.

Charlevoix's next game is at Traverse City St. Francis Jan. 15.

Mary Jane Grunch winds up to hammer the ball over the net against East Jordan last week.

Stacey Tilton pops the ball up for her teammates in the East Jordan match. This past Saturday, Tilton was named to the All-Tournament team in the Petoskey Invitational.

Basketball team rebounding from early season defeats

St. Ignace beaten 57-50

Charlevoix's basketball team is doing a Detroit Pistons imitation. After starting the season slowly with an 0-4 record, the Rayders have won their last two games. After beating Harbor Springs Jan. 7 for their first win of the season, the Rayders traveled to St. Ignace Saturday night and beat the Saints 57-50.

As with other games this season, the game against St. Ignace went in streaks. Fortunately for the Rayders, the final hot streak was theirs as they outscored the Saints 19-9 in the fourth quarter. The other three quarters were close. Charlevoix led 14-13 after the first quarter, but St. Ignace rallied at the end of the second quarter and the first half closed at 28-28. St. Ignace outscored Charlevoix 13-10 in the third quarter to take a 41-38 lead into the fourth and deciding quarter.

In the final quarter, scoring was slow until the final three minutes of the game when Rayder center Brad DeGrow and guard Luke LaBlance keyed a ferocious Rayder rally. The Rayders scored 17 points in the closing minutes of the game with DeGrow getting eight of them.

Two of Charlevoix's top players, Mike Dobulis and Wayne Joy, saw limited action in the game due to injuries.

LaBlance led the Rayders in scoring with 19 points. He also had seven rebounds, five assists and three steals. DeGrow finished with 18 points and 13 rebounds. Brian Coolman had 10 rebounds. Don Jess led the team in assists with six while Keith Carey had three steals.

This Friday evening Charlevoix will host league foe East Jordan.

Local skiers compete in CUSSA races

Two Charlevoix skiers were among the top finishers at the past weekend's CUSSA ski races at Sugar Loaf resort.

In Saturday's races, Carolyn Campbell placed sixth in the first slalom race and third in a second slalom race. Katherine Campbell placed fourth in the second race.

In Sunday's giant slalom races, Katherine Campbell placed fifth in the first race and second in the second race.

CUSSA is the acronym of the Central Division of the United States Ski Association. The race attracts some of the best skiers from the Midwest. Katherine and Carolyn Campbell skied for the Bahnhof Ski Team.

Wrestling team takes third in downstate tournament

Browe and Pajtas dominate their weight classes

Behind first place finishes by Dan Browe, Jason Pajtas and Shawn Young the Charlevoix wrestling team placed third in the Wyoming Rogers Invitational tournament Saturday. Charlevoix with 122 team points finished just behind Caledonia which had 125 points. Hastings won the tournament with 133.5 points.

Browe and Pajtas dominated their weight classes and both ran their season records to 11-0.

Browe, a heavyweight, pinned all three of his opponents Saturday. In the finals, he pinned his opponent from Caledonia in 3:20. Earlier, in the semifinals he recorded the meet's quickest pin of the day, winning in just 15 seconds.

Pajtas has not let an opponent score a point yet this season. In Saturday's final match, he pinned a Wyoming Rogers wrestler to take the 152-pound title.

Young, who is just back with the team after recovering from a broken wrist, won the 125-pound division with a 4-2 decision in the finals.

Jason VanLoo and Chris McCallum took second place finishes in the 119 and 135 pound weight classes. Both are 10-2 on the season.

Keith Parish began the tournament unseeded in the 189-pound weight bracket, but placed third. He avenged himself, beating two wrestlers who had pinned him last season.

David Wilks wrestling at 112 and Robert Gillum wrestling at 130 also won matches for the Rayders.

The Rayders' next match will be Thursday, Jan. 16 with Mancelona and Grayling at Grayling.

Amy Whaley looks to catch the opposition napping as she gently tips the ball over the net.

Ski team looks to improve

Several falls cost team opportunity to win

Despite getting some good individual performances the Charlevoix ski team has been plagued by falls which have kept the team from placing higher in early season meets.

"It's early in the year and we're making some mistakes that we're going to have to stop making," said ski team coach Eric Lundengen.

In a seven-team meet Jan. 6 at Nub's Nob both the boys' and girls' teams placed fourth. Traverse City won both races.

Individual places for the Rayders in the slalom and giant slalom were:

Girls:

Sailmaking shop reflects sailing history

(Editor's note: The accompanying story is one in a series of stories about area manufacturers being written for the Courier by Ralph McRae. McRae is a former mayor and city council member and currently is a member of the Charlevoix Industrial Development Committee.)

By Ralph McRae

This is an account about sails, those pieces of cloth attached to masts and yard arms to catch the wind and move boats through the water.

The earliest accounts of ships date back more than a thousand years ago. Before that, for several centuries, ships called galleys were rowed by impressed criminals. A thousand or so years ago a mast and one square sail were added to the galleys to lighten the burden of the rowers. The combination of rowers and sails began to diminish in the thirteenth century and the rowers had pretty much disappeared by the fifteenth century.

Once sailing vessels came into wide use, they were rapidly developed by the maritime countries into floating battle stations with three or four masts and with 20 or more pieces of canvas hanging from the cross arms.

Armed sailing ships were first called galleons and then frigates. Frigates played an important role in allowing the American Colonies to win the Revolutionary War.

Sailing vessels allowed trade between nations to mushroom. Dutch, English and Spanish ships made months-long journeys to the Far East, bringing back to Europe spices, tea and silk. New lands were discovered. Columbus came to the Americas, Magellan traveled by sea around the world.

For centuries, rudders were on the side of the boats. The steering wheel was not invented until 1710.

After the revolution, the 13 colonies got into building fast and sharp sailing vessels. Called clipper ships, they replaced the slower packet ships.

Clipper ships carried enormous high masts and several thousands of square feet of canvas. These ships could average nine or ten miles an hour rather than five or six miles an hour. The clippers began to make record times between Boston and Liverpool - some trips as quick as 20 days. The average journey to England was 25 days, but back to Boston it took 40 days.

Later, these same ships brought thousands of immigrants to Ellis Island. Crowded into the ships' storage compartments, ten percent of the immigrants perished during the trips.

Yankee clipper ships dominated commercial shipping, going to all the world ports such as Hong Kong and Calcutta. These same ships helped in the development of the American West. They were especially busy taking gold prospectors to San Francisco. They would depart from the East Coast and travel around Cape Horn and arrive in California 120 days after leaving port.

About the time some sailing vessels were going to California, others were coming to Charlevoix. For a few years, they tied up to a 900-foot dock near the entrance to the channel. Later they were towed by small tugs into and out of Round Lake.

In the 1860s steam powered boats began to take over. Again the various navies of the world became the prime developers of better sea transportation.

For a number of years steam power was combined with sails. Steam was used during calm penods on long voyages. Finally, steam alone propelled the commercial boats. But some sailing vessels came into Charlevoix as late as 1910. The sailing boats had been very useful in moving lumber products made in Boyne City, East Jordan and Charlevoix.

This historical account of commercial sailing brings us to 1992 and pleases sailing in Charlevoix. It also brings us to the fabrication of sails which is done by the Gleason Spinnaker Company at 213 Ferry Avenue.

Founded in 1978 by the sole owner, Gary Gleason, this company stays busy throughout the year making sails of various shapes and sizes.

Now using dacron and nylon rather than canvas, six employees use outlines on an open floor of 5,000 square feet to make large sails. Gleason works with boat owners to determine sail designs and colors. Sails are built in segments, taped together and ultimately sewn. Material for the sails generally comes from New England in the United States or from Germany or Spain. As many as 15 colors are available.

Seven percent of the sails are for new boats, 90 percent of the sails are replacements and the remaining three percent are sails being repaired.

Eighty percent of Gleason's business is from out of state. The company becomes especially busy after violent storms strike coastal states. Some sails are insured against hurricane damage.

It normally takes between two and six weeks to complete a sail, depending on its size. The average cost is between $1,000 and $1,500.

On larger boats, sails can last for perhaps 20 years. On small boats, spinnaker sails often need to be replaced after three to five years.

Currently all of the sail-making employees are women. It takes a couple of years of experience to become fully qualified sail makers.

The company gives extra compensation for the cost of providing child care.

Business is generated by referrals, boat publications and sales representation. Fax machines now play an important part in sales transactions. On one occasion, Gleason completed a sale by faxing information back and forth to a driver who had a fax machine in his car.

Most of Gleason's business is making the smaller spinnaker sails for racing ketches. The company has a good location on Ferry Avenue where it is within sight of hundreds of sail boats.

In the last year the company has also become involved in the wholesale distribution of marine hardware and boating ropes. The equipment is being sold in approximately 400 retail outlets. Aside from the marine equipment, the company has no current plans to expand. Its annual sales now are close to $1 million.

This looks interesting

No it's not a miniature baseball bat with special handles on the end for both right and left-handed hitters. It's a roller and it's used for cooking. Local chef Dave Phillips explained some of the finer points of cooking to cooperative nursery school students during a recent visit. Inspecting the roller results is Michael Wojan.

There's not much a preschooler likes better than to help in the kitchen. Local chef Dave Phillips found himself with virtually all the help he could handle during a recent demonstration at the Charlevoix Cooperative Nursery School.

The City Planning Commission is hereby designated as the commission specified in Section 12, Act 285 of Public Acts of 1931, as amended and shall be granted all the power to perform all the duties and otherwise perform as provided in the statute.

The City Planning Commission shall consist of nine (9) members, appointed by the Mayor and subject to Council approval, who represent different professions or occupations within the City. The terms of each member shall be three (3) years, except that three (3) members of the first commission shall be appointed for one (1) year, three (3) for a term of two (2) years, and three (3) for a term of three (3) years. All members shall hold office until their successors are appointed.

3) That Section 5.247 Planning Commission Duties, of the City's Zoning Ordinance (Chapter 51 of the City Code) be deleted in its entirety [Sections 5.247(1) and 5.247(2)(a-g)] and the following language added so that the section now reads as follows:

5.247-Planning Commission Duties.

The Planning Commission shall prepare a generalized master plan for the City as well as the service area of the City's various municipal utility services, including areas within surrounding municipal jurisdictions, which have an impact on the development and character of the City and use of City facilities.

The process of master plan preparation shall include consultation with various City and County Boards and departments, the Planning Commissions of other municipal jurisdictions, the Charlevoix School District, Fire Departments, as well as appropriate public input through one (1) or more public hearings. The master plan shall be comprehensive in its content addressing all relevant issues impacting community development and public expenditures. Upon completion of the preparation of said master plan, the Planning Commission shall forward the plan to the City Council for its adoption.

Following adoption of the generalized master plan by the City Council, the Planning Commission shall from time to time review and prepare updates to the plan in the same manner as followed in the preparation of the original plan and shall forward such amendments to the City Council for its consideration and adoption.

Following this procedure the Planning Commission and the City Council shall establish a planning process which is responsive to the changing conditions and needs of the community and is able to accommodate in a flexible format new and differing ideas from those which may be specifically expressed in the plan at the time of its initial adoption.

4) That Section 5.248 Amendments, be added to the City's Zoning Ordinance (Chapter 51 of the City Code) to read as follows:

5.248. Amendments.

(1) When a proposed amendment, supplement, modification, or change is initiated by a petition of any party with a legal interest in the property to be affected, it must be accompanied by a fee. The amount of the fee shall be established from time to time by resolution of the City Council, and it is to be used to defray the expense of publishing the required notices and other related expenditures.

(2) All amendments, supplements, modifications and changes not arising in the Planning Commission must be referred thereto for a written report and recommendation prior to any action thereon by the City Council.

(3) The Planning Commission shall at one or more of its meetings, study and evaluate the proposed amendments, supplement, modification or change and shall conduct a public hearing in accord with Section 4 (1) of P.A. 207 of 1921, as amended. The Planning Commission shall then submit its written report to the City Council of its recommendations and findings, either for or against the proposed change.

(4) Once the City Council has received and accepted the Planning Commission's report on the proposed amendment, supplement, modification or change, it shall hold a hearing and give proper notice thereof as prescribed by P.A. 207 of 1921, as amended. This shall include notification of all property owners of property located within three hundred (300) feet of the premises in question.

(5) Whenever the City Council shall receive a protest against a proposed amendment, signed by the requisite number of land owners as set forth in P.A. 207 of 1921, as amended, then such amendment, supplement, modification or change shall not be passed except by three-quarter (3/4) vote of the City Council.

Escapee had not worked in town

By L. Scott Swanson

Yes. The prisoner who escaped and is a suspect in the murder of two Levering men and the armed robbery of an Ironton woman was from Camp Pellston, a minimum security prison camp which provides work crews to weed peunias, shovel sidewalks and do other work for the city of Charlevoix.

Not Raymond W. Thacker, the escapee who was captured in Manistee and is now awaiting trial in Emmet County, had never been assigned to a Charlevoix work crew.

Thacker had been at Camp Pellston for less than a month, not long enough to even be considered for a position on one of the camp crews which work in Charlevoix and other northern Michigan communities.

"We usually make them wait at least 30 to 60 days before we even consider them for that crew," explained Lt. Maynard Wieralla of Camp Pellston.

Even after 30 to 60 days, prisoners are not automatically assigned to one of the community work crews. The community work crews are considered to be more desirable than other crews at the camp. In order to be assigned to a community crew, prisoners have to apply and be judged a suitable risk.

At the time of his escape, Thacker was on a work crew, but it was a crew which worked at a garage near the camp, not in a community.

Prisoners have to work their way up to one of the community crews. "They're people we know," Wieralla said of the prisoners assigned

Will everybody eat a box and a-half of candy?

By Laurie Lounsbury

Figuring projected sales of 4,680 boxes of candy, that comes to one and a half boxes of candy for every person in Charlevoix.

All over town, hundreds of elementary school children will be selling candy this week for the PTA/Elementary School fundraiser. Any child who wishes to participate in the fundraiser will be given 18 candy bars to sell.

The school sent home permission slips for parents to sign, allowing their child to sell candy. The permission slips are a standard form provided by the candy company, World's Finest Candy. The slip informs parents that they will be held responsible for all candy and money. The wording is vague enough so that some parents may have gotten the impression that the parent will have to make sure all of their child's candy is sold, or they will have to buy it themselves. This is not the case, and children can return any candy they do not sell.

There are some incentives to prompt the children to sell the candy. The class that sells the most candy will win an ice cream party. Teachers of the winning class will also receive a gift from the World's Finest Candy company.

The candy sale fundraiser began Tuesday, Jan. 14 and will continue for another week. Tuesday afternoon the students had a brief assembly during school to prepare them for candy sales. Sales representative Larry Gronski from the World's Finest Candy Company discussed safety with the children, and gave the children lessons on

"I end up buying it myself. I get tired of asking all my friends to buy candy from my kids, and I'm tired of buying candy from their kids."

An elementary school student's mother

how to sell candy. "It's guaranteed to melt in your mouth," was one of the lines the sales rep taught the children to use in their sales efforts.

World's Finest Candy products are familiar to many people in town. For 11 years, the third grade class has been selling this product to raise funds for their Beaver Island trip. This year, the school board has allocated funds to pay for the Beaver Island trip.

But the candy sale is continuing. This year the entire K-5 student body will sell the candy for the school's general activity fund.

"It's the most profitable fundraiser we've done," Vape Smith, K-5 principal said of candy sales. The school will make a dollar on every candy bar sold, for a projected total of approximately $4,680.

The sale of candy by children in order to raise funds has been a source of concern for the Board of Education for several years. Doris Pearl, a member of the Board of Education, said that while the sales of candy is not prohibited, it is the board's recommendation to find alternative funding methods.

"The feeling in the community and in the faculty is that by selling candy, we're giving the students a mixed message. We try to teach them about health and nutrition in school," Pearl said.

Smith approached the PTA about a candy sale fundraiser as a joint effort for the school and the PTA. Profits will be split between the school's general fund and the PTA.

School fundraising policy

In 1982 the Board of Education adopted a policy for fundraising activities. The most recent revision to that policy took place in February of 1991. It is a 14 point policy, with some of the points addressing procedural aspects of a fundraiser, and other points addressing guidelines as to the nature of a fundraiser. The following list covers the points concerning guidelines for fundraising.

- #1: The project must have educational value.
- #2: There must be provided a clear definition of the use of the proceeds and the handling of funds.
- #3: Participation by students and employees will be entirely voluntary. Projects must not discriminate academically against those children not able to afford or electing not to partake in the project.
- #4: The activity should not imply that the Charlevoix Public Schools endorses any business product.
- #5: Door to door solicitation shall be restricted to the attendance area of the sponsoring school. Family, friends or associates of the students are exempt. Children in the kindergarten through fifth grade shall not be involved in door to door solicitation.
- #6: Proceeds should be used to enhance the students educationally.
- #7: For all products offered for sale, consideration should be given to nutritional value.

AHEAD LINES

Blood Drive this Thursday

The Red Cross Bloodmobile will make its first 1992 visit to Charlevoix Thursday, Jan. 23. Hours will be from 1 p.m. to 7 p.m. at the American Legion Hall.
The average person has between 10-12 pints of blood in his body. When donating blood, a little less than one pint is taken. The body replaces this fluid loss within 24 hours. The red cells are replaced within 4-6 weeks. A person can safely donate blood every 56 days.

Donors must be at least 17 years old and weigh a minimum of 110 pounds. There is no maximum age limit.
Blood is needed 365 days a year and is only available when people take time to give. About three percent of the people in our region supply the needs of the entire region. However, 97.6 percent of the people who live to be 72 years old will require some type of blood transfusion during their lifetime.
Working on the committee to organize the Charlevoix Bloodmobile are Marge Malone, Andi Mathews, Marilyn Izor and Nancy Fowler.

The Kappa Sigma Chapter of Beta Sigma Phi Sorority provides workers for the canteen. Charlevoix Lions Club members unload the van and help set up and then take down and re-load the van. The American Legion donated the use of their hall for each visit of the Bloodmobile.
The committee likes to have homemade cookies served to the donors. However, about 30 dozen cookies are needed so new cookie bakers are always needed. If you can provide cookies, please call Nancy Fowler at 547-9314.
In addition to the cookies, people in Candy Smith's Vital Options classes provide fresh fruits for the donors. First State Bank and Olesons Food Stores supply beverages.
Thursday, Jan. 23 is Bloodmobile day in Charlevoix. Blood is a people product without substitute, and a single donation may help anywhere from one to four people through use of component therapy. Whole blood - red cells - platelets or plasma derivatives.

...K-5 students selling lots of candy

Kim Simpson, president of the PTA, said that the PTA has not yet determined exactly what the money will be used for. Smith said that the general activity fund money is used to help pay for miscellaneous items like field trips and assemblies.
Beth Hater, a mother of two elementary school children, is not letting her children participate in this fundraiser. "It's hard when you're getting hit in every direction," Hater said of the many organizations that hold fundraisers. She also raised questions about the use of

"I gave my six-year-old daughter $36 and took all the candy off her hands. I didn't want her out selling it in the neighbors. She's too young to know how to make change, and one neighbor short-changed her."

An elementary school student's father the money raised. "If I knew it (the money) was going for a specific thing, I might feel differently about it."

Other parents expressed concerns about having five to ten year old children involved with the selling process. Sulane Hamilton, mother of a kindergarten child, said she reluctantly gave her daughter permission to sell candy because her daughter was excited to do it. "I don't like seeing kindergartners excited about selling candy," Hamilton said. "It's not a good process for elementary school kids to be involved with." Hamilton would like to see the school find other ways to raise money that don't enlist the children as sales representatives. "I think it's inappropriate to have small kids hawking wares for school funds," Hamilton said.

Chris Schaperkotter, a member of the PTA Board, had no qualms about the candy sale fundraiser, although she said she would personally favor an alternative fundraiser. "It's fast, it's easy, and it's lucrative," Schaperkotter said of the candy sales. She added that the students do not have to sell candy if they don't want to. Schaperkotter pointed out that if parents really object to candy sale fundraisers, they are welcome to attend the PTA meetings and express their opinion, or come up with alternative ideas. When Smith approached the PTA with the idea of a candy sale fundraiser, no other fundraising ideas were suggested or discussed.

"I've got five kids living on my block. I have to buy candy from all of them, to be fair. It gets expensive."

to the community crews.
Prisoners who have had any problems at the camp, either in terms of behavior or work habits jeopardize their chances of being assigned to a community crew. There are 144 prisoners at the camp. Community work crews are limited to eight or nine prisoners per crew.
Wieralla said both the staff and prisoners at Camp Pellston were shocked and saddened by Thacker's er's escape and the crimes he is suspected of committing. They are also worried about the ramifications of the incident. Other than a brief stint last Thursday morning, as of Monday afternoon Camp Pellston work crews hadn't been on the job since Thacker's Jan. 15 escape.

According to Wieralla there was nothing in Thacker's record to indicate that he would turn violent. While in prison, he hadn't been cited for any incidents of misconduct.

"He was quiet. He was polite. He was a normal-acting individual," Wieralla said. "Surely if we knew (that he might attempt to escape or become violent), we would have transferred him out."
Wieralla called the Thacker incident a tragedy and said that in its wake Camp Pellston officials are "definitely worried" about public sentiment toward the camp from people in the Pellston area and in communities where work crews have been assigned.

Escapee may have driven through town

A Camp Pellston escapee who is a suspect in the murder of two Levering men is also a suspect in the robbery of an Ironon woman and is thought to have passed through Charlevoix prior to being captured in Manistee.
Raymond Michael Thacker, 33, escaped from Camp Pellston shortly between 11:30 and 11:45 Wednesday, Jan. 15.
Although police are still piecing together details of the story, the following is known:
Thacker, who was serving time for two counts of armed robbery, one count of carrying a concealed weapon and one count of auto theft, left the prison camp in a stolen camp vehicle. He had been part of a work crew working near the camp and was last seen at 11:30 lunch. His absence was noticed by prison officers within 10 to 15 minutes after that. Following camp confirmation of the escape, State Police were notified at 12:04 p.m.

A short time later, a Levering woman and her two children were forced to stop by a prison camp vehicle. The man driving the vehicle took the woman's car and in the process stabbed her in the back with a metal object, probably a screwdriver. The lady was treated and released at Northern Michigan Hospitals in Petoskey. The children were left with their mother.

Shortly after 3 p.m., two Levering men, Nick Doner, 49, and his brother George Doner, 51, were found shot to death in their home.
Between 2:15 p.m. and 2:30 p.m., a man armed with a rifle locked Hazel Sloan of Ironon in a closet of her home and took some money and a 9 millimeter handgun from the home. When he entered the house, the man took the 81-year-old woman's glasses, but according to Charlevoix County Sheriff George Lasater some of the information Sloan gave police leads them to suspect Thacker. Sloan's son found her in the closet at about 8 p.m.

Are all our eggs in one electric basket?

Editor,

I was at work when word came down that Charlevoix was out of power. Work is on a different power line so it was business as usual and the sun was still up so everything seemed normal anyway. It wasn't until the sun went down and the temperature dropped that the impact of the power outage in town began to be realized. A steady stream of off-work employees who live in town started showing up at the plant asking for batteries, gas for cars and generators, food from the vending machines and other emergency supplies to tide them over until the power came back on. It was amazing that a whole city was completely shut down because someone pulled the plug. Even non-electrical sources of energy, such as gas, oil and even wood were down because it takes electricity to control them. According to the paper the power was off for about 12 hours, an unusual but temporary power outage, but what if the outage had been longer, days and months instead of hours. Then what?

According to Clayton Smith's book "75 Years With a Country Boy" it has not been that long ago that people lived without electricity. Farmers used candles, kerosene lanterns and other alternative sources of energy and were pretty much independent and self-supporting, then came REA. A step for progress, maybe, but I can't forget the old saying of not putting all your eggs in one basket. During this power out episode I had a vision of people following a piper playing music of technology. Then the music stopped and like a pack of rats on a sinking ship people scrambled. A power outage like this is unusual and with new improvements to the power system should not happen again for quite awhile but what if? If anything this power outage should point out that the "what if" factor is very real and not too far away. It's something to think about.

Vehicle food, it's something to build upon

Most of the population is dieting now, sticking resolutely to their vows made on New Year's Day. Dieting requires massive consumption of "vehicle foods", and if you're not familiar with these vehicle foods, watch out- you'll end up gaining weight instead of losing it.

You've all seen the gorgeous but lightweight movie actresses, famous for doing fluffy little movies, suddenly do a serious movie where she had bad hair and wore no make-up. When asked why she did a serious movie that was no fun at all, she replies, "Because it was good for my career. It was a good vehicle for me."

That's what vehicle foods are- no fun at all, but good for you. The problem with vehicle foods is that they were only invented to serve as a vehicle for tasty food that is bad for you.

Take the potato. All by itself, it's not even edible. In fact, the southern Irish used potatoes solely to build fences between themselves and their neighbors; the northern Irish, for years. Then one day an angry southern Irishman threw a rock hard spud at his neighbor, and it accidentally landed in the stew pot after rebounding off of the northern Irishman's head, rendering him temporarily unconscious. When the northern Irishman came to, the potato was nicely cooked, having soaked up all the yummy flavors of Irish whiskey and fatty red meat in the stew. That isolated gesture of anger changed the course of potato history.

Nutritionists now tell us that the potato is good for us, as long as it's eaten completely bare. But who can eat a bare potato? It's a contemporary vehicle for sour cream, butter, and bacon bits.

Raw veggies are good for dieters, but how do you transport them from hand to mouth without a short layover in the dill dip?

Some vehicle foods are cruel hoaxes played on us by foreign countries. Isn't it enough that the Japanese are killing us with their cars and high technology? Do we have to eat their rice cakes too? Rice cakes are ok only if you Americanize them with peanut butter or cheese whiz.

Perhaps the most legendary vehicle food hoax was pulled off by the French during the German occupation of France in World War II. The Germans sure made the French look foolish with their Maginot line; so the French were determined to make the Germans look equally foolish. The French scraped repulsive, slimy snails off their sidewalks and sewers and cooked them in a big pot of garlic and butter for the Germans. Then they gave the foul mess a fancy, unintelligible name, Escargot, to confuse the Germans. Loosely translated, escargot means "disgusting snail." The Germans gobbled up the snails by the gross, then asked the French for another vehicle food to sop up the leftover garlic butter. The French were rolling around on the floor at this point, laughing their socks off at the Germans. "Ho ho ho, those dumb weinerschnitzels are actually EATING SNAILS!" The French figured they were on a roll, so they foisted off their stale, week old hard bread on them, and the Germans loved it. By the time the naive American soldiers arrived in France, the snail and stale bread hoax was a well established, profitable business. Today the French have built their entire economy on the business of exporting garden slugs and old bread to fancy American restaurants, charging exorbitant prices and laughing all the way to their Swiss

Editorial

Even as it cloaked our small community in darkness, the power outage of Jan. 14 brought to light some things which should not go unnoticed.

The lights went out, the heat shut down, computer screens went blank shortly before 1:30 p.m. when a transformer blew at the substation on Ferry Avenue. The transformer which blew is a fairly substantial and expensive piece of equipment. It's not the kind of thing where the electrical repairman has a spare one in his back pocket. A mobile transformer had to be hauled in on a flat bed truck from Ewart, which is a small town outside of Big Rapids.

When it became evident that this power outage was going to be a long one, people began making provisions to deal with the problem. In Charlevoix, dealing with this problem meant taking care of more than just yourself and your own household. It meant making sure friends and neighbors also would be taken care of.

In urban areas, black outs are often accompanied by rioting, looting and general mayhem in the streets. In Charlevoix, city officials met to make sure there would be warm places for people to seek shelter if their own homes got too cold.

In some places the darkness of a power outage means closing doors and locking yourself in to protect yourself and your property. In Charlevoix the darkness of the power outage meant opening doors and reaching out to help other people. Several families who lived in the country and weren't affected by the outage invited people from town out to share the warmth of their homes.

There are places where darkness provides a cover for scoundrels to prey upon the elderly. In Charlevoix, the darkness of the power outage prompted concern for our elderly. More than one elderly person had awell-worn path beaten to their door Jan. 14 by friends checking up on them to make sure they were all right. (Interestingly, most of the local elderly remembered times when constant electricity wasn't a given. A loss of power wasn't breaking any new ground for them. They had taken refuge under their blankets and were doing just fine, thank you.)

Twelve-hour power outages aren't necessarily something a community wants to make a regular event. Still, it's nice to know that even when electricity fails to provide us with heat and light, as people we can compensate with human warmth and bring some light into the darkness.

Oh Boix

A collection of praises, awards and accomplishments earned by Charlevoix people.

Six Charlevoix students were recently named to academic honors lists for the fall semester at North Central Michigan College. Melissa Walker was named to the President's List. To be named to the President's List a student must have a perfect 4.0 grade point average. Walker was one of only 10 students to be named to the list. Named to the Dean's List were: Karen Arnold, Lisa Guidi, Barbara Puister, Jacqueline Skinner and Linda Woods. To be named to the Dean's List a student must have 3.5 or higher grade point average.

Four Charlevoix students were named to the fall semester Dean's List at Grand Valley State University. Named to the list were: Betsy Haggard, Krista Martin, John Obrien and Jill Taylor.

Valerie Barnes of Charlevoix is among the students named to the fall semester Dean's List at Adrian College. Barnes is a senior majoring in English and Journalism.

Navy Airman Recruit Michael G. Stoneham, son of Ronald and Marie Stoneham of Charlevoix, is in the Persian Gulf aboard the aircraft carrier USS Dwight D. Eisenhower, homeported in Norfolk, VA and midway through a six-month deployment.

In November, Stoneham participated in exercise "Eager Mace," a 10-day, joint amphibious landing exercise in Kuwait. The exercise was designed to increase the readiness of combined forces in the Middle East.

banks. Since America is suffering with a sagging economy and sagging waistlines, maybe we should take a lesson from the French and pull off a little hoax of our own. We should work out a trade agreement with the Japanese and send them all of the fatty foods we produce at very attractive prices. When the Japanese start eating steak and fries on a regular basis, they will get too porky to fit under the hood of those compact cars they're building, so they'll start building bigger cars. Bigger cars use more fuel and cost more money, so Americans will quit buying them. Eventually, all of the thin Americans (we'll all be thin because we shipped all the fattening food to Japan and got rich in the process) will start buying sleek American cars. (American cars will be sleek because we'll be a sleek new nation.) Then all of our problems will be solved, and we can have our vehicle foods and eat them too. As for the Japanese, well, let them eat rice cake.

Lake levels still a bit high

During the month of December, the Lakes Superior and Erie basins had below average precipitation, while the Lakes Michigan-Huron and Ontario basins were slightly above average. The 30-day outlook published by the National Weather Service projects light to moderate precipitation for the Great Lakes region for the month of January.

The forecast, published in the Monthly Bulletin of Lake Levels for the Great Lakes, shows Lakes Superior and Michigan-Huron near and slightly above their respective long-term averages during the next six months with Lake Ontario approaching its long-term average near the end of the forecast period. Lakes St. Clair and Erie are anticipated to continue above their long-term average levels throughout the forecast period.

Lakes Michigan-Huron, at the end of December were at elevation 578.01 feet (176.18 meters) above the mean water level at Father Point, Quebec, or 15 inches (38 cm.) above Chart Datum. This was about 1 inch (3 cm.) below what it was a year ago, and about the same as one month ago. The December monthly mean level of 578.06 feet (176.19 meters) was about the same as the long-term average for December. The lakes, however, remained about 34 inches (86 cm.) below their all-time high December monthly mean level, which was recorded in 1986. The forecast shows that at the end of January, the level of Lakes Michigan-Huron will be about the same as what it was at the end of December. The lakes are expected to complete their seasonal decline in January. The water level in June 1992, is expected to be about 5 inches (13 cm.) above long-term average for that month, and about 5 inches (13 cm.) above what it was in 1991.

Middle school honors King Day

You can count the number of black students in the Charlevoix School System on the fingers of your hand. Despite that, the Charlevoix Middle School made a special effort this past Monday to recognize principles espoused by the late black leader Rev. Martin Luther King Jr.

In celebrating Martin Luther King Jr. Day, Middle School teachers and students discussed how principles King stood for relate to the U.S. Constitution and some of the foundations of democracy. The Constitutional premise that all men are created equal and the goal of all people living in harmony despite racial and other differences were discussed as objectives which are applicable to all people.

Valerie Kimble, whose son from her first marriage is black, worked with middle school principal Dennis VanGuilder and middle school teacher Tom Sothard to coordinate essay and poster contests for middle school students. Kimble's son Sean is a seventh grade student at Charlevoix Middle School.

The theme for the contests was "Like the colors of the rainbow, all people can live together." The essay and poster contests were voluntary, but several students from each grade participated. Members of the Charlevoix Ministerial Association judged the essays and posters. Local businesses contributed 15 prizes.

VanGuilder described the students as very receptive and the staff as very supportive to the Martin Luther King Day effort.

In addition to the contests, teachers played King's "I have a dream" speech for students. Channel One broadcasts for this week will feature information pertaining to King and the civil rights movement. Several local ministers will be addressing issues of equality and harmony in their sermons. Wednesday, Eugene Cain, a black man who is the assistant superintendent of the Michigan Department of Education, will visit the Charlevoix Middle School.

Folk musician and singer Patty Clark was a featured performer at a folk art day for Charlevoix Brownies and Girl Scouts this past Saturday at the Charlevoix Elementary School gym.

Girl Scouts enjoy folk art day

Ninety-eight Charlevoix Brownies and Girl Scouts participated in an all-day craft day Jan. 18 at the Charlevoix Elementary School Gym.

Folk singer Patty Clark taught the girls folk songs, told the girls stories and showed them folk instruments. Under Clark's instruction each of the girls made a puppet.

Other colonial crafts taught during the day included tin punching, bead jewelry, potpourri, Ojos de Dios, and old-fashioned candy making.

Carol Madison taught the girls basket weaving and each girl made and took home a basket.

Drama team prepares for district

The Charlevoix High School Performing Arts team is taking an original musical drama on the Civil War period into state-wide drama competition, starting with the District eliminations this coming Saturday (Jan. 25).

The play entitled "Oh, Freedom," draws from the epic poem "John Brown's Body" by Stephen Vincent Benet and a wide variety of historical documents.

Connie Ford, Charlevoix high school Performing Arts teacher and coach, wrote the script. Sulane Hamilton, who has acted as volunteer musical director for Charlevoix Performing Arts productions for several years, researched and arranged original Civil War era music for the production.

Charlevoix drama students and parents have been scouring the area for costumes and props that will help lend authenticity to the production.

"We are still looking for dresses for the southern belles," reports Coach Ford. "We're using off-the-shoulder style prom dresses and are not entirely satisfied with what we have so far."

"We're also looking for props such as tin dishes, other household items that would look like the era, and toy guns, without bolt action, that look like pioneer guns," the coach said.

Anyone with potential props is asked to contact Nancy LaCroix at 547-6418.

Explaining the play's themes, Ford said, "This is the story of how Americans faced conflicts that arose as we fought to free slaves and preserve the Union."

The play opens on a slave ship and follows the course of the Civil War through the lives of northern and southern men and women. Written from the point of view of the people, rather than a military or strategic view, the play reveals the thoughts and melodies that sustained both Yankees and Confederates through the conflict, according to the coach.

The play's action is underscored by such familiar and stirring songs as the "Battle Hymn of the Republic," also sung as "John Brown's Body," as well as such other well-known folk songs as "When Johnny Comes Marching Home," "Goober Peas," and "The Cruel War is Over."

Wrestlers get a tie and a win

Charlevoix wrestlers beat Whittemore Prescott 45-30 and then tied Grayling 38-38 at Grayling last Thursday night.

Dan Browe, Sean Young, Jason Pajtas, Jason Hughes and Jason VanLoon all had two wins for the Rayders.

Browe, a heavyweight, pinned both of his opponents. His total time on the mat for the evening was less than three minutes. Charlevoix trailed Grayling entering the heavy-weight match, but Browe pinned his Grayling opponent in 53 seconds.

Young also had two pins on the evening.

VanLoon got the Rayders quickest pin for the night, pinning a Prescott opponent in 29 seconds.

Top: Brad DeGrow goes up for a shot in the first half of the Rayders' game against East Jordan. Charlevoix beat East Jordan Friday, but lost to Cheboygan Saturday.

Basketball team splits games

Win over East Jordan followed by loss to Cheboygan

Despite a fourth quarter scoring drought, Charlevoix hung on to beat East Jordan 62-58 Friday night.

The Rayders entered the fourth quarter leading 45-41 and quickly scored two baskets to take a 49-41 lead with 7:22 left in the game. As things turned out, the Rayders needed all of that lead. For more than five minutes, the Rayders were unable to score another basket. The Rayders only points during that stretch came from the free throw line.

When the Rayders did finally begin scoring baskets again, the baskets came in transition off of East Jordan turnovers, not out of the Rayders set offense.

During the scoring drought, the Rayders were getting shots in the lane, but the shots simply wouldn't fall in.

With the exception of Charlevoix's eight point lead early in the fourth quarter, the game stayed close.

Charlevoix lead 18-15 at the end of the first quarter and 30-28 at the half.

East Jordan has a tall front line which gave the Rayders difficulty. Brad DeGrow drew the unenviable task of defending and rebounding against East Jordan center Ross Miller. DeGrow fared well in the first quarter, particularly on the boards, but later in the game Miller began scoring inside.

Defensively, Charlevoix played well. Don Jess had four steals while Luke LaBlance, Keith Carey and Wayne Joy each had three steals.

LaBlance led the Rayders in scoring with 14 points. He also had 10 rebounds. Joy had 12 points including some clutch free throws in the fourth quarter. Carey and DeGrow each contributed 11 points.

Mike Dobulis had nine rebounds and DeGrow eight.

Saturday night against Cheboygan, the Rayders almost managed to pull off an upset, but faded late in the game and blew a lead to lose 64-59. Charlevoix had also lost to Cheboygan in the opening game of the season.

Charlevoix started well opening a 12-9 lead after the first quarter. Both teams were on fire in the second quarter as the Rayders scored 21 points and the Chiefs 19. At one point, the Rayders led by 18 points, but a Cheboygan rally left the half-time score at 33-28 in Charlevoix's favor.

The Rayders entered the fourth quarter with a 6 point lead 48-42, but then the wheels fell off. Cheboygan outscored the Rayders 22-11 in the fourth quarter to take the five-point win.

LaBlance was the only Rayder scoring in double figures. He had 22 points. Dobulis had 10 rebounds.

The split left the Rayders with a 3-5 season record and a league record of 2-2. Traverse City St. Francis leads the league with a 4-1 record. Elk Rapids and Boyne City are tied for second at 3-1.

This Friday Charlevoix will travel to Elk Rapids.

A soft touch

Volleyball team is now up to 3-0

Charlevoix's varsity volleyball team remained undefeated in match play with a three-game sweep of Traverse City St. Francis last Wednesday night.

The Rayders took a 16-14 win in the first game and then clobbered the Gladiator.

s 15-5 and 15-3 in the second and third games.

Top setters were Stacy Tilton and Liz Grunch. Top servers were Mary Jane Grunch and Liz Grunch. Leading the defense and offense were Angelina Doan and Mary Jane Grunch.

The junior varsity lost for the first time this year. Traverse City St. Francis swept the j.v.s in two games 15-5 and 15-3.

Company rebuilds following fire

(Editors's note: The following story is one in a series of stories about area industry being written for the Courier by Ralph McRae. McRae is a former mayor and council member and is currently a member of the Charlevoix Industrial Development Committee.)

By Ralph McRae

Wojan Millwork Company is now located in a new building on south U.S. 31, just opposite of the airport. The company has four employees at its 10,000 square foot plant and will host an open house this spring.

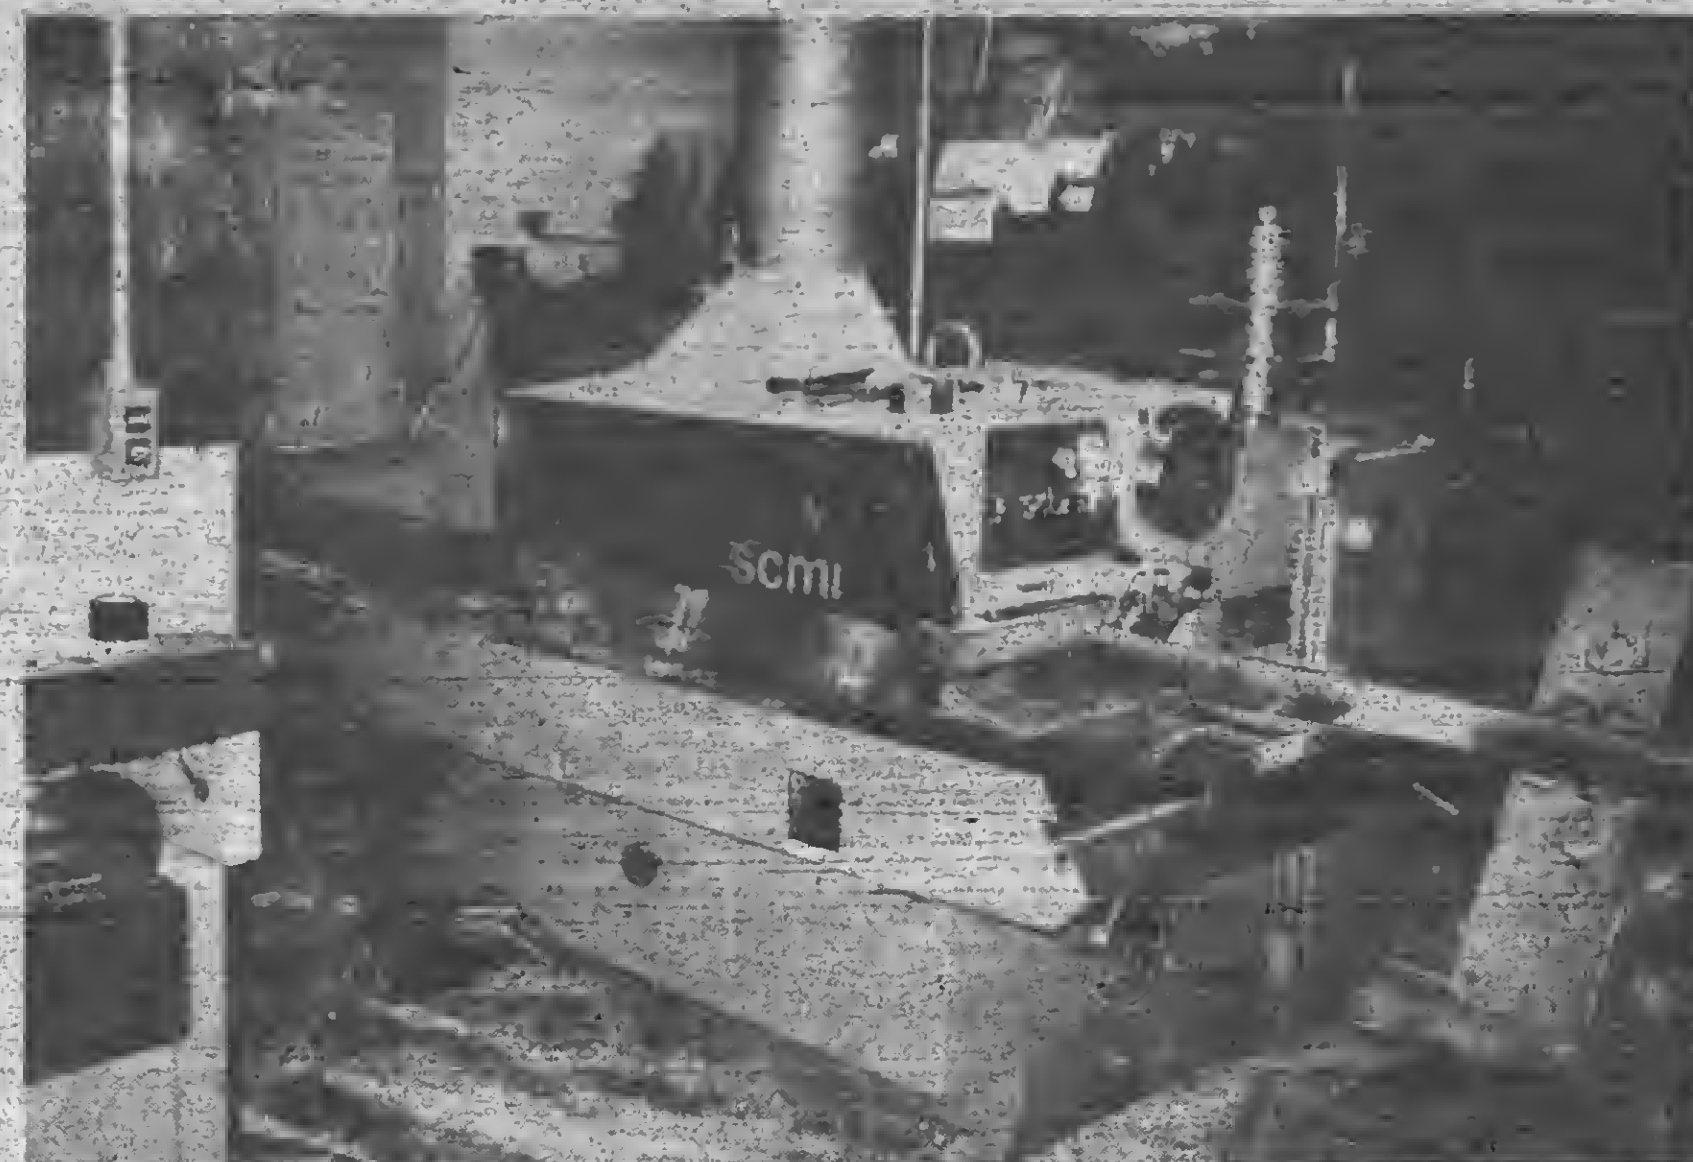

The millwork company is the descendant of a hardwood flooring company founded many years ago by Anthony Wojan Sr. Eventually, the manufacturing of hardwood flooring was discontinued. The company was revamped and a corporation formed with Anthony Wojan and his brothers John and Walter. The corporation adopted the name Everseal and manufactured redwood storm doors and windows quite successfully for many years. Later, Walter Wojan founded his own business, using aluminum rather than wood. His sons, Dennis and Ken, now operate that business.

Anthony Wojan Sr. had six sons and five daughters. One of his sons, Albert Wojan joined the wood-working firm in 1968. By laboring long hours and making improvements in machinery, he increased the company's production capability.

Disaster struck the plant March 16, 1985. Fire reduced the plant to ashes in a matter of hours. Only the machinery remained upright. A large stock of lumber and thousands of dollars worth of finished goods were destroyed.

Many of the machines had been designed and constructed at the plant.

The loss was not covered by insurance. Fortunately, everything which had been destroyed had also been paid for. There were no outstanding loans to add to the burden of recovery.

The day after the fire a close friend and a bank offered Wojan loans and encouragement. That same day, the company also received a $20,000 order for windows. Two days after the fire, the firm was back in operation.

In 1988, Al Wojan purchased the present 15-acre site and began erecting the new building. Operations began to be phased into the new building in 1989.

Production is now almost back to normal.

Years ago, white pine was about the only lumber used. Today, red oak is not only cheaper, but more durable. Other woods bought in quantity are maple, yellow poplar and mahogany. Ash, cherry and black walnut are also used to a lesser degree.

In addition to different kinds of wood, the new plant also uses new machinery.

Five pieces of equipment have been purchased from the Italian firm, SCMI, the world's largest manufacturer of woodworking machinery. Instead of taking hours to change sanding bells, moulding cutters etc., it now takes only minutes.

The new machines turn out better products in less time. One of the Italian machines has 13 motors for the various blades and cutters which can make a variety of moulding patterns. The computer numerical-controlled machine requires an experienced operator to direct its multi-functional processes.

Area architects have been important customers in recent years. In last year's Charlevoix home show, three of the homes had mouldings from Wojan Mill Work.

Another labor-saving piece of equipment is a German machine. It quickly and accurately grinds out custom cutting blades. Before the machine was purchased each blade had to be machined by grinding wheels in a process which took hours to complete.

Currently the company has two main product lines, mouldings and pre-hung doors. Door blanks arrive by the truck load, mainly from Chicago. The mill work company adds its own manufactured jams and trim plus binges and national brand lock hardware.

A specialty of the plant is making architecturally designed entrance doors. Exotic woods are glued piece by piece to the desired size. The door is then sculpted and customized, moulding is attached. Glass insertions and hardware are also installed. These doors can range in price from $500 to $5,000.

Wojan Millwork also is a distributor for garage doors and garage door openers.

Sales for the company come from repeat customers, referrals, architects and direct personal contact.

Al Wojan is the company's chairman of the board, operations manager, director of marketing and building superintendent. In all of his roles, his top priorities are quality and service.

The slowdown in the overall economy has not really affected the business. Perhaps it is because the company has one of the community's most desirable business phone numbers, 0123.

Raffle raises money for Easter Seals

A special event to raise money for the Easter Seal Society will take place from now through the first of March at Country Customs and Elsie's Hallmark. Featured is a 9" figurine encased in a glass dome, which will be raffled off by the local Easter Seal Society.

Enesco Imports Corp., producers of the Precious Moments collectibles, is a national sponsor for the Easter Seal Society. For the third year, Enesco has dedicated a Precious Moments porcelain figurine to honor Easter Seal Society. This year's figurine is entitled

"We are God's Workmanship" and depicts a little girl holding a butterfly. Each store will have the figurine on display and will be selling raffle tickets for $1 each.

Money raised by this event will go to benefit the local Easter Seal Society.

Power restored after 12 hours

Several people fled the community for lighter ground. Others spent a quiet evening in dimly lit homes - kind of like camping or living in a log cabin.

Charlevoix city electric customers lost power shortly before 1:30 p.m. Tuesday, Jan. 14 when a transformer blew at the Consumer's Power substation at the corner of Stover Road and Perry Avenue. The outage lasted about 12 hours while a mobile transformer was hauled in from Evart.

Power company employees worked round the clock, first hooking up the mobile transformer, then repairing a smaller transformer which caused a second outage at about 8 a.m. Jan. 15 and lasted for about an hour, and finally replacing the mobile transformer with a permanent transformer, a procedure which caused a third outage from around 5 p.m. to 6 p.m. Jan. 15.

City officials met shortly after the power outage began and arranged to have the city and township halls open in the evening to people who did not have heat in their homes. The city hall has a back-up generator and had heat during the outage. Although the hall was open, only one person showed up.

According to city police, the populace was well-behaved during the outage.

Later in the afternoon, a man bought some 9 mm ammunition at the Ben Franklin store in Charlevoix, but the man's description and the time the purchase was made don't fit Thacker or the proper time frame in relation to the Iron robbery.

Thacker was picked up in Manistee shortly after 7 a.m. Thursday, Jan. 16 when a convenience store clerk notified police that she had seen a man matching the description of the escapee. Although Thacker was heavily armed when he was picked up in Manistee, he did not resist arrest.

Following the arrest, police brought Thacker back to Emmet County. Friday morning, Jan. 17 he was arraigned in 90th District Court before Judge Harvey C. Varnum on an escape charge. Other charges may be forthcoming.

Although Thacker's route from Pellston to Manistee has not been officially determined, a logical route from Pellston through Ironton to Manistee would be US 131 south through Petoskey to M-66 north of Mancelona and then M-66 through East Jordan and Ironton to US 31 in Charlevoix and then US 31 south through Traverse City to Manistee.

Growth Alliance dispute persists

By Laurie Lounsbury

Don Smith, chairman of the Charlevoix County Board of Commissioners claimed this past Wednesday that members of the Charlevoix Industrial Development Committee (IDC) may have a hidden agenda to keep new industries out of Charlevoix. IDC members called those charges ludicrous.

The dispute centers around a proposed partnership between the Northern Lakes Economic Alliance and the Michigan State University (MSU) Cooperative Extension Service. The economic alliance is a three-county alliance involving Charlevoix, Emmet and Antrim Counties. Until recently, funding for the alliance, which is a two-person operation based in Boyne City, was shared by the state and local units of government. When the state cut its portion of the funding, the Cooperative Extension Service proposed to pick up a portion of the funding while incorporating the alliance into the Cooperative Extension program.

Dan Barron and other members of the IDC opposed merging the alliance with the extension service. They argued that a local alliance would be more effective and that moving from an affiliation with the state to an affiliation with Michigan State University would just be changing from one Lansing bureaucracy to another. As an example of problems with a large bureaucracy and its requirements, the IDC members cited the make-up of the alliance board. They said that even though the alliance's objective was to retain and attract industry, the alliance board contained very few people directly associated with industry.

Smith responded by nominating

Two developments are ready to move forward

By L. Scott Swanson

Two residential developments to the north of town have cleared major paperwork hurdles and are ready to go forward with construction plans.

North Pointe Woods is a 27-acre piece of land bordered by Mercer, Waller, Pleasant and Mount McSaub. The planned subdivision is divided into 48 lots.

Charlevoix Country Club has the potential to encompass as much as 550 acres in Charlevoix and Hayes Township. Plans call for an 18-hole golf course, a club house and an as yet undetermined number of residential units which will be constructed in phases. Phase one, which has been completed, consists of 44 lots in Charlevoix Township.

working on a planned unit development in Charlevoix Township. Current plans call for a total of 190 residential units in Charlevoix Township.

An important step for both developments was an agreement with the city to allow the developments to hook into the city sewer system.

Rik Lobenherz, Charlevoix Country Club Corp. President, said the project has been something he's been working on for about four years. The sewer agreement took two years to iron out and has been the project's biggest hold-up. He said that with that problem behind them, developers can proceed with a little more tenacity and assurance.

Steve Andrae of North Pointe Woods said groundwork for that project has been in the works for about two years and a big part of that work has been arranging sewer service.

The agreement worked out between the city calls for the developers to finance construction of the sewer lines serving the development and then to turn the lines over to the city. It also required the developers to take out letters of credit to assure the city that money is available to finance the sewer work necessary for the developments.

When the city's sewage treatment plant was constructed, it was designed to be able to handle additional sewage from townships surrounding the city. In recent years the city has separated sanitary and storm sewer lines on the northside so the city lines will be able to han-

Ahead-lines

Scenic highway project considered

The Little Traverse Conservancy is working with owners of some of the largest parcels of land between Petoskey and Charlevoix to protect scenic areas along US 31 between the two cities. Conservancy Executive Director Tom Bailey said that the inaugural meeting of the group was a "major step" toward protecting scenery along the roadway.

Attending the meeting were Rik Lobenherz, developer of the Charlevoix Country Club with more than a mile of frontage on the road; Lawrence LoPatin representing Three Fires Pointe with five miles of frontage, and several other owners of large parcels in the corridor.

"We had the owners of nearly half the road frontage between Petoskey and Charlevoix all sitting together," Bailey said, "and all agreed that the scenic quality of US 31 is worth saving." More importantly, Bailey said, all agreed to explore measures that they can take on their own property to maintain and even enhance the road's scenic value.

The goal is to create greenbelts and scenic view areas to insure that forests and lake views are protected along the roadway. Landowners would employ a variety of measures to insure that these scenic qualities would be protected. "Private initiative can accomplish what zoning and other regulations often cannot," Bailey said, "and there are a number of reasons for landowners to take these actions." Congress has provided a number of tax incentives for private owners to protect their property, and there are other benefits as well.

Lobenherz, for example, has protected land adjacent to his Susan Lake development in Hayes Township through conservation easements and by giving some land outright to the Conservancy. LoPatin believes that these conservation measures not only protect important wetlands, wildlife habitat and scenic views, but that they protect the interests of buyers of the property as well. "This type of project offers something to both the public and the private owner," he said.

Bailey is very pleased with the interest shown by the property owners who attended the meeting. "In seven years with the Conservancy," he said, "I've never attended a single meeting where owners of so much road frontage were represented."

The next step will be for owners and Conservancy staff to make site visits to evaluate possible greenbelt areas. Owners will then meet with various governmental bodies to develop a cooperative approach and support for the greenbelt plan.

Lobenherz said that in the Charlevoix area real estate market there's a huge void between lake front property and vacant lots off of the lake. He said the Charlevoix Country Club and its accompanying golf course offers property to fill that void.

As lake-front property prices have increased, the number of people who can afford it has decreased. Lobenherz feels Charlevoix Country Club will appeal to a broader range of people. The 44 lots developed in phase one average about an acre in size and sell for between $32,000 and $45,000. Lobenherz said the lots are selling well, even though the corporation still hasn't begun to aggressively market them. He said there will probably be some type of formal groundbreaking ceremony in the spring.

The golf course is being designed by Jerry Mathews out of Lansing. Among the courses Mathews has designed are three which have been named among the top three resort courses in the United States.

Charles Moore of Texas is the consulting architect on the clubhouse. Lobenherz said Moore is well known in the architectural world. Lobenherz said the development will have a traditional look for its architectural theme.

Despite the size of the development, Lobenherz said its appearance will be discreet.

"We're able to provide a product that for the most part isn't even seen from public lands or roads," he said.

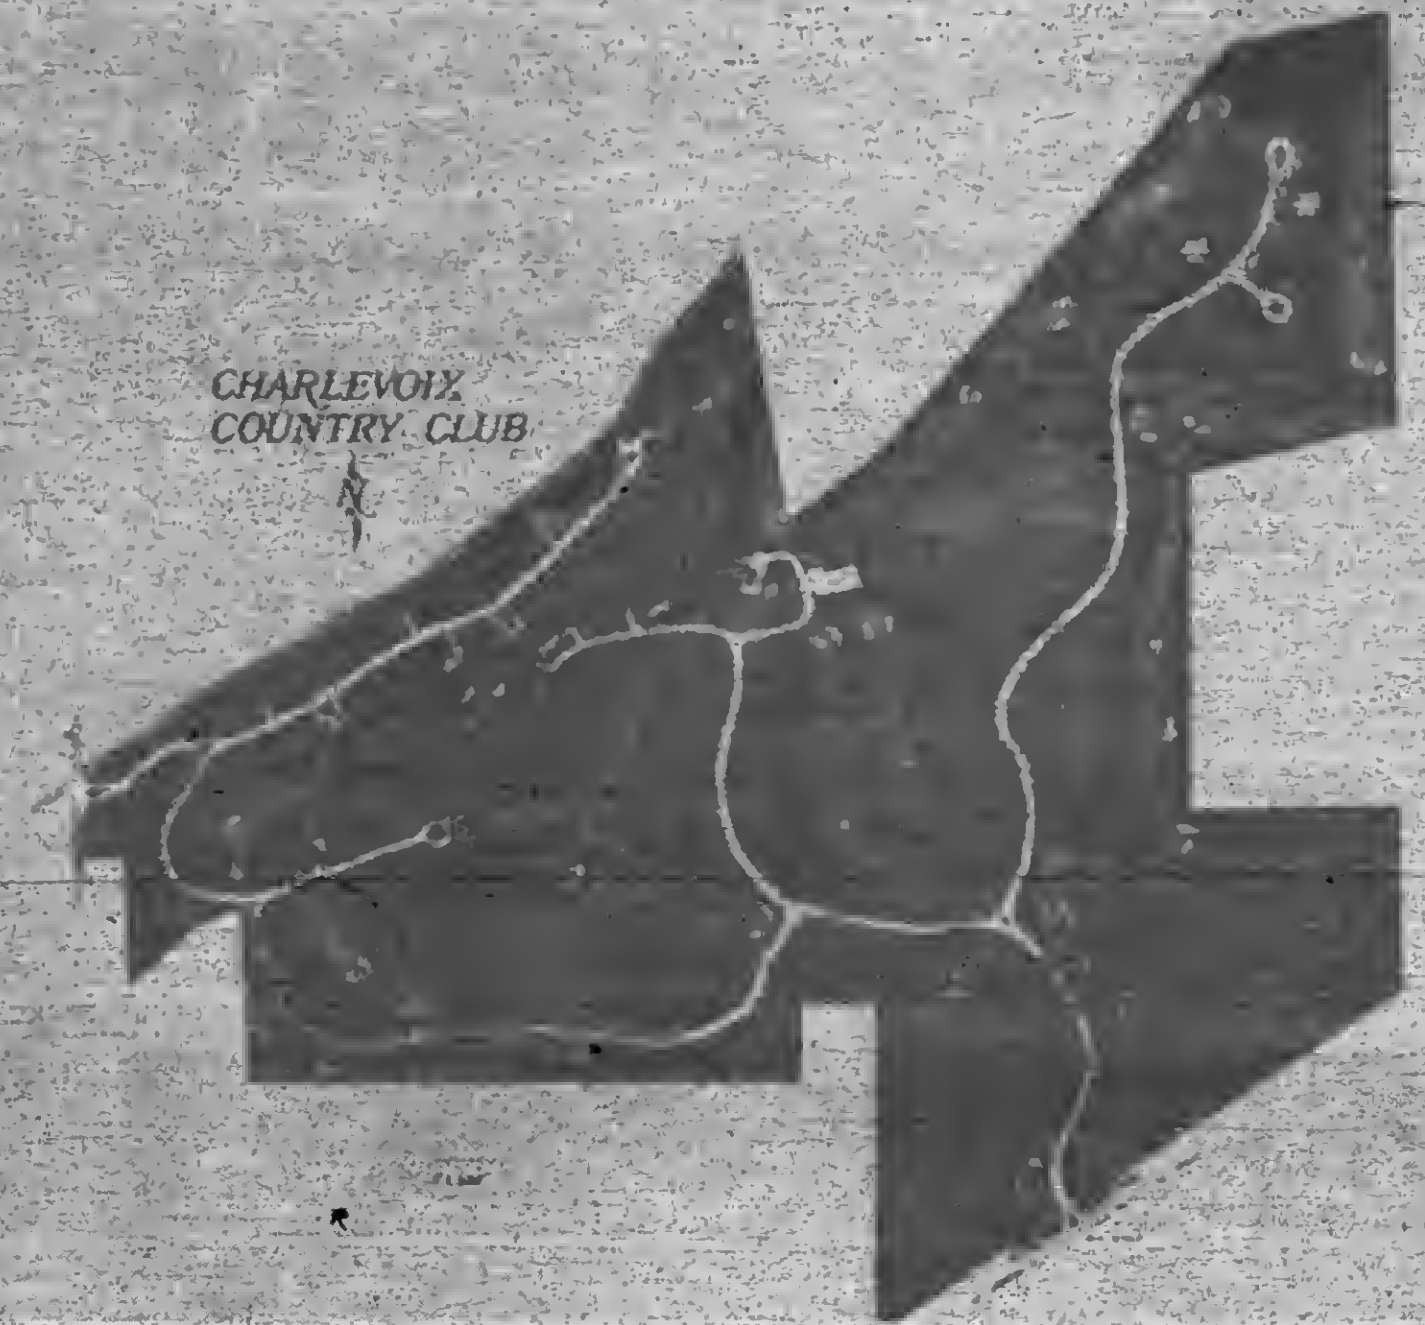

Currently the entrance to the development is off of Old Orchard Road, but ultimately the main entrance will be off of U.S. 31.

Andrae said there might be a few homes in the North Pointe Woods subdivision some time this spring.

"For starting out, we're real pleased with the activity," he said of the lot sales. The subdivision is within hiking or biking distance to town and Andrae said people like the project's location.

Lots in the subdivision are wooded. They vary in size, but have an average of 130 feet in road frontage. Prices start at $18,000 and average about $26,000.

The entrance to the subdivision will be off of Waller Road. The road inside the subdivision will end in a cul de sac.

OPINIONS

Editorial

A matter of value

An ongoing debate concerning the Northern Lakes Economic Alliance has taken some interesting turns. (See story page 1) But in this particular debate, as in any other debate involving a governmentally funded agency, the key question must be what is the value of the agency? Is there any tangible benefit to having this agency exist? And if so, does this agency provide the benefit in the most efficient and economical way possible? Or could the benefit be reaped more efficiently and economically in another manner.

Rather than the debate becoming political or personal, Charlevoix County Commissioners should judge the Alliance on a very pragmatic basis. Commissioners should request a list of things the Alliance has accomplished since its creation in the mid 1980s. The list should contain concrete accomplishments and list specific industries the Alliance has either helped retain or draw to Charlevoix County.

Upon receiving that list, commissioners should weigh it against the aforementioned questions. If the Alliance stands up to that test and proves itself to be of value, keep it. If it proves to be more promises than substance, scrap it and put the county's resources into something more productive.

Economic development and how it should be promoted is always a difficult question. Too often it is a question which is responded to with a great deal of pomp, promise and in this case friction while reasoned, dispassionate thought goes out the window.

The response to the question of economic development must not be, "Yes, I'm for it." Everybody's for it. The answer must be, "This is what we intend to do to provide it," or in the case of the Alliance, "This is what we've done."

Now I've had everything! A Boyne City Saloon with a Gordon Bleu Chef! Can you believe this? Honest, it's true. I was in the Saloon and I met the Chef, Russell Yardley, and the new owners, Nick and Chris Bibin, and the attractive general manager, Tera Jackson, and their competent waitresses.

The name of the place has not been changed. It's the same as always. TANNERY SALOON, located on the South Lake Street. It's been spruced-up a bit with a small dining section tucked behind a prominent, long, centrally located bar. (They're on the verge of getting their liquor license, but in spite of that, word of mouth brought in more than 100 diners last Saturday night.)

The big draw is high quality food and low prices for lunch and dinner. For example, on the features section the menu reads, "This section of our menu is not the left-over portion of dishes that we couldn't sell two days ago, and now have added tomato sauce and glomkées (dumplings), given a new name and presented it to you, nor is it an area of discounted regular menu items, but a section reserved for our secret creations from our kitchen."

Listed on today's featured menu is Stuffed Lobster with crab stuffing, accompanied with President Bush's not so favorite broccoli, potatoes, roll and salad for $13.95. You may create your own Saloon Burgers for $3.25 or order a bucket of Plain or Barbeque Chicken, Cole Slaw with French Fries or Broasted Potatoes to take out. On the first Tuesday of every month they offer a delicious Lobster Special for only $9.95.

I can't even begin discussing the desserts. We surprised Chef Russell one night and he whipped up a special treat that caused my guest to say, "I think I'm in Paris!"

Russell Yardley, you'll be interested to know, got his start in Petoskey High School's highly respected culinary arts program. Yardley's goal was to become an engineer, but in the meantime he worked his way through college in some of our area's best restaurants. One day his friend, Marty Pavilich, the former Red Wing hockey star, said to him, "Why don't you forget about becoming an engineer? You have developed such skill as a chef, this should be your life's work!" The argument did not fall on deaf ears and Yardley applied for a two-year course at the renowned Gordon Blue School in London from which he graduated at the top of his class. Although he worked at one of London's finest restaurants, the Glob, for awhile as head chef, the call of home lured him back to Northern Michigan.

Fortunately the new owners of the old time Tannery Saloon have given Yardley a free hand. Nick and Chris Bibin own a tool and dye business downtown, as well as a ranch near Boyne City. A call to a "fantasy" ranch because they don't have any animals on the property, yet they enjoy the place as a retreat off and on all year long. By the same token, don't you think that any local bar that employs a Tannery Chef should be renamed Fantasy Saloon? Fantasy or Tannery, either way, try it. You'll like it!

...dispute over County Growth Alliance persists

County Commission Chairman Don Smith, questioning whether the Charlevoix Industrial Development Committee really wants new industries in Charlevoix ponents of the merger with MSU. Smith's nominations further angered them. Walt Hufford, Mike Wiesner and Mike Dionne, three of the people who were to be replaced by the new nominees, are among those who have expressed opposition to the MSU partnership. When they were removed from the alliance board, Barron accused Smith of "sacking the deck" by removing opponents of the MSU partnership.

The five new appointments were made at the county board's first meeting in January. Between that meeting and last Wednesday's meeting Barron and El Kaiser, one of the five appointees and also a member of the IDC, drafted a letter to Smith. Smith read that letter at last Wednesday's meeting. The letter essentially said that while Smith's industrial appointments to the Alliance board were a step in the right direction, his efforts were in vain if Antrim and Emmet counties did not take similar steps. Since the Alliance made no effort to influence Emmet and Antrim counties into making changes in their board appointments, then the Alliance had once again fallen short of their objectives to enhance industrial development. Because of this failure, the IDC would prefer to join other Charlevoix organizations in an effort to form a single county industrial development organization.

At the county board meeting Smith accused Barron and Kaiser of having their own reasons for not wanting to support the Economic Alliance. Smith charged opponents of the MSU merger with a desire to inhibit new industrial growth in Charlevoix because new industry might pose a threat to the existing wage scale. Smith also charged them with not wanting economic development right now because Charlevoix's electrical system is inadequate to handle any new industry. "I've heard rumors that there are hidden agendas here," Smith said.

Smith accused Barron of "political intimidation" because Barron requested and received a list of registered voters in Smith's county commission district. "I heard this group spent $4,000 to remove the former Charlevoix Mayor, and they're willing to spend that to get rid of me," Smith said. "My voters cannot be bought, and I cannot be intimidated," he added.

In a phone interview later in the week, Barron responded to Smith's charges by saying, "I ordered the list of voters in the fifth district because I was just curious to see who comprises that voter roll."

Barron also said that Smith's charges of hidden agendas were outlandish accusations without any support. He deemed the charges ludicious an insult to the businesses within Smith's own district.

City Manager Mike Wiesner said that Charlevoix has plenty of electrical capacity for any type of industry. "All of the utilities, not just electricity, are in great shape in the industrial park," Wiesner said.

After reading Barron and Kaiser's letter, Smith said, "El Kaiser is giving up, dooming it (the Alliance), to failure before the first meeting," Smith asked the board to reconsider Kaiser's appointment to the board, and proposed replacing Kaiser temporarily with Lee Moerland. Commissioner Walt Hufford told Smith that negative feelings had been generated when Smith refused to appoint Mike Dionne to the board, because Dionne was opposed to the MSU merger. Hufford reminded Smith, "You did manage to replace both city managers opposed to the merger. When the geographic imbalance was pointed out, you still refused to change your mind." When Smith made a motion to replace Kaiser with Moerland, Hufford said, "You're doing it again. You're removing someone opposed to the merger. I know El Kaiser; he seems fair and open-minded to me. He would change his position if the facts warranted it."

A roll call vote was taken, and all the commissioners except Hufford voted in favor of Moerland's appointment.

In a phone interview the next day, Kaiser said he normally respects Smith's opinions but in this case feels he was off base. Kaiser said the reason the Charlevoix IDC is at odds with Smith is because of the ineffectiveness of the Alliance. "In recent history, it has not been a high priority of the Alliance to attract industry. They devoted a great deal of time to get new residential sewers in Boyne City," Kaiser said. Barron said of the Alliance, "It's a bloated, unproductive, bureaucracy, and it was even prior to this MSU issue."

Bob Kern, Charlevoix Chamber of Commerce President and a member of the Charlevoix IDC said, "It really hurt when I read what Don Smith said. We work very hard to bring industry to Charlevoix." Kern went on to say that he would be happy to meet with Boyne City and East Jordan representatives and work to form an effective single county alliance.

In a conversation with Don Smith two days after the commissioner's meeting, Smith acknowledged that his remarks regarding Charlevoix trying to inhibit growth were unfounded. "I was grasping at straws, because I'm getting tired of being attacked from all different angles by them," (the Charlevoix IDC) Smith said he would be receptive to a single county industrial plan, when a proposal for one is presented to him. "I would seriously look at a single county plan, but for right now, there isn't one, and the growth alliance is all we've got," Smith pointed out that the county makes quarterly payments to the growth alliance and can withdraw its support in 90 days.

Smith said he believes the Charlevoix IDC wants to eliminate the three-county alliance. "I would say that they (the Charlevoix IDC) do want new industry, but they want to call the shots and control it. They think they're very well organized and effective, and they don't need the Alliance."

Charlevoix efforts and results of efforts to retain and attract industry

Three new industries have located in Charlevoix: Woodburn Diamond Dye, Ionex, and American Dye and Tool.

Tax abatements and utility concessions have been made by the city in an effort to attract new industries.

The Charlevoix Industrial Fair was created by LoAnne Brown, a former Charlevoix IDC member, in order to educate the community about industry and to encourage young people looking for jobs to stay in the area.

The Charlevoix Industrial Park was established, with roads and complete utilities to attract new industry.

The IDC visits the local industries on a monthly basis, then invites representatives of the industry to their luncheon meeting, so the industry's needs can be discussed.

Lions Club celebrates 30 years in Charlevoix

(Editor's note: Charlevoix is fortunate to have several active civic groups and clubs. In coming months, the Courier will be offering a series of stories summarizing the background and objectives of some of these clubs. This week's story deals with the Lions Club of Charlevoix. It was submitted by Lion Bern Canham. Members of other local clubs interested in having similar stories in the paper are invited to contact the Courier at 547-6558.)

There's more to Lions than just a local club meeting for fellowship and some local charity fundraising events. Worldwide, there are close to 1.4 million Lions - both men and women.

In Charlevoix there are two Lions Clubs. The "night" Lions Club was formed by Lions who couldn't make the noon Monday meetings of the noon Lions. The night Lions meet twice monthly on Tuesdays at the Legion Hall. Ed Linse is their current "King Lion."

The noon Lions meet on Mondays at Stafford's Weathervane Restaurant. Prior to lunch, current King Lion Bill Dreyer establishes order with the help of the hollow quarter-hungry baseball bat in the hands of Tail Twister Bill Trubilowicz. Prior to lunch, club business is discussed. Following lunch there is a short program. All of this takes place in just an hour.

Charlevoix's two Lions Clubs are among 40,193 local clubs in 171 countries. The clubs make up the International Association of Lions Clubs. The Lions World Headquarters is in Oakbrook, Illinois.

1992 marks the 75th Anniversary of the Lions Club. Twenty-two Lions clubs formed the beginning Association of Lions Clubs in 1917, adopting the phrase "We Serve" as a motto.

Lions are probably best known for sponsorship of eye-related programs, such as their EyeBank and Transplantation Centers; Leader Dog Training Center in Rochester, Michigan; Used Eyeglass Collection Centers (in Charlevoix, the First State Bank and all local Lions).

Not as well known, but also on going are eye programs which include: Preschool and School Vision Screening; Glaucoma and Cataract Screening; Vision Screening for the Aged; Screening for Diabetes; Rehabilitation for the sight-impaired.

The Lions are also deeply involved with research screening and education in other health care fields which include: Ear and hearing problems; the eradication of Hansen's disease (leprosy).

Of a more general nature are programs such as the Leo Clubs for high school students and the Quest program for middle school students. There are also Lion Youth Camps and an International Youth Exchange program. All are available for sponsorship and participation by local service clubs and backed up by the resources and guidance at state, national and international levels.

In 1992, the Charlevoix noon Lions Club turned 30 years old. Of the original 25 members, Don Meggison is the sole active charter member. Ron Winchester, whose father Bob was a charter member, is a second generation member.

Dr. John Lignell and Ray Wood have been active Lions for 29 years.

Active Lions for 15 to 20 years include: George Duke, Tom Duke, Al Ranger, Lou Hollow, Walt Hufford, El Kaiser, Dr. Reid Freidinger, Gene Steele.

Members active for five to 15 years include: Scott Beatty Richard Brandt, Mike Carland, Don Couse, John Dixon, Bill Dreyer, John Gaskin, Dick George, Gary Gleason, Ken Heininger, Rich Kelly, Harold Krusch, Larry Levingood, Bruce MacArthur, Bill Paige, Dr. Dave Strawbridge, Dennis Van Guilder and Gordon Van Wieren.

Active for less than five years are: Jay Bingham, Rich Boggs, Bern Cannan, Jim Cupp, Don Haney, Russ Henderson, John McKown, Dave Oshaben, Bob Rose, Bob Schofield and Kyle Smith. Bill Trubilowicz, Barney Way and Ron Winchester.

Jerry de LaSiverna has been a Lion for 12 years and transferred from a New Jersey club to the Charlevoix Club in 1987.

1991 Lions fundraising projects included: White Cane Days, Christ-

The Charlevoix Lions Club philanthropic budget for 1991 was $5,400. Eighty percent of that money was spent on local service programs. The other 20 percent was given to Lions sponsored eye related agencies in Michigan.

Among the programs the local Lions contributed to in 1991 were: Coleman Scholarships; Mount McCauba Day Camp; an Elementary School Dental Program; Charlevoix Little League; Boys and Girls State; D.A.R.E.; Camp Quality; Quest Program; P.E.A.R.L.; Eye programs; Community Food Pantry; Community Pool; Michigan Leader Dogs; Leader Dog Puppies; Michigan Eye Bank and Transplantation Center.

1991 Lions fundraising projects included: White Cane Days, Christmas Tree Sale; Venetian Festival Chicken Barbecue; Venetian Festival 50/50 Raffle; Winter Carnival Gate Attendants.

It is a strict Lions precept that none of the money collected from public fundraisers can be used for any Club operating expenses: Club expenses, which include annual International Association membership fees, are met from club dues and internal fundraisers.

What does it take to be a Charlevoix Lion? Just a warm friendly outlook on life and the willingness to put these feelings into action alongside a group of men and women who are already on the same track. Should you be interested, talk to any Lions Club member or call Bern Cannan, Membership Committee Chair, 547-5512.

So you'd like to buy a home

If you thought that owning a home was beyond your dreams, think again! If your family income is under $46,345 per year, you may qualify for a home mortgage under the Michigan Initiative Program, which began this past October.

Charlevoix and Emmet County Cooperative Extension Service is offering a workshop series that will help you qualify for a Michigan Initiative mortgage, as well as provide basic information you need to effectively shop for and finance a home. The workshop will take place Saturday, Feb. 8, 1992 from 10 a.m. to 3 p.m.

The goal of the workshop is to provide potential homeowners with information on all aspects of home ownership and to help them decide if home ownership at this time is feasible.

Topics to be covered include: house hunting - how to evaluate a house, inside and out, and the neighborhood; qualifying for a home loan; understanding the criteria lenders use when deciding whether to make a loan; financing a home; understanding the financial aspects of purchasing a home, including monthly costs and mortgage options; and the closing - understanding the closing costs involved in purchasing a home.

The Michigan Initiative helps prospective home buyers by providing education about purchasing a home, cutting the normal down payment requirement to 5 percent, and offering more flexible qualifying criteria than conventional mortgages.

The workshop series is open to all potential homeowners, whether they are interested in the Michigan Initiative or not.

You must pre-register to attend by Monday, Feb. 3, 1992.

To enroll or get more information, call Cooperative Extension Service in Charlevoix County at 582-6232 or Emmet County at 448-1770.

Davis' representative to visit

Congressman Bob Davis' district representative Bill Huber will be at the East Jordan Senior Citizen Center from 11:30 a.m. to 1 p.m. Friday, Jan. 31. Anyone wishing to meet with Huber to discuss a problem they are having with state or federal government is invited to do so. No appointment is necessary.

Ground hog's day unobtrusively observed

By Laurie Lounsbury

Punxsutawney Phil is a far cry from today's hi-tech meteorological equipment; yet every year on Feb. 2, people wait for that groundhog's reaction to the weather to see if it's going to be a long, hard winter. According to legend, if the groundhog sees his shadow on Feb. 2, he is so frightened by the sight of it that he crawls back into his burrow for another six weeks. So if the sun is shining on groundhog's day, it's going to be a long time before the arrival of spring.

Groundhog's Day is a time honored tradition dating back to the eleventh century, where it was observed in England and Germany. The date of Groundhog's Day coincides with Candlemas, a Christian holiday that celebrates the presentation of Jesus to the temple, 40 days after his birth. Candles were lit as a symbol of the light that Jesus would spread upon the world. Maybe a groundhog in the eleventh century saw all of the light from the candles at a time of year when the days are usually short and dim and it frightened him back under the ground.

Many poems and sonnets were written about Groundhog's Day, all of which stressed the fear of a long winter. Apparently the English and Germans had a real loathing for cold weather, as is shown in the lines of an old English poem: "The hind would as lief see his wife on the bier, As that Gandlemas Day should be pleasant and clear." A wife on the bier in merry old England must have been a really dreadful sight.

When the groundhog's day tradition was brought to the United States, it was most prominently celebrated in Lancaster County, Pa. According to history, a group of "merry wags" in the early 1900s organized the Slumbering Groundhog Lodge in Lancaster County. The "merry wags" would go into the fields on groundhog's day, wearing silk hats and carrying canes, and would poke around in the burrows of woodchucks, hoping to wake one up. When a groundhog emerged from a hole, they would watch his behavior, then return to the village and report their findings. At some point in history, they decided that Punxsutawney was a better area for groundhog observation, so the tradition moved to its new location, about 60 miles northeast of Pittsburgh. According to the Slumbering Groundhog Lodge records before their move to Punxsutawney, the groundhog was right about his winter weather predictions eight times, indefinite five times, and wrong seven times.

Groundhog's Day has no real meaning for people living north of the forty-fifth parallel, because winter will most assuredly continue for another six weeks, regardless of the groundhog's prediction.

Groundhog's Day today is a unique cause for celebration for forgetful individuals and single people, among others. Here's a list of the top ten reasons to appreciate Groundhog's Day, regardless of the weather.

- #1: You don't have to send your sweetheart a Groundhog's Day card. Hallmark hasn't invented those cards yet.
- #2: You don't have to feel badly if you don't have a date on Groundhog's Eve. No balls drop in Times Square on Groundhog's Eve, so it isn't a big deal.
- #3: You don't have to take your kids out in the cold and go "tuck of groundhogging" on Groundhog's Day.
- #4: You don't have to invite all of your relatives over for Groundhog's Day dinner, and then sit around and watch Groundhog Bowl games on T.V.
- #5: You don't have to attend wild parties and drink groundhog-colored beer and wear a pin that says, "Kiss me, I'm a groundhog."
- #6: You don't have to decorate a float for the Groundhog's Day Parade.
- #7: If you own a restaurant, you don't have to come up with a Groundhog's Day Dinner Special.
- #8: If you're a woman, you don't have to feel badly if your sweetheart doesn't send you a dozen roses for Groundhog's Day.
- #9: If you're a man, you don't have to send a dozen roses to your sweetheart for Groundhog's Day.
- #10: If you're pregnant, you don't have to try to induce labor so that you can have the first baby born on Groundhog's Day.

BEACONS

by Rev. Lowell Anderson

"By invitation only" is what you've heard, and you've not received one of those invitations! How does it make you feel? Well, you say, that depends on what the invitation is for. If it's for one of those super-duper fund raising banquets, or the "preferred customer" sale at one of those high priced stores, you say, "who cares?" But if the invitation is by people you highly value to a function you esteem to be really important, you feel slighted... left out... excluded!

On the other side of the coin, if you've received an invitation to an exclusive function it makes you feel gratified... counted in... included! You feel honored, valued and esteemed.

You have received the greatest invitation that is possible to receive on earth! It is the invitation to know God Through Jesus Christ His Son! In fact the invitation is delivered to you personally by Jesus Christ right to your door! "Here I am!" I stand at the door (of your life) and knock. IF ANYONE hears my voice (of invitation) and opens the door, I will come in... (Rev 3:20) "God does not simply make a general announcement." He extends a personal invitation... to everyone! No one is excluded, everyone is included. Everyone is esteemed worthy! All are honored by His invitation!

Accept Him into your life. Receive Him as your Savior. Attend the celebration in His honor every Sunday at your church. He'll be there and He'll be glad to see you!

(Rev. Lowell Anderson is pastor of the Charlevoix Assembly of God Church. Beacons of Blessings is provided to the Courier by Anderson and other members of the Charlevoix Ministerial Association.)

College musicians to perform at Congregational Church

The Oliver College music program will be stopping at Charlevoix on its annual Spring Music Tour. A total of 65 students will be performing during the tour which will spotlight each of the organization's major music ensembles including the Choir, Chorale, Concert Band, Jazz Ensemble and Guitar Ensemble.

The tour will perform at 7:30 p.m. Friday, Feb. 7 at the First Congregational Church. This concert is free and open to the public. More information may be obtained by calling the church office at 547-9122.

Film to be shown at Assembly of God

"Children At Risk," the latest two-part film series produced by Dr. James Dobson and "Focus On The Family," will be featured at the Charlevoix Assembly of God at 6 p.m. Sunday evenings, Feb. 9 and Feb. 16.

Negative forces in our society are greatly influencing the hearts and minds of our children. Where these influences will lead and the impact they will have on the values of the next generation is the theme of the films. In this eye-opening two-part series several pertinent questions are addressed by Dr. James Dobson, and Gary Bauer, President of the Family Research Council. With heartrending urgency they discuss the influences that increasingly threaten homes and families.

Most importantly, the films show how concerned parents and concerned citizens can take action "to rebuild the kind of America we can confidently hand to the next generation."

The public is invited to come see and hear this presentation. The church is located on Highway M66, two miles south of US 31.

Antrim Dells joins golf council

Antrim Dells Golf Club has joined the Northwest Michigan Golf Council. Antrim Dells is home to an 18-hole golf club layout.

The Northwest Michigan Golf Council markets area golf courses and golf resorts as America's Summer Golf Capital. Founded in 1984, the organization continues to add new members with area growth as a major golf travel destination.

The council announced that Sugar Loaf Resort in Cedar and Little Traverse Bay Golf Club in Harbor Springs have also joined the group as new members.

In another major move, three area convention and visitors bureaus have become a part of the fast-growing council. They include the Grand Traverse Convention and Visitors Bureau, Charlevoix Convention and Visitors Bureau and Boyne Country Convention and Visitors Bureau.

"We are very excited to have Antrim Dells and the other new members the council," said council President Bill Arnold of High Pointe Golf Club. "The quality of summer golf and lodging in our area and the people behind the golf council will assure Northwest Michigan's success in this growing industry."

Artwork exhibited at McCune Center

Forty-one selected works, which include all types of print media, are part of the show exhibiting the Eleventh Annual Alma College statewide print competition. Included are eight cash award winners including a 21 color serigraph by Lucille Nawara of Huntington Woods, MI, which received the Arts Foundation of Michigan Purchase Award.

The display includes various print media including serigraph, intaglio, xerography as well as woodcut, etching and lithography.

The show is sponsored by the Crooked Tree Arts Council which operates the McCune Arts Center and sponsors a year around program in visual and performing arts, arts classes and workshops.

It will be open free to the public from 10 a.m. to 5 p.m. Monday through Saturday.

Masons gain a little ground

Sure, the Masons won last Thursday evening's play by nine points, but if they hope to overtake the Odd Fellows they're going to have to do even better than that. After four weeks of play, the Odd Fellows lead the 62nd annual tournament by 253 points.

Gerald Johnson continued to have a hot hand for the Masons, scoring 966 points this past week. Grant Sneathen led the Odd Fellows with 960 points.

Play will continue at 7:30 p.m. this Thursday at the Masonic Temple.

Drama group advances to regionals

The Charlevoix Performing Arts team is on its way to the regional competition, after earning enough total points at the district meet to qualify for regionals. The judges at the district meet, held at the Grand Haven High School, gave high marks to Charlevoix in the categories of educational value, music, and costuming. One judge was so impressed with the educational value of the original play, "Oh Freedom" that she suggested Charlevoix should pursue a Michigan Arts grant and take the show on tour. Honors for the performance went to: B.J. Van Loo, an excellent award for acting, Ellen McKinney, a superior award for acting, and for the whole team, a superior award for research.

Fire destroys home

A Friday morning fire destroyed much of the interior of a home belonging to Tom and Rita Moore.

The fire began between 9:30 and 10 a.m. at the home on Marion Center Road. The Moores were in Bellaire at the time and a neighbor spotted the fire.

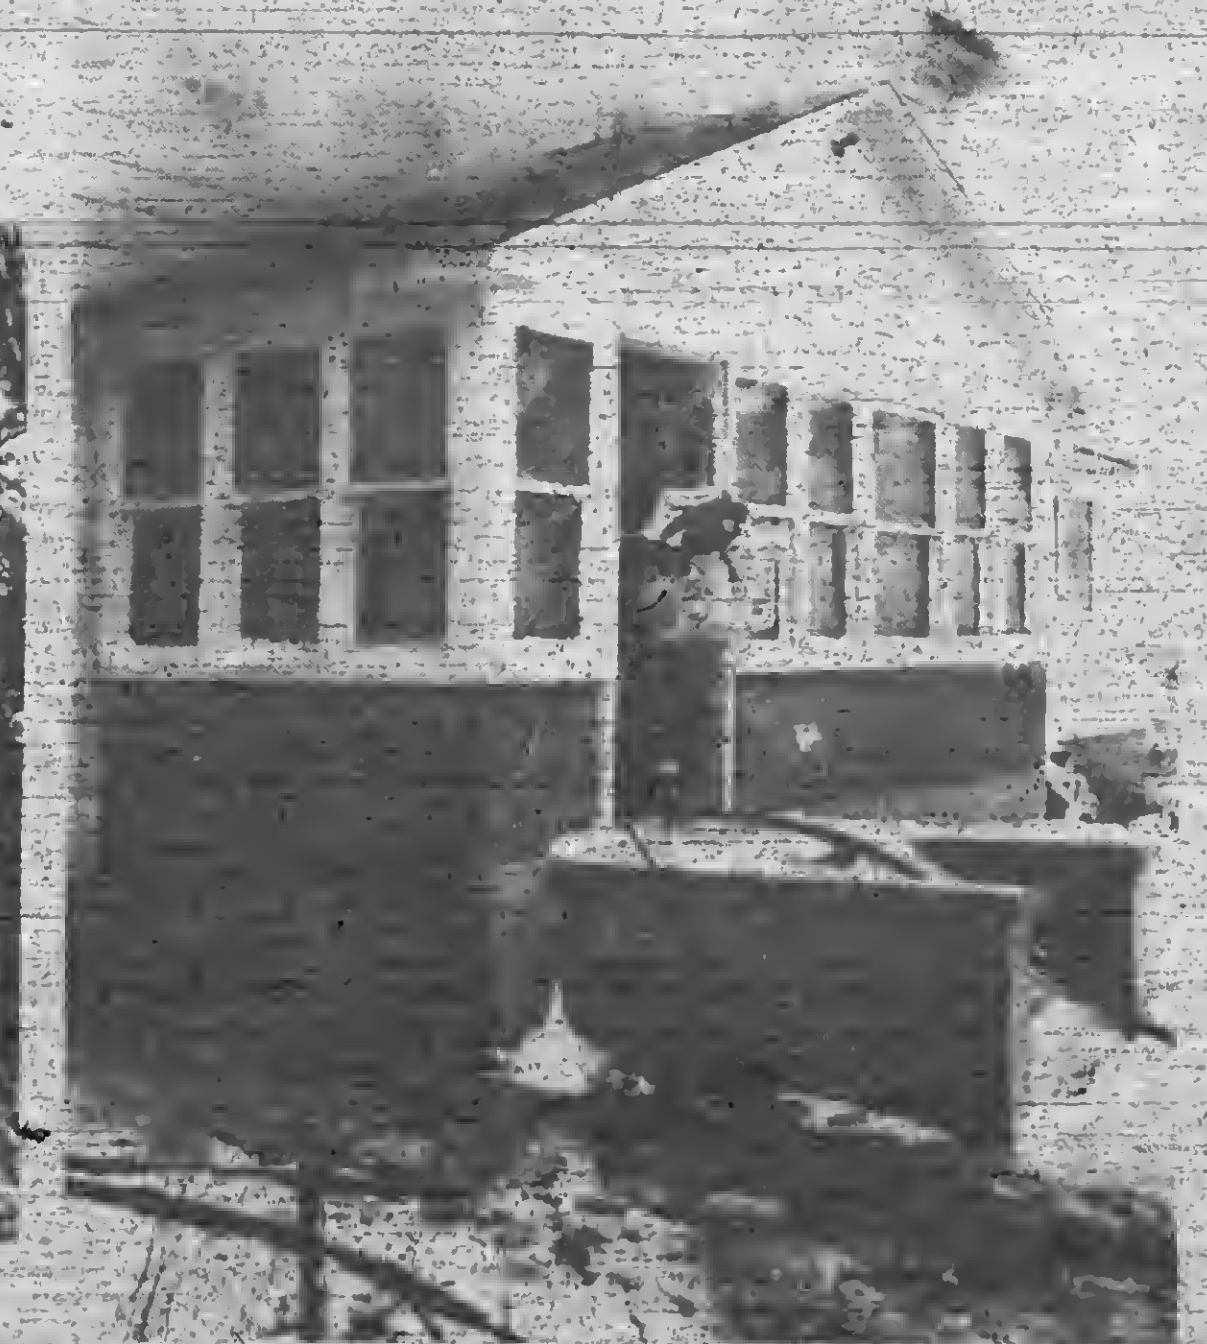

Investigators suspect that the fire began in an electrical outlet in an upstairs bedroom.

The Moores were not aware of the fire until they returned home to find firemen at their home.

Much of the second floor collapsed into the first floor, but a children's bedroom at the rear of the home was saved.

Contacted Tuesday, Tom Moore said estimates are being calculated to rebuild the home. He said several people have been dropping off clothes and offering to help the family.

"We're doing just fine," he said. "We've got a good community here. We've got a lot of friends."

Company builds Big Rock simulator

(The following story is one in a series of stories about area businesses being written for the Courier by Ralph McRae. McRae is a former council member and mayor and is currently a member of the Charlevoix Industrial Development Committee.)

By Ralph McRae

One of the multitude of regulations governing nuclear plants dictates that each plant shall build and operate its own training simulator. In the United States, there are hundreds of licensed operators at nuclear plants. Each of them has received his basic training on some type of simulator.

Training to become a licensed nuclear plant operator involves rigorous study courses and several written examinations under the supervision of the Nuclear Regulatory Commission (NRC). License fees for each operator cost between $6,000 and $10,000. Even after an operator is licensed, he is still on probation for two years and can only observe or serve as an assistant to an experienced operator.

Even after becoming an operator, all operators must take written exams and attend simulator training each year.

The Big Rock Point nuclear plant was the last plant in the country to have its own simulator. The simulator is an expensive piece of equipment, normally costing between $10 million and $12 million.

The simulator was built for Big Rock by Real Time Technology. Real Time Technology is headed by its president C.A. (Al) Williams. The 33-year-old Williams has been involved with nuclear energy for much of his life. At age 16 he became a student at Florida Technology College. Later he joined the Army and became part of a group studying nuclear reactors.

Williams first job in the private sector was with Virginia Electric Power Company where he was put in charge of constructing a nuclear plant simulator. As president of Real Time Technology, Williams was directly responsible for designing and assembling Big Rock's simulator.

The simulator is no simple device. Thirty-five miles of wire are connected by thousands of leads.

During assembly of the simulator more advanced microchips became available. The project's completion deadline was extended so the Big Rock simulator could take advantage of the new technology. As a result, the Big Rock simulator has a much higher technological rating than most others in the country.

Big Rock has 35 certified operators who are divided into five groups. The operators use the simulator to learn how to react quickly and correctly to emergency scenarios.

The simulator is housed in its own building close to the plant's main building. Setting in a well-illuminated space, the simulator is 40-feet long, including two projecting wings. Its high panels contain a vast array of electronic instruments. Its long console is filled with knobs, handles, switches and lighted push buttons. All are used to respond to the information conveyed by the dials, recorders and flashing panel lights.

The most amazing part of the simulator is what is behind the display panels. There, both walls of a narrow passageway are covered with thousands of multi-colored wires and cables. In this confined space, men worked for months assembling hundreds of circuits. As the job progressed, the circuits were tested and retested. Original plant drawings were analyzed and entered into computers.

It took 15 months, including a month of testing, to fulfill the simulator contract. The final inspection was made by the NRC. Consumers benefitted from Williams' previous experience building simulators. Due to that experience, the cost of the simulator was held to $2 million.

Following the simulator's completion, Real Time established a new office downtown in the Market Mall.

Grange hosts annual sleigh ride

Three teams of horses and approximately 60 people, ranging in age from 1 to 72, took a sleigh ride through the woods and fields south of Charlevoix Saturday afternoon during an annual Barnard Grange sleigh ride. The weather was ideal with bright sun, frosty air and fresh, powdery snow. After the ride, homemade chili, bread, cookies, hot chocolate and coffee were served at the Grange Hall. The horse teams pulling the sleighs belonged to Archie Potter, Jim Potter and Bob Heeres. (Photos courtesy of Barnard Grange.)

Band students play well at solo-ensemble

Thirteen Charlevoix High School instrumental music students participated in this year's District solo and ensemble festival Saturday in Gaylord. The students performed musical selections as soloists and in small ensembles at the festival along with instrumental musicians from more than 30 other schools from throughout northern Michigan.

In preparation for this event, several weeks ago students were given selections of music from which they chose one to learn and perform. The responsibility for preparing the music is left to each individual student, with occasional help from the band director. Charlevoix band director Terry Isenberger offered high praise for the band students who devoted the time and work necessary to prepare for the festival.

The following Charlevoix entries in the festival received first division (I) ratings: Jake Porath, flute solo; Janel Campbell, clarinet solo; Chris Cupp, clarinet solo; Annette Gardner, bassoon solo; Sheila Siegwart, trumpet solo; Callie Siwarga, trumpet solo; Chris Cupp and Janel Campbell, clarinet duet.

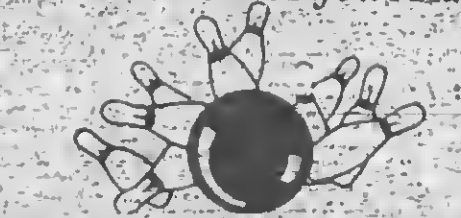

Receiving second division (II) ratings were: Annette Gardner, flute solo; Nicole Moore, trumpet solo; Russell Hand, trombone solo; Mike Bennett, trombone solo; Andrew Laucher, trombone solo; Stephanie Boss, piano solo; Russell Hand and Jaime Stebe, trombone duet.

Piano accompaniments for the events were played by Steve Stargardt, Jackie Boog and Anne Fiedler.

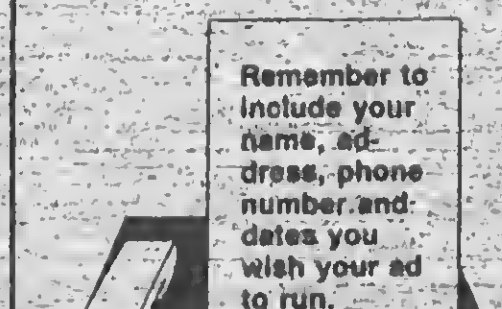

Several Charlevoix band students received top ratings in solo-ensemble competition this past weekend. Students participating in the competition were: (from left) Callie Siwarga, Mike Bennett, Jaime Stebe, Janel Campbell, Russell Hand, Nicole Moore, Stephanie Boss, Lori Cummings, Andrew Laucher, Chris Cupp and Annette Gardner. Future of local school discussed

By Wendi Wright

Approximately 250 people crowded into the Charlevoix High School cafeteria last Thursday night for a special meeting of the school's Strategic Planning Team. The community was invited to share thoughts on school improvement and a lot of people accepted that invitation.

The meeting gave community members an opportunity to tell the Strategic Planning team what kind of improvements they feel need to be made within the school system. It also allowed the school to explain Public Act (PA) 25, the state law which has triggered the Strategic Planning process.

Following an introduction by Roberta Jackson, school superintendent, the audience watched a videotape about changing one's perception of how things are done and opening one's mind to new ways of thinking. The main point of the video is that the world is changing rapidly and methods of business (or teaching in school) need to change to keep pace with the rest of the world. Things that worked 20, or even 10, years ago are no longer effective.

Completely changing the process and expectations in Michigan's schools is the point behind PA 25, and the Strategic Planning team in Charlevoix, Michigan has chosen to adopt as its foundation for education an outcomes-based system. (That simply means a school system sets its goals for graduates first and then develops a curriculum and program to help students meet

City council reviews proposed recreation plan

By L. Scott Swanson

A community swimming pool and improvements to Bridge Park are the two most expensive projects on a proposed city recreation plan and also drew the most comment at Monday evening's city council meeting.

The council reviewed the proposed plan which will now go back to the city planning commission and then be brought back before the council Feb. 17. City planner Gerry Harsch presented the proposed plan to the council. He explained that the plan is something of a wish list that identifies what the city's recreational needs are expected to be for the next several years.

The plan lists a community swimming pool as carrying a $1 million price tag. A proposed Bridge Park project had an estimated $1.1 million price tag with half of that ($550,000) proposed to come out of the city's recreational budget. Both projects have been given higher price tags in the past, $2.2 million for a pool and $1.6 million for Bridge Park, but the $1 million and $1.1 million figures are the figures currently being discussed.

Inclusion of a swimming pool in the city recreation plan is not something new. Last year, the city council agreed to incorporate a community swimming pool into the city master plan. The difference between then and now is simply that the entire plan is being revised and a community swimming pool is one aspect of that overall revision.

A key decision for the council within the next few weeks is whether or not the city will be willing to sponsor a grant application for a pool. The grant application would be made to the Michigan Recreational Bond program, but the application has to be made by a municipal entity, in the case of the pool that means the city, the township or the school. Last year the school board agreed to sponsor the grant application. The application was denied and a related millage proposal failed this past May.

Since that time pool proponents have conducted a survey of voters and have attempted to formulate a swimming pool authority. The authority would be, or was to have been, composed of representatives of area municipalities.

Presumably, the authority was also to have been the agency which would apply for grants. However, at Monday evening's council meeting Harsch said the city has been corresponding with the Department of Natural Resources (DNR) which administers the recreation bond program and has been informed that a pool authority would not be eligible to apply for a grant.

Harsch said that if the city is to be the grant applicant, that decision would have to be made yet this month in order for that to be included in the recreation plan. The council's only other regular meeting this month is scheduled for Feb. 17.

Dave Strawbridge, a pool advocate, said, "I hope the city council will not put out of the realm of possibility the city sponsoring a grant application." Strawbridge cited the most recent pool group survey and said the survey indicated a 70 percent approval rating for a community pool.

Public invited to see high school drama production

"Oh, Freedom" Charlevoix High School's original dramatic musical will be presented to the public Saturday Feb. 22, at 7:30 p.m., and Sunday, Feb. 23 at 2 p.m.
 "Oh, Freedom," written by Charlevoix Performing Arts Coach, Connie Ford, based on the Civil War epic "John Brown's Body," and other historical and literary documents of the era, has won the praise of judges in the Michigan-wide high school drama competition for its historical accuracy and dramatic effect.

The show dramatizes the impact of the Civil War, the drive to abolish slavery, and preserve the Union.

The era is brought alive as we see Cudgo and Bess, a slave couple struggle to win their freedom; Ezra and Sarah a northern merchant and his wife ask questions as war looms. General and Mrs. Robert E. Lee are torn between loyalties to both north and south. Jack and Grace the young northern newlyweds become separated by war. The Wingate family, southern plantation owners try to sustain a way of life, and John Brown the zealot and abolitionist attacks Harpers Ferry making war inevitable.

The play opens on a slave ship then moves between the rural south, northern cities and farms, and the battlefields. The action is underscored by such familiar and stirring songs as the "Battle Hymn of the Republic," also sung as "John Brown's Body," as well as such other well known folk songs such as, "When Johnny Comes Marching Home," "Goober Peas," "Oh Dear, What Can the Matter Be," and "The Cruel War is Over." In addition to the original script by Ford the play is set to authentic Civil War era music, researched and arranged by Sulane Hamilton, who has acted as volunteer musical director for the team for six years.

"Oh, Freedom" is a luxuriant production with elaborate scenery, costuming which won judges praises at the District level competition, and carefully selected props which remain true to the time period.

"Oh, Freedom" tickets, (adults $5, senior citizens and students $3, family $12) are on sale through Charlevoix High School performing arts students and the high school office (547-3222).

Mayor Dave Novotny said he feels that local people have indicated that they only want a pool if there is no possibility of local tax dollars being used for funding.

Barry Wood, an audience member, questioned the pool survey results and said that in his opinion the survey was conducted so as to come up with predetermined results.

Strawbridge argued that the survey contacted every seventh voter who voted in the May 13 school pool election. He said that 70 percent of those contacted indicated they would be in favor of a pool if it could be done without the use of local taxes and that 56 percent of those contacted said they would be in favor of a pool if construction costs could be kept in the $1 million range.

The proposed Bridge Park project affects the area water front area bordered by Bridge Street and the lakeward ends of Park Avenue and Clinton Streets. It would eliminate the old sewage treatment plant and Beaver Island Boat Company buildings, replacing them with a building in Bridge Park and a smaller building closer to the channel. The building in Bridge Park would have a grassed roof and public restrooms. The project would also modify parking and traffic patterns in the Bridge Park area. A model of the proposal is on display in City Hall.

Polly Verwys, an audience member, said she is concerned about the Bridge Park proposal and asked if that was something the Downtown Development Authority (DDA) board could undertake without input from citizens. City attorney Jim Young said that because the project is a public improvement, before anything could be done the project would have to be considered at a public hearing before the city planning commission. Because Bridge Park is city property, the city council will have final approval on anything that is to be done in the park.

Local man dies in diving accident

Charlevoix City Police will be assisted by the State Police underwater unit in attempting to determine the cause of a drowning which took the life of 28-year-old Don Mol.

Mol was diving in Round Lake last Thursday afternoon and had been doing maintenance work on a boat when something went awry. At 1:57 p.m. the Charlevoix County Sheriff's Department received a call that there was a diver trapped beneath the ice. Rescue workers arrived on the scene within minutes. They could see Mol motionless beneath the ice and they broke through the ice and pulled him out.

Mol had a pulse when he was pulled from the water, but died a short time later at Charlevoix Area Hospital. City police chief Dennis Halverson wouldn't speculate as to what might have gone wrong with the dive, but said that with the help of the State Police underwater unit police are attempting to reconstruct what happened.

"I'm not sure we'll ever know for certain, but we'll do our best to put it back together," Halverson said.

Mol was a Charlevoix native who graduated from Charlevoix High School in 1981. He worked at Irish Boat Shop for several years and for the past two years worked as a boat broker for Charlevoix Boat Shop. He was a skilled boater as well as an avid outdoorsman who enjoyed hunting, fishing and waterskiing.

PTA hosts frisbee throwers

The Charlevoix Elementary School P.T.A. is sponsoring a presentation by the "Flying Aces," an entertaining team of professional frisbee throwers. The show will take place at 7 p.m. Feb. 11 in the high school gym. The Flying Aces perform an acrobatic freestyle routine, an instructional segment, and a finale in which two players get five discs flying at once.

The program also includes student participation, pairing students off to compete against each other in a game called speedflow. The Flying Aces bill themselves as world class freestyle players who are also skilled speakers with positive mesthose goals.) All Michigan schools are required to develop a school improvement plan which states the school's desired goals or outcomes and proposed programs to meet them. Jackson explained that for Charlevoix to accomplish this and meet its goals there will be many instances where people have to completely change the way they think about schools.

Following the videotape, those present broke into smaller groups of eight to 10 people. Each group was led by a facilitator (a member of the Strategic Planning Team) and was allowed close to an hour to discuss what the school is doing well, areas where improvements need to be made, educational priorities for the future and how they can be addressed, and the biggest obstacles to improving schools. "All of the thoughts voiced in the groups were recorded and are being compiled for submission to the Strategic Planning team which will use the thoughts as fodder for decisions regarding school improvement."

OPINIONS

Attempted legal logic

By Laurie Lounsbury

The law is a funny thing, no, that's not right. What the lawyers do with the law is the funny thing. Literally. The laws that govern our society are, for the most part, clear and sensible. The funny stuff happens when the lawyers start messing around with sensible laws and create insensible laws on behalf of their client. It's all a part of the lawyer/client ritual known as plea bargaining, and it's not unlike watching two crafty old guys in a third world country haggle over the price of a camel.

The ritual begins when a cop catches someone breaking a known, clearly defined law. Maybe it's a couple of young dudes taking a "misappropriated" car out for a joyride. Those wild and crazy guys get themselves arrested for joyriding. Trembling with fear, they get a lawyer, who promises to get them off on a reduced or lesser charge. When a suitable lesser charge doesn't apply, the lawyers put the word "attempted" in front of the original charge, so joyriding becomes "attempted joyriding." "Attempted joyriding" brings to mind a seven year old boy behind the wheel of his dad's '57 Chevy, bouncing up and down and "attempting" to drive.

This kind of plea bargaining is a necessary part of our legal system. It lets the lawbreaker think he's getting a good deal, a bargain so to speak, and heaven knows we all love a good bargain. It also makes the client feel more inclined to pay his legal bill. The other necessary function of plea bargaining is to let lawyers earn a living. Without plea bargaining, people would ACTUALLY be found guilty of the law they ACTUALLY broke! Then a whole bunch of lawyers would be out of a job, and they might decide to go into divorce law, or worse—POLITICS!

In order for plea bargaining to make any sense at all, the reduced or lesser charge should be able to stand on it's own as a sensible law.

Illegal entry is against the law, and it makes sense. Illegal entry without permission is ludicrous. Picture a cop arresting someone who is breaking into a building.

Cop: "Say there, fella. I believe you're entering this building illegally. Did you get permission to do that?"

Illegal Entrer: "Uh, yeah. I got a note from my mom right here. It says, 'Johnny has my permission to enter this building illegally.'"

Cop: "Oh well, in that case, go ahead, but keep the noise down while you're breaking that window, or I'll have to arrest you for attempting to disturb the peace."

Or how about the "attempted disorderly person" charge, reduced from disorderly person?

Cop: "Hey, buddy, what do you think you're doing?"

Person: "I'm being disorderly, can't you see that?"

Cop: "I only see you writing a clear, legible note to your city councilmen and sticking it neatly on the door of city hall."

Person: "Well, I was going to stand out in the street during the council meeting and shout obscenities, but that seemed so rude..."

Another popular charge in this category is "attempted indecent exposure." That would be your flasher, dressed to the nines in a fancy double breasted trenchcoat from London. As he approaches an unsuspecting woman he positions himself, smiles, and FLASHES! Woops, no he doesn't flash; he forgot to unbutton the other side of the double breasted garment, so all she gets is a less than titillating view of the coat's flannel lining. Attempting to flash and then failing to do so is embarrassing to the flasher, but tough to prosecute as a legal charge.

The list of lesser charges is impressive in it's absurdity. There's the Attempted Drunk and Disorderly Person, the tried his best, but the beer was flat and he wanted to get home in time for Northern Exposure, the Attempted Peeping Tom, (the ladder to the bedroom window collapsed and he landed in the hydrangea bushes, breaking his leg and giving him the cause to sue the "peep-ed" for failure to maintain safe "peeping" ladders), not to mention the Attempted use of a

It's good for school to look ahead

A public meeting which took place last Thursday evening may prove to be one of the most significant steps forward the Charlevoix School System has taken in recent years. Approximately 250 people, including all school personnel, and many community members, attended the meeting which was part of the process leading to the adoption of a school improvement plan.

Public education throughout the United States is going through a time of change. Currently there is dissatisfaction with America's educational system and people from outside and from within the educational field are demanding improvement. As this change occurs, Charlevoix is going to find itself in one of three positions: we are either going to be among the leading schools; we are going to be just another face in the crowd; or we are going to drag our feet and allow our children to fall behind while others move ahead.

Last week's meeting was important in that it indicated there are a number of people in the community who prefer to see our local school system and the children it is assigned to teach in the forefront rather than bringing up the rear in educational innovation.

Roberta Jackson, the new school superintendent, opened the meeting with a speech which was refreshingly direct. In her speech, Jackson put on the table for discussion several concerns which people have for years been talking about among themselves over coffee, yet for one reason or another haven't always felt free to comment on at public meetings. Among the concerns she listed were funding, staffing, extracurricular activities, busing, and the future of middle school and other possible facility needs.

In coming years the Charlevoix School System will be addressing all of these questions. Concerning funding, it is likely that one of the state proposals on property taxes will be adopted. When that happens, school revenue increases due to rising property values will be frozen or at least limited. That is going to give voters more direct control over school revenue increases. How will that affect the Charlevoix School System?

In regard to school staffing, within the next five to 10 years a large percentage of the school staff will be replaced due to retirement. Given the status of teacher tenure laws and the difficulty of getting rid of classroom duds, the importance of sound teacher hiring practices can't be overemphasized. What can Charlevoix do to assure that the best possible people are hired?

Looking at extracurricular activities, how many activities can a small school offer given limited financial resources and talent pool? For example there has been interest expressed in having soccer become a school sport. Is that in the best interest of Charlevoix's educational program? Or perhaps would it be better for some of the other sports which are currently affiliated with the school to be run separately from the school?

There are still some people who want to see the school buses run one rather than two bus routes. There are also some people who are adamantly opposed to that. What is going to be done about that issue?

The middle school building is older than most people in the community. What is the Charlevoix school system going to do about that? Should, or perhaps the right question is can, the old building be refurbished? Or should a new building be constructed? If so, where? Should the new building include a theater?

These are all questions which the community is going to have to address. As a community, we can either wait until the problems become so pressing that we have to make a last minute decision in a crisis situation, or we can look to the future, get the problems on the table and thrash them out while we have time to establish a plan that is proactive rather than reactive.

Analyzing our local school system and putting it under scrutiny doesn't mean that we have a bad school system. In fact, as Jackson said she feels the thrust of the effort should be that we have a system which is "good and getting better." Public meetings such as the one which took place last Thursday are good for the school and community. The school improvement process should continue with the same boldness and receptiveness to community input and change which were expressed at that meeting.

Telephone for Threats, (he never should have left AT & T).

Perhaps the way to eliminate these trumped up, reduced charges is to make videotapes of lawyers pleading their reduced charge cases and send them to "America's Funniest Home Videos." It might look something like this:

"Your honor, my client was heretofore and thusly and such and so partaking in the consumption of alcoholic beverages, and therefore and purportedly, rendered into an allegedly inebriated state, whereupon and hitherto causing his eyeballs to be acutely sensitive to yellow blinking traffic lights, so inasmuch and accordingly, my client tossed his underpants on the offending object. My client, by and through his lawyers, therefore renders a plea of only attempting to be drunk; since he passed out before he got REALLY drunk, and a plea of only attempting to be disorderly, since he did not succeed in his attempted high wire act to retrieve his underpants before he fell down and passed out..." A videotape of that scenario might not really eliminate these reduced charges from the legal system, but it would probably bring additional revenue into the courtroom, because it's a shoe-in for the $10,000 first prize. It could also give birth to an all new television show: "America's Funniest Wastes of Taxpayers' Money in the Courtroom."

Local Republican supports Engler's plan

Editor,

This past week, Governor John Engler delivered his second State of the State message calling for Michigan cities to "Buy American/Buy Michigan." He called for lower taxes, job growth and better education.

The governor offered a plan of action to create jobs for the State, which includes a cut and cap on property taxes, $1,000 tax credit to hire an unemployed individual, a change in Michigan's (Small) Single Business Tax. The governor called for the legislature to enact reforms in education that he proposed last year, "Michigan 2000." The governor pledged to expand the program "Families First" in all 83 counties. He also announced the creation of "Communities First," a plan to coordinate state services especially Education, Social Services, Public Health and Mental Health at a local level.

I believe we all should get behind the governor for what he has done to balance the State Budget. We should also call and write our State Representatives and Senators asking them to help him streamline State government to reduce costs.

Sincerely,
John E. Haggard
Charlevoix Republican County Chairman

A bustle bow of satin complimented the back of the dress. The bride's bow of satin complimented the back of the dress. The bride's headpiece was entwined with beaded pearls, while the flowing veil featured flowered lace cutouts. The bride carried a bouquet of twelve red silk roses in a bed of balsam fern, and beaded pearls.

Linda Swanagan was the matron of honor, and the bridesmaid was Sheila Bradley. The attendants wore floor length gowns with fitted bodices and full skirts in carnation red. Each attendant carried six silk roses imbedded in fern and beaded pearls.

Screening offered for all area women

By Laurie Lounsbury
Womancare, a new program offered by District Health Department #3, will provide comprehensive health screening for all area women, regardless of income or insurance. The Womancare program was made possible by a Federal grant. The State of Michigan is one of four states in the country to receive this federal grant, and District Health Department #3 was one of the leading local health departments to put together a proposal in order to compete for the federal grant.

Womancare will provide pelvic and pap tests, clinical breast exams, and screening mammograms for any women in Charlevoix, Emmet, Antrim, and Otsego Counties. Fees will be free or based on the ability to pay, with a sliding scale.

Diane Liverance, of the District Health Department, said the goal is to screen 1,250 women this year. Liverance explained that many women are reluctant to have mammograms. Some women don't undergo screening mammograms because of the inability to pay, and others avoid it out of fear.

"What women don't realize is that most breast cancers can be cured if found early enough," Liverance said.

According to statistics, one in nine women will develop breast cancer. If a woman gets a screening mammogram through the District Health Department and further diagnostic tests are needed, the District Health Department will also pay for pertinent, recognized diagnostic follow-ups. The District Health Department has made arrangements with local physicians for referrals, so that no woman needing further treatment will be

Beacons of Blessings

(Beacons of Blessings is provided to the Courier by Rev. Robert Zeeryp and other members of the Charlevoix Ministerial Association.)

By Rev. Robert Zeeryp, East Upright Church of God

The Bible has lived for thousands of years. This in itself is a strange and significant fact. Hundreds of centuries have ticked away. Powerful civilizations have flourished, decayed and vanished, leaving scarcely a trace of their existence.

War and fire, human negligence have wiped out records to so large an extent that the books of such nations as the Phoenicians, Hittites, Cretans and many others are lost to us forever. Yet these ancient writings of Hebrews have survived when by the law of probability they likewise should have perished.

1 Peter 1:24,25 The grass withereth and the flower thereof falleth away; but the Word of the Lord endureth forever.

Charles Darwin, the Father of Evolution, stated that only the fittest survive and you must agree that the Bible possesses an extraordinary power of survival.

The emperor of Rome, Diocletian, issued a medal on which the words, "The Christian Religion is destroyed" were imprinted.

Another man, Tom Paine, who boasted, "I have gone through the Bible as a man would go through a forest with an axe to fell trees. I have cut down tree after tree; here they lie, they will never grow again."

Despite all of these and many more critics and their onslaughts and attempts to destroy this Book, it has survived.

Henry Stanley journeying to Africa started with 180 pounds of books. Hunger and illness forced the sacrifice of the unessentials. He discarded volume after volume until only four books were left. Shakespeare, 2 copies on navigation and the Bible. Shakespeare was soon burned for warmth, the books on navigation were abandoned by the way, only the Bible was left. During the expedition He read the Bible through three times. He writes later what that reading did to him, and for him.

"During my first attack of African fever I took up the Bible to while away the tedious hours. I read Job then the Psalms. The Bible with its noble and simple language, I continued to read with a higher and truer understanding than I have ever before conceived, its powerful verses had a different meaning, a more penetrating influence in the silence of the wilds. I came to feel a strange glow while absorbed in its pages. When I laid down the book, my mind commenced to feed upon what the memory suggested. Then rose the ghost of bygone yearnings, haunting every cranny of the brain with numbers of baffled hopes and unfulfilled good intentions. Alone in my tent I flung myself on my knees and poured out my soul utterly in secret prayer to Him for whom I had so little affection for. To Him who had led me here mysteriously into Africa, there to reveal himself, and his will. I then became inspired with fresh desire to serve him to the utmost."

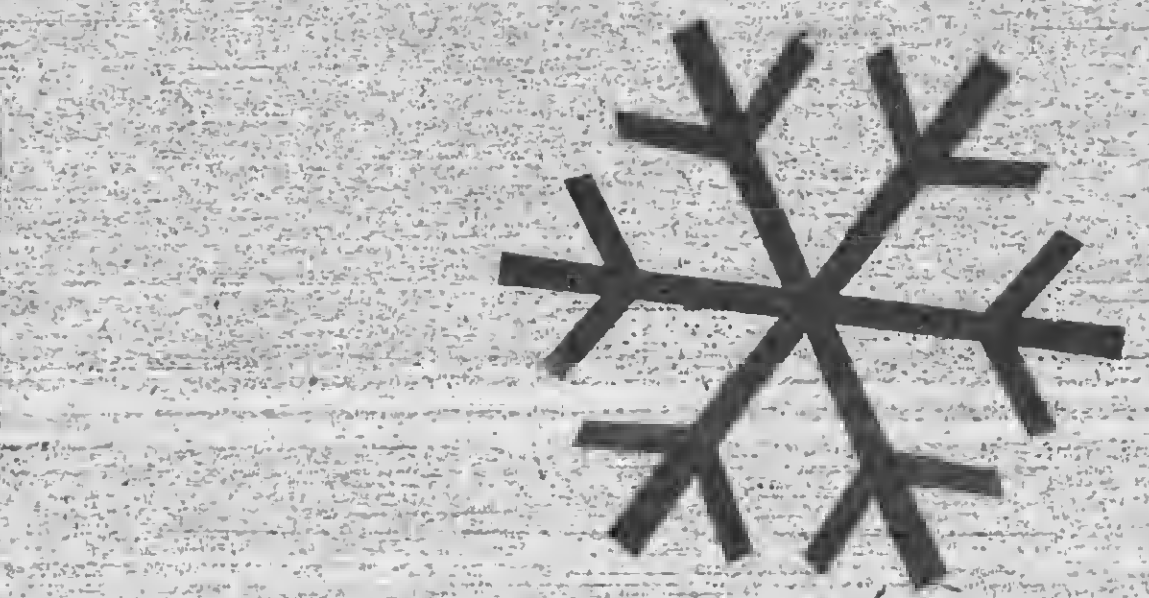

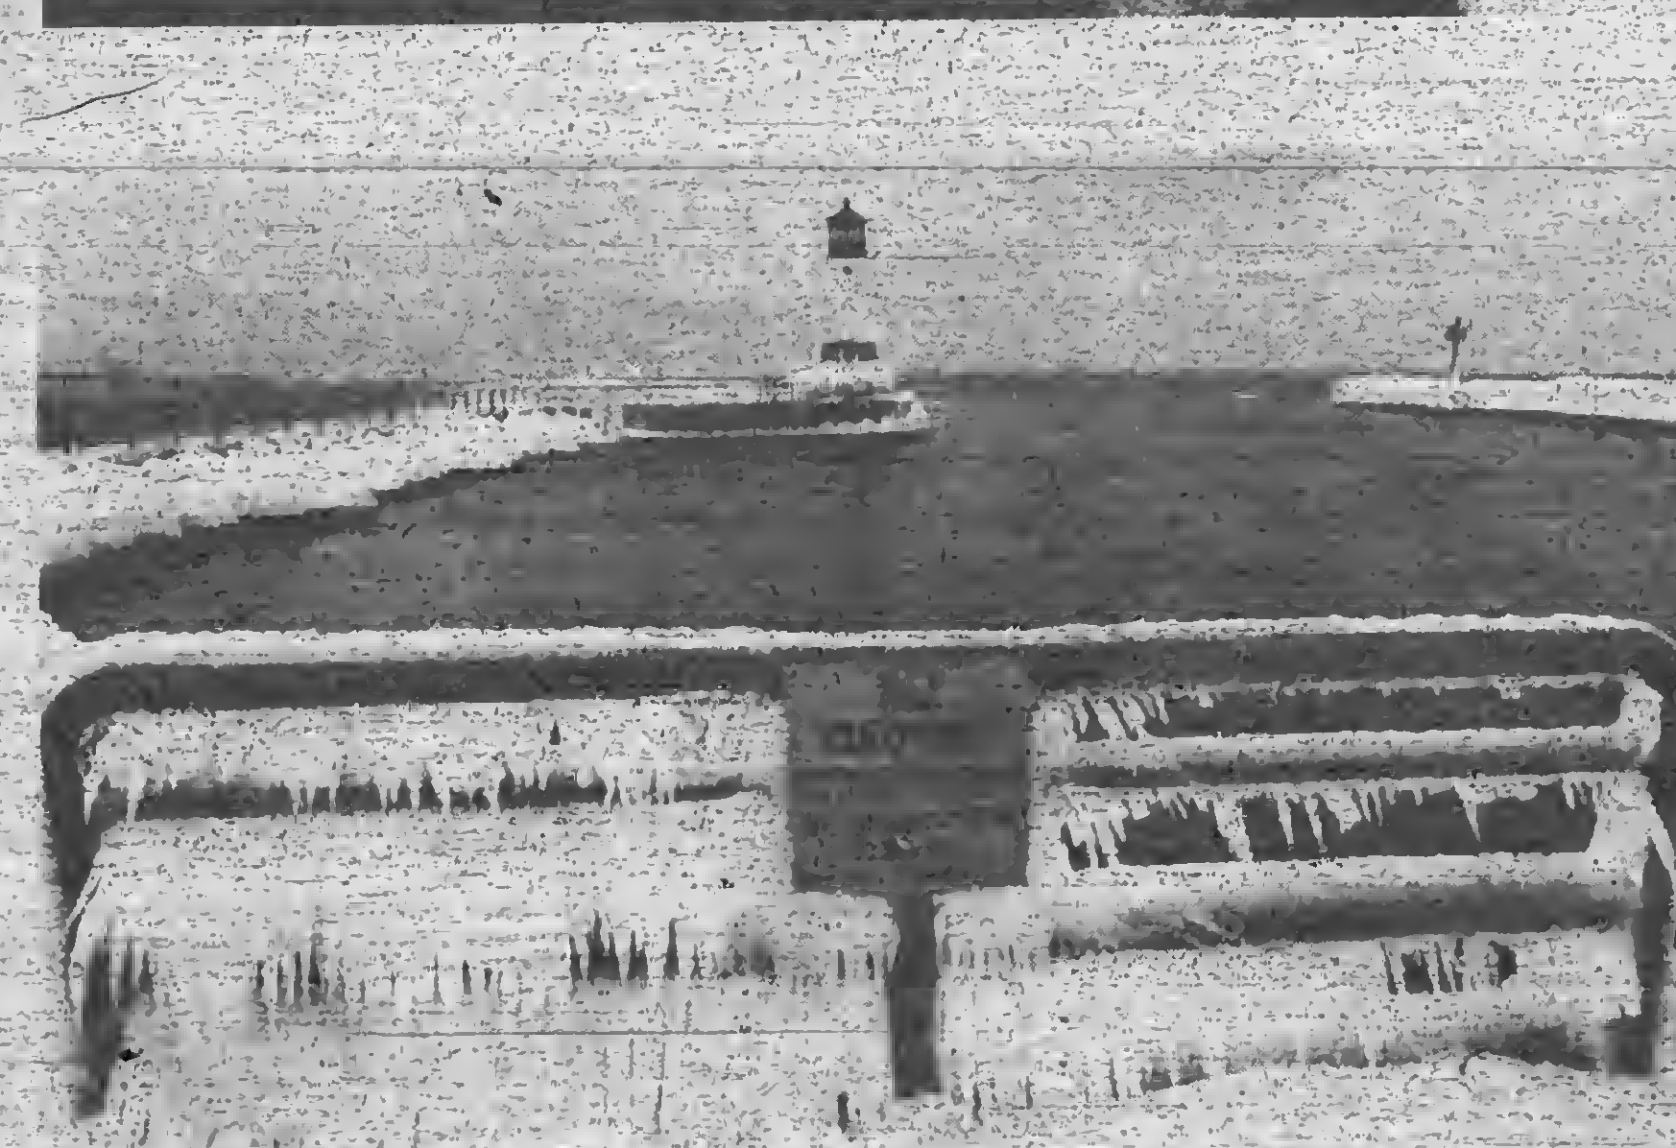

Do not neglect this book. If you do, the time may come when you will as Patrick Henry did on his death bed, "Here is a book worth more than all others printed, yet it is my misfortune to never take time to read it. It is now too late. I trust God will have mercy."

BUSINESS

Fiendt's career has set surveying landmarks

(Editor's note: The following story is one in a series of stories about area businesses and business people being written for the Courier by Ralph McRae. McRae is a former council member and mayor and currently is a member of the Charlevoix Industrial Development Committee.)

By Ralph McRae

Charlevoix Abstract and Engineering Company has been surveying land in Charlevoix seemingly almost ever since there has been land in Charlevoix. The company was founded by D.C. Neuleton, as in Neuleton Street, who was one of the people responsible for laying out many of the plats and streets in Charlevoix.

Neuleton was something of a pioneer in Charlevoix surveying. In that way it is fitting, that Mary Fiendt, the present owner of Charlevoix Abstract and Engineering, has also been a pioneer in surveying.

Fiendt transferred from Albion College to the University of Michigan in 1936. While at U of M she majored in Geodesy and Surveying (Geodesy being a form of surveying which takes into consideration the curvature of the earth's surface). Fiendt was the only female engineering graduate in the U of M 1938 graduating class. Following her graduation and subsequent apprenticeship, she spent 35 years as the only female licensed surveyor in the state of Michigan.

In 1916, Robert Sloan had purchased Charlevoix Abstract and Engineering. One of Fiendt's college instructors was a Professor Swinton, a relative by marriage to

...Fiendt has surveyed in Charlevoix and beyond

Sloan, Swinton was helping Fiendt find a job, a difficult task for a female surveyor in that era. Sloan hired Fiendt and that is how she arrived in Charlevoix. After serving four years as an apprentice, she became a licensed surveyor.

Fiendt was offered a job with the Tennessee Valley Authority, but she had promised to marry Lawrence Fiendt and thus she stayed in Charlevoix. In 1944 she purchased Charlevoix Abstract and Engineering Company. Lawrence Fiendt eventually became the business manager. Initially, they lived in the back part of the building, until the business expanded.

As title insurance came into being, Fiendt and some of her staff became involved in title examinations. She notes that few abstracts are prepared anymore, however the field is beginning to reopen due to the need for environmental research.

In 1944 calculations were done by hand. The first calculators were ones in which a hand crank was used to make the computations. Gradually, things changed and computers were added as the company expanded its property related services. Today, those services include: preliminary work for condominiums; platting, mortgage inspections; general surveys; engineering surveys; services for title insurance; and the handling of many real estate closings.

Presently the firm has 12 employees and its offices occupy three floors. Much of the office space is filled with computers, large copying machines, facsimile transmitters and a most important piece of equipment, the CAD machine. The company has one of the most advanced computer systems in northern Michigan.

For the past several years electronic equipment has been replacing the less accurate measuring tapes and the old fashioned link chains. With the advent of satellites, a geographic information system is coming into being. In the future, no longer will lines have to be run through swamps and up and down hills. Data collected from the satellites in conjunction with coordinates will allow property corners to be computed.

Former employees who now own their own businesses have received their education and experience through Charlevoix Abstract and Engineering. For the last 13 years, the firm has had a branch office in Detroit which is operated by Fiendt's son, Larry. The branch office began with the company's involvement in the planning of Detroit's People Mover project. The company's survey work has expanded into all parts of Michigan and also into Chicago. Both Fiendt and her son are licensed in the state of Illinois as well as in Michigan.

Thomas Jefferson was one of the first organizers of the United States public land survey system. There were politics back then as well as now. Jefferson wanted the metric system and consequently was sent to Europe for a year. In 1785, the public land system was first established. It was agreed that the land would be surveyed, prior to selling the vast territory that the country had acquired and that the land would be divided into sections, one mile square.

Lines called Meridian lines were run north and south. Other lines, called Base lines, were run East and West. Edward Tiffin, the first Commissioner of the General Land office, decided Michigan was too swampy to be included in having one of the original six meridian lines that were established in the United States. At that time, Michigan was one large mass of forests and yes, some swamps.

Many of the monuments established by those early surveys were not too accurately set, and little care has been given to their preservation. Recently, the State of Michigan passed a law to monument and remonument all of those early corners set by the government surveyors. This is a 20-year project. Fiendt was appointed as one of five members to the State Survey and Remonumentation commission. She is charged with the task of helping to supervise this statewide project. She is also promoting the same program in Charlevoix where she is County Surveyor, a position she has held since 1944.

Fiendt has received many awards for her dedication to both the surveying and title professions. In 1987, the Michigan Land Title Association originated a special award, entitled the "Mary C. Fiendt" award. She was the first recipient and proudly displays a silver bowl.

Currently, Fiendt serves as liaison person between the American Land Title Association and the American Congress on Surveying & Mapping, representing each organization. Because of her extensive work and knowledge, she has been asked to speak throughout the United States. Recently, she was invited to speak at an international organization of surveyors meeting in Helsinki, Finland. On the same trip she included a visit to Western Russia. Within the past few weeks, she has been appointed as a commissioner of the international surveyors organization. In that capacity, she will be making a trip to Melbourne, Australia.

Another honor Fiendt recently received was a citation from the president of the American Congress on Surveying and Mapping. In 1988 she was awarded honorary membership to that association.

Fiendt helped organize the Women Surveyors group in the United States. There are still relatively few of them, Fiendt says she has thoroughly enjoyed her career and has constantly endeavored to learn all of the facets of her profession. Although she is no longer a young person, she appears to thrive on being a very busy individual. At this time, she views retirement as something that is for other people.

Little Traverse Civic Theater produces "Extremities"

Tickets for Little Traverse Civic Theatre's winter production, "Extremities," may now be reserved by calling the theatre boxoffice at 348-1850.

Due to the violent, emotionally-charged nature of the drama, LTCT has set restrictions on admission for anyone under age 13. Those under age 17 must be accompanied by a parent. Tickets are $7; senior citizens price is $5 on Tuesday, Feb.
18 and Thursday, Feb. 20.

"Extremities" is a play about rape, and it employs language that is purposefully strong and harsh to establish the reality of the situation.

According to director Doug Flewelling, the playwright has written a gritty portrayal so the audience really experiences the events, instead of just observing them.

"Even though the play is about rape, those who have experienced any threatening situation can relate to the rage you feel at being a helpless victim," says "Extremities" producer Margery Bartha. "The play addresses the deep, passionate things we didn't know we were capable of."

Ultimately, "Extremities" deals not so much with the act of rape, but what happens afterward: the anger, the guilt, the accusations, the fear, Bartha says.

The play opens Thursday, Feb.
13 and also runs Feb. 14, 15, 18, 20, 21, and 22. Curtain time is 8 p.m. in the Ross Sloakes Theatre at the McCune Arts Center, downtown Potoskey.

Debate team places fifth in state Finishes as Michigan's top Class C-D public school

Charlevoix's High School debate team took an impressive fifth in the C-D State Debate Championships in Novi Jan. 31 - Feb. 1.

Charlevoix placed highest of the public schools debating in this classification, behind Detroit County Day, Birmingham Marian, Grand Rapids South Christian and Ann Arbor Community.

"We did extremely well," commented Coach Connie Ford after the two-day marathon debate contest.

"I was extremely proud of the girls. They came out of every round feeling good about themselves. They debated well and it really didn't matter whether or not they won or lost, they did so well," the coach commented.

Ford also pointed out that three of the four varsity debaters are juniors, with three more junior and sophomore debaters on the team as well as a strong novice debate squad, giving next year's debate team unusual strength.

This year's debate topic focused on the issue of the homelessness. Next year's debate topic will be based on the issues of the global environment, although the exact wording of the resolution has not yet been selected.

Debating for Charlevoix on the affirmative were Jennifer Barnadyn, senior, and Megan Bickerseth. The negative team was Amber Phillips, junior, and Nancy Dammann, junior.

Serving as scouts and time keepers were John Parish, junior, Ellen McKinney, sophomore and Melissa Mosher, sophomore.

Council reviews proposed budget

By L. Scott Swanson

The city council began its annual odyssey through the proposed budget Monday evening. City manager Mike Wiesner and city treasurer Rick Brandt are the primary authors of the 120 page document which calls for a slight reduction in the city tax rate due to a decrease in debt retirement millage (i.e. tax money collected to pay off old loans). Although there will be a decrease in tax rates, there will be an increase in user fees at some city facilities such as the municipal golf course. City sewer and water rates will increase by three percent and an increase in city electric rates is anticipated. The exact amount of the increase in city electric rates has yet to be determined.

The budget proposes total city expenditures of $9,094,800 for the fiscal year which will begin April 1, 1992 and end March 31, 1993. That is down from $10,925,945 in the present fiscal year. In the proposed budget, Wiesner explains that the main reason for the decrease is of reduced expenditures in the electric fund and the completion of the Ferry Avenue Beach project. Electric system improvements will continue in the coming year, but the biggest expense, which is the construction of the new substation, is in the present fiscal year.

The budget encompasses nine separate funds. They are: general fund; major street; local street; electric; sewer; water; debt service; Downtown Development Authority; and cemetery trust. The utility

Mobile home parks benefit from outdated tax law

By Laurie Lounsbury

A antiquated tax law affecting manufactured homes in mobile home parks represents about $141,000 in lost revenue to Charlevoix County taxing entities. Proposed legislation would change the loss of local revenue in property taxes.

The old, tubular Silver Airstream is the mobile home of the past. A double-wide manufactured home, complete with deck and attached garage, is the mobile home of today. Despite the difference between the two, tax laws governing a new manufactured home in a manufactured home park and tax laws that applied to the old Silver Airstream remain the same.

In the post-depression era of the 1930s, mobile homes and trailer parks gained wide popularity as people moved around, looking for work. Trailers of that era were around eight feet wide and 30 feet long, and could be easily hitched to the back of a car and driven from town to town. As the numbers of people living in trailer parks increased, a new specific tax was created in 1939 in order to maintain public services for the trailer parks. A tax of $1.50 a month was assigned to each trailer, to help pay for local fire and police departments and school systems utilized by the trailer park dwellers. The tax today is $3 a month, or $36 dollars annually, and it is incorporated into the cost of the lot rental.

But today's mobile home parks no longer host small, transient trailer homes. Today, parks are called manufactured home parks, and they provide a setting for homes that will rarely, if ever, be mobile once they're situated in a park. A manufactured home is normally hauled by a semi-trailer to a mobile home park on its axles, but after its arrival, the axles are removed and the home is mounted on a concrete foundation.

Since these manufactured homes arrive at their destination on axles, and are situated in mobile home parks, they are taxed $3 monthly, even though the value of the homes can be as high as $60,000. Senator Nick Smith and Representative Walter DeLange have both proposed bills to the Michigan Legislature which would eliminate the $3 monthly tax and replace it with a property tax similar to what other homeowners pay.

Manufactured park owners are opposed to the proposed change in taxes. Park owners pay taxes on their property, assessed without the value of the homes, and they also pay the specific tax from the lot rental. Owners of manufactured homes pay no property taxes, although they do pay a four percent state sales tax when they purchase their home.

The Michigan Township Association and the Michigan Association of Counties are fighting for reformation of this outdated tax law, or tax loophole, as it is considered by them.

Monster fireworks display to highlight SnoChallenge

The Mt. Mica SnoChallenge promises to be bigger and better than ever this year. Last year's SnoChallenge introduced a magnificent fireworks display to the three-day winter festival, and there will be a fireworks display again this year, with the biggest fireworks ever seen in Northern Michigan. The Venetian festival shoots off rockets up to 12 inches in diameter. The SnoChallenge will have 16-inch rockets for the show.

There will be some changes in the schedule of events this year. Friday, Feb. 14, at 5 p.m., the activities will begin with downhill ski races and snowboard races, a new event. The world champion thundercube races, a perennial favorite, will begin Saturday morning at 11 a.m., followed by the snowmobile hill climb. The Grand Fireworks display will begin at 7 p.m. Saturday evening. There will also be a ski parade and a tribute to the participants of Desert Storm.

Truck hill climbs will run all day Sunday, and admission fees will be charged. A new event will take place after the truck hill climb, a radio controlled car and truck hill climb. Kids and adults of all ages are invited to bring their remote controlled cars to the event. For further details, see the SnoChallenge Schedule of Events on page 20 of this week's Courier.

Written and directed by team coach Connie Ford, with musical direction and research by Sulane Hamilton, "Oh, Freedom" is set in during the Civil War and tells the story of the war through the eyes of slaves, southerners, northerners, soldiers and their loved ones.

The three-judge panel at the Regional competition praised "Oh, Freedom," and its cast as a very moving and effective presentation.

Charlevoix actors B.J. Van Loo and Ellen McKinney won "Excellent" acting awards. Lori Darrah won a special "Excellent" award for her use of "Dialect" in her role as Bess a slave woman. Kelly Heck, the team's set and program designer, won an "Excellent" for the program.

...tax law change proposed

One problem with changing the law lies in the definition of a mobile home. Marty Schaefer, Manager of Charlevoix Estates, a local manufactured home park on M-66, says the difference is in the foundation. "Mobile homes are considered to be on their axles, not put on a foundation. Manufactured homes are on a concrete pier foundation, and are not mobile anymore," Schaefer said. Schaefer went on to say that he anticipates the homes in Charlevoix Estates will be sold on site in the future, instead of being moved to a new location when the owners choose to leave. He attributes the on-site sales of the homes to the cost of moving a home. Schaefer said the cost of moving a double-wide home would be around $3,500, and the cost of moving a single-wide would be $1,000. It would require a construction crew to disassemble a double wide and a semi-trailer to haul it. "Today, the concept of a mobile home is unfeasible," Schaefer said.

Evelyn Dussal, owner of Lake Terrace Mobile Home Park, north of Charlevoix on U.S. 31, said it's been ten years since a home was moved out of her park. She explained that homes in her park sell on site for between $12,000 and $20,000. Homes on the front row have a beautiful view of Lake Charlevoix, and command a higher price.

Judy Hammonree, of the Lakeview Village Mobile home park in Boyne City, concurred that homes rarely move out of the park. Hammonree estimated a home may move once every five years, at the most.

While owners of mobile homes in mobile home parks escape the payment of property taxes, they do pay a four percent sales tax every time a home changes hands. Even when a home is sold for the second or third time, the buyer still pays sales tax on the purchase. Sales tax goes to the State, with Charlevoix County receiving very little of what is distributed back to local units of government. Mike Barnard, owner of Lake Michigan Heights, said, changing the current method of taxation on mobile homes would be difficult to do. Barnard suggested having the State return the 4% sales tax to the local community in which the sales occur. "It's a complex subject and there's no simple way to make everybody happy," Barnard said.

Until the tax laws change, manufactured home parks will become increasingly desirable places to live, with attractive housing and no real property taxes.

This table shows the current tax revenue from manufactured homes in manufactured home parks, and the difference they would be paying in taxes if they paid property tax based on SEV and an average mill rate.

OPINIONS

EDITH

Those of us who are amused by the wisdom in the French saying, "The more things change, the more they remain the same," will enjoy reading among other things, a historic report on the first successful fundraiser in Charlevoix — an auction!

"In 1867, it began to be felt that the old, 16 foot square log school house, having had its day, was unfit for use and should be replaced by a larger and better one," writes Mrs. Stockman in her "Reminiscence of a Pioneer Life," presented to the Historical Society in 1911. She cheerfully continues, a committee decided to hold an auction with supper, on the 6th of December "and in a short time had a goodly array of useful as well as fancy articles."

In spite of a blowing gale that turned to snow that winter day, "we braved the storm... the storm raging so fierce, we could scarcely keep on our feet, some of us had a mile to walk..." The committee had debated on postponing the event, but "since supper is all ready for the table," Dr. Leach, a member of the committee announced that "I'll guarantee you twenty-five dollars at least."

With the storm raging outside, "Mr. Fox and Mr. Beers bidding against each other and run some of the things to an enormous price, but they enjoyed it and were having fun, and giving their money freely to help us out... then supper was served at two dollars a couple, but what a supper of good things for those times, oysters, real oysters, something almost unknown in the place at the time except by name. They were dealt out generously in large dishfills, not a little soup with one poor little oyster swimming around all alone, as some of the Ladies expressed it." The event ended with a dance and the evening was considered a success, "seventy-five dollars being realized."

That spring, a frame building to house the school was erected near the corner of State and Antrim Street, but afterward sold and made into a dwelling. Mr. Green was the first teacher in the new building "having located here for the practice of law, but the law practice not being very large at the time, he had to resort to other work, the winter school was offered to him, he accepted it at four dollars a week, a portion of it paid in flour and potatoes."

Mrs. Stockman had arrived by boat ten years earlier in Charlevoix, (then known as Pile River) with her husband. They first lived in a two room house with no floors, windows or doors. "For lights we burned fish oil, in small lamps holding about a tea cup of oil." She writes in her precise script, since there were no cows, there was no butter or milk, but lots of maple syrup! She earned water up the hill in pails as there were no wells. The "children were running wild with no church or school after the summers work was over, the fall crops gathered..." Several of the men got together in 1861, talked the situation over and decided that they must have a school house. After selecting the location, they went to work and in one day had a school house built of logs ready for occupancy.

Next, they needed a teacher and "their choice fell on me and I accepted the position at one dollar per week." Between twenty and thirty students enrolled ranging in ages from three to twenty. Most of them had never been to school before — She also describes the postal service of that day as "an Indian carrying a mailbag on his back from Traverse City to Cheboygan, then an unbroken forest, following a trail of blazed trees, blazed trees were, where the bark was chipped or cut away from tree to tree in a straight line." In a lighter vein, Stockman describes wearing sunbonnets on picnics and taking lunch baskets on sailboats and in canoes. But mostly, pioneer life was tough. "Many of you have seen the slow but sure progress of Charlevoix, of the business blocks, the Churches and Schools, large commodious Hotels, from log huts of one room, to fine residences, Railroads take the place of snowshoes and trails through the forest, with first class Steamers in place of sailboat and canoes, paved streets and cement walks instead of the deep sand, running water in the house, when we used to carry it from the river or lake or melt snow, the wilderness, the log school house, the log huts, even wages, are all of the past, and some of us that still live have seen all the changes from 1857 to the present time 1911."

The original 63 page journal of Mr. Stockman's "Reminiscence of a Pioneer Life" was recently acquired by the Charlevoix Historical Society. For further information, please contact Geoff Reynolds, Director.

Seatbelt use is a great idea, but a bad law

The big brother faction is at it again. This time they're trying to get Lansing lawmakers to pass a law which will allow police to stop drivers for not wearing seat belts.

Currently, police can ticket a driver for not wearing a seat belt (a situation which in and of itself is bad enough), but only if the driver has been stopped for some other offense. Under a proposed law, which last week received the support of the house transportation committee and was forwarded for consideration, police would be able to stop drivers if they suspected they weren't wearing seat belts and ticket them if they found that suspicion to be founded.

The proposed law should be rejected for two primary reasons:

The law is another step toward government attempting to dictate what people can and cannot do in their personal lives. Unless a person's actions have the potential to hurt someone else, lawmakers should keep their noses out of the matter. Statistics clearly indicate that wearing a seatbelt is the smart thing to do, but that does not mean it should be governmentally mandated.

The law would essentially give police the power to stop drivers on a whim. Although most officers probably wouldn't abuse such power, why leave the door open?

Seatbelts are a good idea. People should wear them. But people should make their own decision and then accept responsibility for it. This is a matter of personal responsibility, not governmental responsibility.

Letters to the editor

People are our finest natural resource

Editor,

I have had the idea of writing this letter on numerous occasions. I think of writing this on days then there are blizzards and the vision is near zero; yet the road crews are plowing, keeping the roads passable for the citizens of Charlevoix County. I think of this after Operation Petunia when I realize how much work a great number of individuals have done in the planting of all the petunias every May.

Last week there was an unfortunate emergency which finally persuaded me to write this letter. A seriously ill individual was brought to Charlevoix Hospital. The police officer, Paul Ivan, was there at our Emergency Room assisting the Emergency Room personnel for three hours. His shift ended after the first hour, yet he did not even mention this until we were through. I would also have to compliment Lyle Gannett and Bob ReJoff. They, too, stayed three hours and were invaluable in their assistance to the Emergency Room personnel. A friend of mine has always maintained that the most beautiful natural resource in Northern Michigan is the population in this area. I think the above clearly demonstrates the truth of this statement. I have had the total pleasure of living in Charlevoix for 16 1/2 years. I cannot think of another place or another group of persons with whom I would enjoy life so abundantly.

Very truly yours
Reed K. Freidinger, M.D.

Willis recalls Charlevoix limestone quarry from 1920s

The Medusa Cement plant has been around for approximately 30 years, but Charlotte Willis recalls a Charlevoix cement making operation which was around long before the 1960s. Willis, 95, worked for the Charlevoix Limestone Co. in the early 1920s, almost 70 years ago.

Shortly after marrying George Willis, Charlotte, whose maiden name was Hull, took a job as a cook for the quarry crew. The limestone quarry is in approximately the same location as the present day quarry. To get to it, you went to the west end of Carpenter Street, past Colin McKenzie's house, and took a two-track road out to the quarry.

Willis said the limestone quarry and associated cement plant were quite an operation for the 1920s. "It was a going thing for several years," she explained. A railroad line went into the plant and there were small cars which were used to haul the limestone and cement.

As cook for the quarry crew, it was Willis' job to prepare three square meals a day for a dozen hungry quarry workers. The men had to be to work by 7 a.m., so Charlotte and George got up at 5 a.m. to start breakfast. Lunch was served at noon and supper at 6 p.m.

"Although it kept her busy, Willis says of the job, 'It was a good experience for a young person.'"

Keeping 12 men fed required a lot of food and Willis and her husband would make frequent trips to town in their car which she believes was a Studebaker. In town they would shop in one of several small markets which were scattered throughout town. They would bring back enough food to last for two or three days; much of the food was potatoes and other vegetables purchased by the bushel.

Willis cooked with a wood stove. Her husband cut wood around the quarry site to keep the stove fired. The wood stove turned out some pretty fair pies which didn't last long when set on the table.

"You'd set two or three pies on the table," Willis explained. "And when one pie was empty, you'd put another one on."

Charlotte Willis

Rachel Veenstra, Willis' neighbor, grew up in that area of town and can remember going out and playing at the abandoned cement plant after it closed. She said the facility was housed in big red buildings and there was some kind of big generator there. At one time, the city of Charlevoix apparently got some of its power from that generator.

When Willis lived at the quarry, two tarpaper shacks housed the workers. Willis and her husband lived in one shack which also served as the dining hall while the quarry workers lived in the other.

Although by today's standards it might be considered an austere existence, Willis remembers her time as a quarry cook fondly. She still smiles as she recalls getting a new wooden buffet to hold her dishes. "I thought I had the world."

In the mid 1920s the quarry closed and wasn't used for several years. Willis has seen the new cement plant and says it's nice, but she still holds her memories its predecessor and she and her husband's days cooking for the quarry crew.

"It was nice because we had money coming in and we could be together," she said.

BEACONS

OF BLESSINGS

By: J. Perry Fowler, Pastor

Safe Harbor Baptist Church.

In 1731, there was a cloud of spiritual darkness over America. C.C.

Goen describes the spiritual pulse of the nation saying, "Saints were few and lacking."

But, into the New England state of Massachusetts God had initiated a spiritual-hunger in the heart of His servant, Jonathan Edwards. According to his autobiography, Edwards had such a thirst for God that he could not take a mouthful of food or close his eyes in sleep for three days. During this time he sought the face of God crying out earnestly, "Give me New England; Give me New England!"

When Edwards rose to his feet, he made his way to the pulpit of his church and uttered not a word. As the congregation looked at Edwards, conviction fell upon the crowd, as the hunger and thirst was transferred to each person. Likewise some said, "It appeared as if Edwards had been staring into the face of God." As a result, The Great Awakening of 1731 began.

Jesus said in Matthew chapter five, "Blessed are those who hunger and thirst after righteousness, for they shall be filled." Jesus modeled this hunger and thirst for his Father who is the righteous one. The Bible notes that he rose up early in the morning to pray and that he constantly did the will of the Father.

But perhaps one of the most striking evidences of this hunger and thirst is found in John chapter four when Jesus told his disciples, "I have meat that you know not of," and, "My food is to do the will of Him who sent me, and to accomplish His work."

In this extraordinary passage Jesus challenges his disciples to find their greatest satisfaction in God himself and doing his priority set upon their own needs. So Jesus says, "I have meat maturity and obtain true joy they had to obtain this hunger and thirst for righteousness."

Jesus removed the blinders of self righteousness and revealed that we are a desperate people, in need of God. Thus, he points us to true satisfaction saying, "Blessed are they who hunger and thirst for righteousness for they shall be filled."

Jesus said, "I am the bread of life" and "I am the water of life." The question is, "Are you empty?" Is there a void in your life? Jesus is still the answer: We need Him daily to be our Lord, our Savior, our Sufficiency!

Beacons of Blessings is provided to the Courier by Pastor

Fowler and other members of the Charlevoix Ministerial Association.

Wrestlers place second at conference meet

Three win individual titles

Charlevoix fell just short of a Great Northern Conference wrestling title Saturday placing second behind host Rogers City. Rogers City finished with 176.5 points while Charlevoix accumulated 165. Onaway took third place with 124.5 points.

Jason VanLooy, Shawn Young and Keith Parish took individual titles for the Rayders.

VanLooy, a sophomore, took the 119 pound weight class. He drew a bye in the first round, pinned his semifinal opponent in 27 seconds and pinned his opponent in the finals in 2:50.

Young, a senior, won the 130 pound weight class. He won his first two matches on a pin and an 8-0 decision. In the finals, he won on an 11-9 decision.

Parish, another sophomore, was the day's biggest and most pleasant surprise. For most of the year he has wrestled in the 189 pound class, but dropped to 171 for the conference meet. He entered the meet unseeded, but ended the day as the conference champion. He opened the day with a 5-2 win, followed that with an 8-2 win and took the title match 5-3 in sudden death.

Rayder heavyweight Dan Browe placed second. He won his first two matches with pins, but lost a 10-6 decision in the finals.

Jason Hughes, a freshman wrestling at 103 pounds, pinned his first two opponents, but lost on a pin in the finals.

Jason Pajtas, a senior, placed second in the 152 pound weight class due to an injury default in the finals. Pajtas drew a first round bye and pinned his second round opponent prior to the finals.

Chris McCallum placed third at 135 pounds. He won his first round match, then lost a 9-1 decision prior to closing the day with two pins.

Tony Potter placed third at 145 pounds. He took an 11-6 decision, lost to the eventual champion, and then came back to win two matches. Potter entered the tournament unseeded.

Josh Martin also was unseeded, but took third in the 160 pound weight class. Martin won a 9-7 decision, was beaten by the eventual champion and finished the day with two pins, one in 14 seconds and the other in 38 seconds.

Jesse Leadabrand, a freshman, placed fourth at 140 pounds with a 2-2 record on the day.

Going 0-2 for the day were Dave Wilks, Rob Gillum and Kareem Peters.

Charlevoix will be wrestling at home this Thursday evening against Gaylord and Cheboygan.

Volleyball team beats Harbor Springs

Charlevoix's varsity volleyball team swept Harbor Springs in three games last Thursday evening to run the Rayders conference record to 5-1. Harbor Springs was dispatched by scores of 15-5, 15-11 and 15-8.

Top setters for the Rayders were Stacy Tillon and Liz Grunch. Leading the servers were Liz Grunch and Mary Jane Grunch. Best defenders were Liz Grunch, Angelina Doan and Tammy Holm. Hitting with intensity and purpose were Holm and Mary Jane Grunch.

Harbor Springs won the junior varsity match by scores of 12-15, 15-13 and 15-9. Top setters for the Rayders were Jacklyn Hogan and Trina Holm. Top servers were Gretchen Scott and Jill Dreyer. Leading the defense were Hogan and Scott while top offensive players were Scott and Shannon Rowell.

Charlevoix will host Kalkaska Wednesday, Feb. 12.

Basketball team falls short at Boyne City

Charlevoix got behind early and a late rally fell short as the Rayders traveled to Boyne City and lost 75-62 in varsity basketball Friday evening.

Despite the lopsided final outcome, Charlevoix trailed by only a single point midway through the fourth quarter. However, on the basket which cut the lead to a point, Rayder guard Luke LaBlance was fouled and injured as he drove in for a lay up. LaBlance was taken to the hospital and treated for a concussion.

After losing LaBlance, who scored 26 points in the three and one-half quarters prior to his injury, the Rayders' rally faltered.

Charlevoix got off to a slow start in the game, trailing 17-9 after the first quarter. The Rayders cut the lead to five points 35-30 at half-time. In the third quarter the two teams played even. Early in the fourth quarter the Rayders again whittled at the Ramblers lead, but things went awry at the end of the game.

The loss was the Rayders' second of the season to Boyne City with both games being tense and tightly contested. Should the two teams meet again in the district tournament, it should be an interesting game.

The loss dropped Charlevoix's league record to 3-4 and season record to 5-7.

In addition to LaBlance's 26 points, Mike Dohulis contributed 13 and Brian Coleman 12. Dohulis also had eight rebounds while Don Less had six assists.

Charlevoix's next game will be winter homecoming this Friday against Mancelona.

SPORTS

Charlevoix fourth and fifth graders have been taking to the woods and the trails on cross country skis for their winter recesses. Physical education teacher Dave Moyer helps fourth graders with the fundamentals of the sport. "By the time the kids are in fifth grade, they can pair up and go off on their own," Moyer said. The cross country ski program has been in the elementary school for at least ten years. Equipment is maintained and replaced by donations from the P.T.A.

Wynkoop is majoring in Biology and is also involved in the college's music program as a member of the college choral group and symphonic band.

Roger Vane Smith from Charlevoix has been honored by the University of Kentucky as being among the best academic students on the Lexington campus.

Smith, who lives at 118 Garson Ave., was named to the Dean's List in the College of Business and Economics for having outstanding grades for the semester.

Smith is a junior at UK majoring in pre-marketing.

Correction

Some information which appeared in last week's Courier regarding area dentists observance of National Children's Dental Health Month was incorrect. The information should have said that from 9 a.m. to noon, Dr. Robert Tollas will provide a half day of free dental service to those without insurance or having special financial needs.

general fund will have revenue of $1,692,600 and expenditures of $1,834,700 in the coming year. The difference of $142,100 is somewhat misleading. The city planned to spend $70,000 last summer for work on a new apron and taxiway at the city airport, but that project was pushed back to this coming summer. The money to fund the project also shifts into the proposed budget. Although the proposed budget calls for reducing the city's fund balance (i.e. the city's cash on hand or savings account), the fund balance is still projected to be $353,062 at the end of the '92-'93 fiscal year.

The proposed city millage levy for the coming year is 8.5 mills for operations, 4 mills for infrastructure repairs, and 1.56 (versus a current year levy of 1.73) mills for debt retirement for a total of 14.06 mills.

A mill is $1 for every $1,000 of a property's state equalized value (SEV). A property's SEV is one half of a property's theoretical market value (i.e. what it would sell for). Infrastructure is a big word for the city's streets, sidewalks, sewer and water systems.

Monday evening was the first of a series of meetings in which the council and city administrators and department heads will discuss the proposed budget. The next budget meeting is scheduled for 24 with the council likely to formally adopt a budget sometime in early or mid March.

Ted Pennell led the Masons with 958 points. Bill Bergmann led the Odd Fellows with 949 points. There were nine tables in play.

Play resumes at 7:30 p.m. this Thursday at the Masonic Temple.

BUSINESS

Rescuer descends from the sky

(Editor's note: The following story is one in a series of stories about interesting businesses and people with interesting professions in the area. McKee is a former mayor and city council member and currently is a member of the Charlevoix Industrial Development Committee.)

By Ralph McKee
A few weeks ago a college alumni publication showed a group photo of its Class of 1976. In the write-up accompanying the photo, each class member was named and a sentence or two about that class member's occupation was included. A special high-lighted paragraph focused on the occupation of one particular class member who lives just a few miles outside of Charlevoix on Maple Grove Road. The paragraph talked about Susan Boyko, formerly Susan Battle, who is a flight nurse on an emergency medical helicopter in northern Michigan. It is a different and dramatic way to earn a living. Even before graduating from Albion College with a Bachelor's Degree in English Literature, Boyko realized she was in the wrong profession. She couldn't envision herself holding the attention of a room full of young students while discussing the lives and times of famous authors and poets.

Originally from Denver, Boyko returned to Detroit to enter the nursing field. At that time, some hospitals still had nursing programs. Boyko went through a three-year course at the Grace Hospital and became a Registered Nurse (RN).

From 1978 to 1983, she worked at the Henry Ford Hospital. While there, she was on duty in the emergency section and each day became involved with attempting to remedy the results of the violence and brutal incidents in the lives of inner city people. It's difficult for people in smaller, outstate communities to imagine the life and death scenes occurring every hour in the emergency rooms of our country's large cities.

Boyko also was a staff nurse in the Intensive Care Unit. In the initial years of her nursing career, she also took additional training at the Madonna College of Nursing.

In 1984, Boyko moved to the Ann Arbor St. Joseph Mercy Hospital. There, she became associated with the Midwest Med-Flite Company. This company had an ambulance helicopter serving the south-east section of Michigan.

As a flight nurse, Boyko found herself aboard a helicopter landing in small places to pick up badly injured people or people suffering from cardiac problems. The patients are then quickly picked up and flown to the appropriate care facility. Boyko eventually became the Chief of all flight nurses for the Midwest Med-Flite Co.

While in Detroit, Boyko had, in 1977, married Timothy Boyko who is now a stock broker for the First American Corporation in Harbor Springs. The lure of northern Michigan persuaded her to resign from the Ann Arbor flight company in the early months of 1989. But the beauty and tranquility of this region held Boyko's attention for only a few months. In the fall of 1989, she quickly responded to a call from the Munson Hospitals subsidiary, North Flight EMS, and once more became a flight nurse.

People in this community often hear the sounds of one of two helicopters flying overhead. The louder one is the Coast Guard helicopter from Traverse City. The quieter one, also out of Traverse City, is the smaller North Flight copter.

A helicopter is like a giant metallic humming bird. It can maneuver like a humming bird in flight - taking off from a standstill to rise straight up, flying either forward or backward, gliding to the right or left, or hovering in midair. No airplane will ever match this mechanical magic carpet, the helicopter.

The pilot of a helicopter is a very busy person using both his hands and feet to operate the helicopter. The typical helicopter has two blades, each about 36 feet in length, turning at about 1,200 to 1,500 times per minute.

In Michigan, there are six medical centers that have air ambulance units covering the state. General improvements in hospitals throughout the state has lessened the need for transferring patients downstate. An exception to that would be patients with severe burns. There are no helicopter ambulance services in the Upper Peninsula. Instead, fixed wing planes serve that region.

Thirty percent of all flights are for moving patients between hospitals. In these cases, often a flight nurse is not necessary.

The majority of missions are known as scene operations - that is flights directly to the scene of the accident or to the home of a heart attack or trauma patient. The crew for these missions is made up of a pilot, paramedic and the flight nurse. In addition to the flight crew, the cooperation of doctors, police and ambulance personnel is also essential.

Once the patient is aboard the copter, the flight nurse takes charge. Working closely, the paramedic and nurse attempt to keep the patient's vital signs strong.

While attending to the patient, Boyko is communicating with the hospital. Even before the patient lands, specialists at the hospital know what they must do.

No two cases are the same, so the hospital staff is kept constantly informed during the flight. Upon landing, Boyko turns in documents detailing the patient's conditions and reactions during the flight.

Enroute to accident scenes, people on the ground guide the pilot to the drop space nearest the waiting patient. This might be a field or a highway intersection. The helicopter has no radar equipment, but it has a Loran instrument for pinpointing its exact location. Before leaving the home pad, the weather is carefully studied. The lives of the three crewmembers come foremost so sometimes missions are cancelled. The dispatcher and mechanic, although not along for the flight, are also highly valued members of the crew.

The flight of the helicopter is often into a remote area, far distant from physicians and hospitals. The helicopter dramatically cuts transportation time from these areas. The helicopter's normal altitude is around 1,200 feet and it flies at about 125 miles per hour. In addition to its speed, the helicopter also flies a direct route. If it would take an hour to transport a patient on the ground, it will be less than half that time by air.

Hey, that's Grandpa Smith

When Ken Staley looked at last week's Scrapbook photo, he saw two familiar faces. The photo was of Staley's grandparents, Hattie and Steve Smith.

Staley said his grandfather lived quite a life. He was born in 1849 and came to Beaver Island from Detroit with his parents in 1851.
Smith's father was a lighthouse keeper.

Eventually Smith ended up in Charlevoix, where he was a merchant and owned several local stores.

Staley said his grandfather was quite well educated for his time, yet never felt he was educated enough and often had books brought into Charlevoix on ships that stopped here. Smith died in 1940.

Pool proposal put on hold

By L. Scott Swanson

The city council neither rejected nor approved a request by the Friends of the Pool for the city to sponsor a grant application. Instead, the council said they want to see a filled out application and have it reviewed by the city attorney before they will take any action. Pool proponents said they have an application form and will fill it out and get it to the city attorney as soon as possible.

Prior to Monday evening's city council meeting, pool proponents explained their proposal before a joint meeting of the city council, city planning commission and Charlevoix Township Board. The pool backers would like to build an indoor community swimming pool on a 10-acre site northeast of and adjacent to the elementary school property. The site, which is city owned, is off the back of the school property off toward Mercer Boulevard and the Municipal Golf Course.

According to information presented Monday evening by the Friends of the Pool, construction costs for a six-lane pool would be $1,068,574, or approximately $1 million. They propose to pay for that with income from the following sources: Michigan Recreation Bond Grant (the grant they are asking the city to apply for) $500,000; Kresge Brick and Mortar Fund $200,000; in kind gifts plus local contributions for construction $100,000; and support from other foundations/businesses or federal

AHEAD LINES

Prospective candidates need to plan ahead

Running for a local political office is like anything else. It works best if you plan ahead. Although there are no local elections scheduled until June, anyone considering running for a seat on the city council, school board or township board will need to get things in order well before June. With that in mind, here are the filing dates and fundamentals required for those who might be considering a local candidacy.

City Council
People who wish to be listed as a candidate for a city council seat need to pick up a petition from city clerk JoAnne Patrick and have it filled out and returned by 4 p.m., May 12. The petition must contain the signatures of a minimum of 24 and a maximum of 40 registered voters. The city is divided into three wards. Ward one covers the north side as well as Park Avenue, Clinton Street and one side of Mason Street. Ward two covers the south side west of Bridge Street. Ward three encompasses the south side east of Bridge Street. The mayoral and three council seats will be up for election this year. All are for two-year terms. The seats up for election are currently held by: Dave Novotny, mayor; Bill Haggard, first ward; Ted Felter, second ward; Jackie Cross, third ward. If more than two candidates file for any one seat, there will be a primary election Aug. 4. The general election will take place in conjunction with the state and national election Nov. 3.

School Board
People who wish to be listed as a candidate for the Charlevoix Board of Education need to pick up a petition at the school's central office on Clinton Street and have it filled out and returned by 4 p.m., April 6. The petition must contain the name of at least 20 registered school district voters. This year voters will elect two board members for four-year terms. The seats up for election are currently held by Ken Boss and Larry Levingood. The school election will take place June 8.

Charlevoix Township
People who wish to be listed as a candidate for the Charlevoix Township Board need to pick up a petition from township clerk Carol Martin and return it by 4 p.m., May 12. Township elections are divided by party. Democratic party members need to collect between four and nine signatures from registered voters to be listed on the ballot while Republican party members must collect between four and eight signatures. All board members serve four year terms and all are up for election this year. The current board members are: Oscar Stroud, supervisor; Carol Martin, clerk; Theda Williams, treasurer; Nancy Rajewski, trustee; and Dale Glass, trustee.

...city discusses pool grant

government contribution $200,000. The Friends of the Pool project operational costs for the pool's first years to be $98,000 annually. They propose to pay for that with the following sources of revenue: $26,000 generated by a $400,000 endowment fund at 6.5 percent interest; $42,000 from non-school user fees; $30,000 from an annual fundraiser (i.e. auction); $17,000 from school user fees. The total proposed revenue is $115,000.

Mayor Dave Novotny questioned the $30,000 figure projected for an annual fundraiser. He said that earlier, he had seen a figure of $20,000.

Pool spokesman Roger Strigley said that even at the $20,000 figure the projected revenues still exceed projected costs. He said that projected revenue also did not consider the possibility of continued support from sources who have contributed in the past.

"We've tried to be as conservative as we can despite the support we believe we'll get," Strigley said.

City council member Chen Hoffman said she had talked to a former Traverse City council member who told her Traverse City had two main problems with its pool: it was underutilized by the school; and they had underprojected the revenue necessary to support the pool.

Friends of the Pool chairman Dave Strawbridge said the Traverse City pool suffered those problems because it was almost impossible to get kids to it from the school and the pool had not been designed to be energy efficient.

Hoffman also noted that the East Jordan pool has had to go back to the Malpass Foundation for more money to cover pool operational costs. She observed that we don't have such a foundation in Charlevoix.

Strawbridge's response to that was that the East Jordan pool had been constructed without an endowment fund in place and without a commitment to ongoing fund raising.

Township trustee Dale Glass questioned the $17,000 from school user fees. He referred to opposition to local tax dollars for a pool. Since the school is funded almost entirely by local tax dollars, Glass said the school would probably have to seek increased taxes and the net result would be an indirect pool tax.

At the beginning of the meeting, pool proponents had read a letter from the school in support of a community pool. School superintendent Roberta Jackson was in the audience. In response to Glass' contention, Jackson said that if swimming was put in to the school curriculum something else would have to be taken out. She said she anticipates pool funds coming from reallocation of tax dollars rather than from an increase in tax dollars.

At the city council meeting following the joint meeting, council members Butch Russell and Ted Felter questioned what obligation the city incurs by sponsoring the grant application. Strawbridge and Strigley had earlier said that the city incurs no obligation by simply applying for the grant. The obligation to build and maintain a pool doesn't begin until the city accepts grant money.

City attorney Jim Young said that as of Monday, he hadn't been asked by the council to research the matter and therefore could not give the council an opinion as to what obligation they would incur by applying for a grant.

Russell and Felter said that before deciding whether or not the city should apply, they want to see a filled out application form which has been reviewed by the city attorney.

"I don't want city taxpayers signing something that they said in a big vote they're not willing to do," Russell said.

Pool proponents noted there is a time deadline for filing. The grant application deadline is April 1, but even prior to that the city must have a recreation plan which has been approved by the state.

Although the council has indicated a willingness to schedule special meetings if that will help meet the deadlines, Felter said, "I'm not going to get run down the road on a time deal."

Senior citizens to host dinner

Hot chili, soup, rolls, vegetables and home made pie are on the menu for this month's senior citizen fund raising dinner. K-5 school appreciates new science room

By L. Scott Swanson

Charlevoix Elementary (K-5) School hosted an appreciation breakfast Feb. 11 for local people, organizations and businesses that helped organize and equip the school's new science room.

K-5 school principal Vane Smith said the purpose of the breakfast was to thank people for their help in working toward a project "that started with a dream about three years ago."

The dream Smith referred to was a dream of improving the K-5 school's science program and making science a more tangible thing for both students and teachers. Making that dream a reality meant the acquisition of three things: expertise, money and supplies.

Michigan State University (MSU) helped with the expertise. Recently retired superintendent Gordon VanWieren worked with MSU in coordinating a program which allowed Charlevoix teachers

Letters to the Editor

Local dentist brings smile to visitors

Editor,

My family and I have just returned from our annual trip to Boyne Highlands. A great vacation but it didn't start out that way. We drove up on Jan. 26 and while swimming in the pool my son, Stephen, broke 1/3 of his left central incisor tooth off. Stephen is nine years old so it was his permanent tooth and it was very sensitive. I called my dentist back home and he said I should have it bonded right away to save the tooth.

Try and find a dentist on Sunday night, especially on Super Bowl Sunday. After a dozen phone calls to dentists in Petoskey and Harbor Springs I found that there was a dental convention somewhere and I understood that because of the veterinary meeting at the Highlands.

Finally got a hold of Dr. Robert Tolla's in your town and he agreed to see Stephen and fix his tooth. Since he told me he has been in Charlevoix since 1960 I don't need to tell you the "rest of the story," but I will.

He proceeded to fix Stephen's tooth and put him at ease. He assured us that we were not putting him out as the Redskins were winning big anyway. He made us feel like we were doing him a favor at 9:30 p.m. by letting him demonstrate his skills.

The smile on Stephen's face when he looked in a mirror the first time was worth the trip to Charlevoix through the snow. Just meeting Dr. Bob was a real treat.

The only problem I have is that on the way back to the Highlands, Stephen said to me "Dad, will I ever get to see Dr. Bob again?" Then he said, "Dad, if I chip another tooth then could we go back?" The rest of our trip I watched him real close and we made it through the rest of the week.

I have vacationed in your area for a long time and this will go down as another pleasant experience.

Sincerely,
Dr. Don Nofzinger
Whitehouse, Ohio

Good judgement prevailed

Editor,

I wish to compliment the good judgment of the city officials who scratched the Japanese car trashing event from the program of the recent winter celebration. When I first heard the story, I was told it had actually happened. Finding it hard to believe something like that could take place in Charlevoix, I called the Chief of Police for verification. My faith in our city government was restored by his explanation.

I would like to ask the promoters of this kind of activity to reconsider the fairness, the wisdom, and, most of all, the effectiveness of this kind of reaction to what I know is a real problem in our country. We must solve it by more fruitful thinking and action than "Japan-bashing" of any kind.

Sincerely,
Lucy Martin

Reconsideration correct

Editor,

This letter was first conceived before the event which prompted it took place, the proposed Japanese car smashing as part of the Sno Challenge week-end. Coinciding as it did with the 50th observance by Japanese-Americans of their internment during WWII, I questioned what we had learned of peace and justice in the intervening years. Might not the next steps be derogatory graffiti, obscene phone calls, job and housing discrimination - already realities in some areas. And what message would we be sending our children through such action in the guise of "fun"? For whatever reason, I understand the event was canceled and I applaud the reconsideration. Otherwise, the carnival was in keeping with the spirit of fun and cooperation which I have come to expect and admire in this community.

My husband joins me in a wish for continuing area programs in the best interest of all.

Landfill expansion proposed

By Laurie Lounsbury

Waste Management's Project Manager Jack Iwema has told the Charlevoix County Planning Commission that currently, there just isn't enough volume coming into the Cedar Ridge Landfill.

At the Feb. 6 Planning Commission meeting, Iwema presented a proposal to expand the landfill in size and in the number of counties served. Waste management would like to add 35 acres to the present 40 acre landfill area, and serve seven more counties. The expansion would accommodate up to 2000 cubic yards of solid waste a day, which is about four times the current volume.

Iwema said that without the expansion, the Cedar Ridge Landfill will just have to "continue to struggle along."

Waste Management currently charges $9.65 a cubic yard for solid waste, which comes to a gross amount of $4,825 daily, or a gross annual receipt of $1,254,000. Under the new proposal, Waste management's volume would quadruple to a projected 480,000 cubic yards of waste annually, for a projected annual gross of $4,632,000. Barney Way of Cedar Ridge said the company is due to have a rate increase this year regardless of the outcome on the expansion proposal.

If Waste Management is granted permission for the expansion, they propose to pay Charlevoix County a royalty fee of 25 cents a yard, which would be $120,000 annually. However, it is difficult to accurately gauge the actual number of cubic yards coming into the Cedar Ridge Landfill. At the planning commission meeting, three different figures were mentioned by Iwema and Way, in regard to the amount of waste they currently handle. They also promise to develop a portion of their property for public recreational usage, such as soccer fields, jogging trails, and ball parks. A MRF (materials recovery facility) would be built on the site to assist in the recycling effort, along with a composting facility.

Iwema cited Waste Management's successful track record as a nationwide waste handler. Waste Management started in San Jose, Ca., serving 186,000 homes in 1986. They now serve 4.3 million homes across the country, making them one of the largest waste handling companies in the world.

Waste Management and other large garbage industries often find themselves in a position of needing to expand their landfills or create new landfills. In other counties across the country, Waste Management has negotiated a "host fee," where Waste Management pays an annual fee to the county hosting the landfill. According to a Wall Street Journal article dated Dec. 3, 1991, another waste company paid more than $10 million in annual host fees to a county in California. The article said the waste industry likes to keep host fees quiet, not because the practice is questionable, but because publicity could cost the companies a lot of money. The Wall Street Journal article went on to say that the amount of revenue paid to the counties by waste companies depends largely on the skill of the negotiators representing the counties.

Host fees are intended to compensate counties for putting up with negative aspects of having a landfill that accepts trash from other counties.

The Cedar Ridge landfill is presently one of the smallest licensed landfills in the State. Iwema said that a facility accepting 500 cubic yards a day is considered small, and they would like to expand to the mid-size range, accepting 1,700 to 2,500 cubic yards daily.

The planning commission has decided to re-activate the solid waste planning committee to study Waste Management's proposal.

Smith - Plunk

Gail & William Plunk Jr.

The marriage of Gail E. Smith and William F. Plunk Jr., U.S.C.G. BM2, was celebrated at an early afternoon wedding February 1 at the United Methodist Church of Charlevoix.

Parents of the couple are Mr. and Mrs. Clayton Smith of Smith's Little Acre, Charlevoix, and Mr. and Mrs. William F. Plunk of Columbus, Mississippi.

The double ring ceremony was performed by Rev. Benton Heister. Attending the bride was Marla Solomon of Charlevoix, and the groom's best man was Thomas Hallack, U.S.C.G. Auxiliary of Troy. Ushers were Richard Elam, U.S.C.G. BM3, and Terry Wright, brother in law of the bride.

A reception following the ceremony was held in the church fellowship hall.

The newlyweds will be making their home in Mobile, Alabama, where the bridegroom will be stationed with the U.S. Coast guard.

(From left) Scott Beatty, Alison Mellon, John Frey and Sue Tillotson were among the people to attend an appreciation breakfast for those who helped make the new Elementary School science program a reality. to work on instructional techniques with MSU staff members. That program is ongoing. Charlevoix teachers who have questions are now able to call people at MSU. The University of Michigan has also been a part of the program through their northern Michigan See North station.

U of M people advised the school system on purchasing decisions. Science teachers Sue Tillotson and Alison Mellon spent hours perusing educational supply magazines and talking with vendors to make the dollars go farther. Tillotson said approximately $20,000 worth of equipment was purchased or received through donations.

The science room contains a number of small items, such as microscopes, a scale model of the human ear, magnifying glasses and also large items such as a video microscope which allows the contents of a microscope slide to be viewed on a TV screen.

Money came from a number of different sources. Among the key monetary contributors was the Charlevoix School Enrichment Foundation. They contributed $6,000 which the School Board matched to the project. The Enrichment Foundation was established to give Charlevoix students some educational opportunities which they might not otherwise have. Broadening students' options in science education is something which fell within the scope of that mission. The Parent Teacher Association (PTA) was another organization which helped fund the science room, contributing $1,800 from Spring Carnival to purchase the video microscope.

Area businesses also contributed, in a variety of ways not just money.

At the breakfast, it was noted that Consumers Power Company has helped by sharing with students the technical knowledge possessed by their employees. When the new science room needed racks to hold new equipment, Medusa Cement Company brought in metal shelving, cabinets and rolling carts matched to the project. The Enrichment Foundation was established to give Charlevoix students some educational opportunities which they might not otherwise have. Broadening students' options in science education is something which fell within the scope of that mission. The Parent Teacher Association (PTA) was another organization which helped fund the science room, contributing $1,800 from Spring Carnival to purchase the video microscope.

All of the new science equipment is kept in a single room and checked out by teachers as needed. Two school teacher assistants, Anne Fiedler and Linda Porath, staff the room for an hour before school and an hour after school.

Girls take conference title

Boys team places second

Charlevoix's girls' ski team won the conference title at Nubs Nob Feb. 12 while the boys' team placed second.

The Rayder girls team dominated the conference meet totaling 43 points while the second place team, Harbor Springs, tallied 75.

Katherine Campbell led the Rayders, placing first in the slalom and second in the giant slalom. Kim Keller placed third in the giant slalom and eighth in the slalom. Kelly Heck took seventh in slalom while Sheila Siegwart and Jessica Kline placed fifth and sixth in the giant slalom. Eight teams competed in the girls' race.

Rayder coach Erik Lundteigen offered praise for all of the girls on his team, particularly Campbell.

"As a team, we kind of do how she does. And she had a great day," he said.

Charlevoix's boys' team placed second behind Harbor Springs. The Rams finished the meet with 35 points while Charlevoix had 66.

J.H. Heck led the Rayders with a third place finish in the slalom and a fourth in the giant slalom. Scott placed second.

It was a great team effort. I'm very proud of both the boys and the girls.

Rayder ski coach Erik Lundteigen

Boyer placed sixth in the slalom and tenth in the giant slalom while Dan Hoadley took a third in giant slalom. Nine teams competed in the boys' race.

"It was a great team effort. I'm very proud of both the boys and the girls," Lundteigen said.

Individual Rayder finishes in the slalom (S) and giant slalom (GS) were as follows:

Girls
Katherine Campbell, 2S, 1GS; Kelly Heck, 7S, 12GS; Kim Keller, 8S, 3GS; Jessica Kline 11S, 6GS; Jody Allison 12S, 14GS; Sheila Siegwart, 22.

Boys
J.H. Heck, 3S, 4GS; Scott Boyer, 6S, 10GS; Dan Spang 13S, 12GS; Jake Porath, 15S, 21GS; Charles Meier 19S; Dan Hoadley, 40S, 3GS; Ryan Smith 25GS.

Charlevoix will be at Schuss Mountain Feb. 20 for the Regional meet.

This Thursday the Rayders travel to Schuss Mountain for Regionals, which Lundteigen considers to be the biggest race of the year. Charlevoix skis in the toughest region in the state with only the top two teams from the region advancing to State Finals.

"It'll be tough, but we've got a shot at it," Lundteigen said of the Rayders' chances.

Amy Spang and her Rayder teams won the conference ski meet last week and will be competing in the Regional Meet this Thursday at Schuss Mountain.

Sno Challenge results

The snow fell, the sun shone, and breathtaking fireworks lit up the sky during the 1992 Sno Challenge festival. Nearly 5,000 people gathered at Mt. McSauba during the three days of the winter festival, making it another successful year for the event.

The Sno Challenge went smoothly this year, with the only minor mishap occurring during the children's ski races, when Sno Challenge officials were bounced off of their four wheel drive vehicle when climbing to the top of the hill on official business. The children's ski races were broken into two divisions this year: one division for kids with racing experience, and another for children who's skiing experience is non-competitive. The two divisions gave children the opportunity to compete against other kids at a similar skill level.

Heavy snowfall during the thunderbuck races and snowmobile hill climb limited the visibility, but didn't dampen the spirits of participants and spectators.

The snow quit falling and the skies cleared in time for the fireworks Saturday evening, which included the introduction of three enormous explosions, the size of which had never been seen in this state.

Under sunny skies and ideal temperatures, the truck hill climb on Sunday featured 75 trucks and jeeps of all types, racing side by side to the top of the hill. For the less avid truck spectators, the sliding hill on the north side of Mt. McSauba proved to be a pleasing diversion.

Wrestlers win two thrillers

Picture this - Charlevoix's wrestling team is at home wrestling against Cheboygan. It's late. The Rayders trail 31-22 with just two weight divisions left. One of them doesn't count, because that's the heavyweight division and Cheboygan hadn't brought along anybody to wrestle Charlevoix heavyweight Dan Browe. Probably just as well from Cheboygan's standpoint. Browe doesn't lose often and not bringing along another 200-pounder probably saved the Cheboygan bus some gas on the trip over.

So, with a forfeit coming in the heavyweight division, Charlevoix realistically trails 31-28 with one match left.

Keith Parish is wrestling at 189 for the Rayders and in order for the team to win, Parish has to win and he has to win not just by a little. He needs to win big. He needs a pin.

But that's easier said than done. Even though Parish is wrestling at 189, he weighs something less than that. And beyond that, he's not the only one on the mat who wants to win. His opponent from Cheboygan has no intention of playing dead. He's tough and he wants to win too. The first two rounds are fairly close, but the Cheboygan wrestler leads on points.

In the final round, the Cheboygan wrestler gets an advantage and has Parish struggling just to survive. Parish is on his back with his shoulders perilously close to the mat. The referee is on his hands and knees, peaking in to see if he can still see daylight between Parish's shoulders and the mat. For a few seconds which seemed an eternity Parish and his opponent stayed this way, each straining, but neither making headway.

The clock is winding down. Not much more than a minute remains. For Charlevoix fans, the question seems to be not - can he win? But, can he survive and avoid getting pinned.

Then suddenly things change dramatically. Not only does Parish squirm and get off his back, he gets a reversal and the Cheboygan wrestler finds himself with a view of the rafters. Once again the referee is looking for daylight between shoulders and the mat. This time there is none.

Pop! The referees hand hits the mat.

Blink. Blink. The scoreboard flashes. Where seconds ago it read home 22, visitors 31 it now reads home 34, visitors 31.

A Rayder fan who had stepped out for a drink of water when it looked like the match was lost came back in and asked his wife what all the noise was for.

"We won," she told him.

As if the win over Cheboygan wasn't enough, the Rayders then followed that up by beating Gaylord 38-65 after trailing 23-6.

This week Charlevoix will participate in team districts Wednesday, Feb. 19 and in team districts Saturday, Feb. 22. And they've got momentum going in.

Individual results for the Rayders were:

Rayders
easily defeat Mancelona

Charlevoix led early, led late and led in the middle of a 77-48 win against Mancelona Friday evening.

After Charlevoix took a 21-8 lead at the end of the first quarter, the only suspense left in the game was who was going to be the homecoming king and queen. And that was resolved at halftime with B.J. VanLoon named king and Gina Webster named queen.

Charlevoix pressured the Ironmen into several turnovers and also rebounded well.

Mancelona had nobody who could match Brad DeGrow's height. DeGrow led the Rayders with 13 points and shared rebounding honors with Mike Dobulis as each player had nine.

Brian Coolman contributed 11 points and Dobulis 10. Don Jess had 10 assists.

The win-raised Charlevoix's season record to 6-8 overall and 4-5 in league play.

Charlevoix will travel to East Jordan Friday evening.

Volleyball team third in conference

Charlevoix's volleyball team placed third at the conference meet in Kalkaska Saturday behind Kalkaska and Elk Rapids.

In preliminary play the Rayders split two games with Mancelona, beat East Jordan and split with Elk Rapids.

In the semi-finals, Charlevoix lost to Kalkaska 16-14, 15-6.

Coach Brenday Bryan recognized Angelina Doan, Melissa Eaton and Christy Siwaga for outstanding play in the conference tournament.

Charlevoix will travel to Grayling Monday, Feb. 26.

Brad DeGrow scored 13 points in a 77-48 win over Mancelona Friday evening. Charlevoix led from the first quarter on and was never seriously challenged in the game.

Students send vets Valentines

This Valentine's Day will bring a happy surprise to the 192 Veterans living in the D.J. Jacobetti Michigan Veterans Facility in Marquette Michigan.

All four Charlevoix K-5 Kindergarten classes spent last Wednesday making dozens of Valentines for them in response to the Ann Landers - Valentine Vet program. The program was responsible last year for the delivery of more than 1.5 million Valentines greetings to our Veterans.

The Charlevoix Elementary School Kindergarten teachers, Mrs. Priess and Mrs. Miller, used this occasion to teach the students about caring and doing things for others. All together, the children made nearly 100 hand-crafted Valentines.

The Veterans Facility is a 192 bed home. It currently houses 15 women and 177 men. Veterans include two from World War I and more from World War II, the Korean conflict, and the Viet Nam war.

School meeting topics include finances, jobs, and Voc Ed

What is the financial picture for Charlevoix Public Schools? And what type of jobs are going to be available for Charlevoix High School graduates?

These are two of the issues which will be addressed at Charlevoix School's Strategic Planning Committee meeting which will take place from 7 p.m. to 9:30 p.m. Monday, Feb. 24 in the Charlevoix High School Study Hall. Interested community members are welcome to attend the meeting.

The agenda for Monday evening's meeting contains the following four topics:

1. Our Future Financial Picture - Rich Kelly, school business manager.
2. Report from "Job Market" Committee - Charlie Bentley, high school counselor.
3. Presentation on Intermediate School District Career and Technology Education Plan - Barry Anderson.
4. Review of the Jan. 30 meeting input - Tom Sothard.

BUSINESS

A local business based on innovation

By Ralph McRae
Forty years ago the Weather Shield Company at the north end of town had its beginning. Although its name has been changed over the years, the company is still going strong.

During World War II, the Foster Boat Company on Ferry Avenue built hundreds of landing craft. In the Pacific war zones, island after island was bombed from the air and shelled from the sea. But in the end it was the riflemen going ashore in landing craft built in Charlevoix who fought the final battle.

Among the people who worked in the landing craft plant were Oscar Stroud, Chuck Duerr and John K. Reed. After the war hundreds of manufacturing plants were constructed all across the country. Reed was one of the men who were eager to become a manufacturer. So Reed teamed up with his friend, Robert A. Paul, to form the Paul/Reed Company.

In 1950, some people were driving convertibles and topless cars. The driver and the front seat passenger enjoyed a pleasant ride behind the glass windshield, but their friends in the back seat weren't nearly as comfortable. In cooperation with a Detroit Company, the Paul/Reed Company began making wind deflectors for people riding in the back seats of convertibles. Unfortunately, there weren't enough convertibles to make this a highly profitable enterprise.

BUSINESS

...Weather Shield remains creative

The plant, which at the time was located in the old Int. Garage, had difficulty keeping busy and sought new products and better facilities. The facility problem was solved in late 1950s when the present building was constructed.

Developing new product lines is perhaps the most interesting part of the plant's history. In 1952, Hazel Reed was working on a wedding reception for her daughter, Colleen. One of the many tasks was to remove tarnish from the family's silverware. F.K. Reed walked past the sink and noticed that the knives and forks were getting brighter and cleaner seemingly on their own. It was surmised that a griddle which had shared the washwater with the silverware might have something to do with the silverware's cleaning.

Knowing that the Dow Company had made the griddle, the Reed's contacted the company and found that the griddle contained magnesium. This information led to the development of "Magic Leaf." Soon the Dow Company was stamping out thousands of leaf-shaped pieces of magnesium which were shipped to the Paul/Reed Company for finishing. The Magic Leafs were sold in three sizes: Princess, Queen and King.

Reed was forever developing interesting gadgets and then selling the production or sales rights to other companies.

One day Reed received a package containing an item embedded in plastic foam. He observed that the plastic foam had kept the article warm. Gathering up discarded scraps of plastic foam, he reduced them to small particles and placed them in a round cushion. In doing this he created the "Hot Seat." Colored red for hunting, thousands and thousands of "Hot Seats" were purchased by hunters and football fans. They were also used by drivers on cold car seats. Orders from cold places throughout the nation came pouring into the Paul/Reed firm.

With their foot in the door in the sporting goods industry, Paul/Reed expanded their sporting goods line. Some of their other sporting goods items included gun cases with adjustable sleeves which were designed by Wayne Belding and warm inner soles, called "Hot Socks," for shoes.

Reed's daughter and son-in-law, Colleen and Byron Wright, joined the firm in 1954. Reed died in 1958 and his wife, Hazel Reed, quit her job at the school and became the company's book keeper. The firm prospered.

In 1970, the corporation was sold to Paul Olsen. Olsen died in 1986. The plant is now owned by Coy Groves. New products and employees have been added as Groves made changes to make Weather Shield's merchandise more appealing to consumers.

(Next week, the Weather Shield story will continue and detail recent and ongoing improvements at the plant.)

Davis seeks re-election

Congressman Bob Davis has announced he will be running for re-election in Michigan's 11th Congressional District.

Davis, a Republican from Gaylord, was born in Marquette and raised in St. Ignace. He is the top-ranking republican on the House Merchant Marine and Fisheries Committee, and is also Vice Chairman of the House Armed Services Research and Development Subcommittee.

"I remain committed to helping the people of northern Michigan and the upper peninsula," Davis said. "Creating jobs, protecting the environment, and providing superior constituent service - those are my top priorities."

Odd Fellows face long odds

The Odd Fellows are looking more and more like chefs following this past Thursday evening's cribbage play. The Masons outscored the Odd Fellows 1,238 to 10 Thursday evening and now the lead 62nd annual tournament by 2,116 points with just three weeks of play left.

The losing team will be hosting the winners at dinner. Even though it's still mathematically possible for the Odd Fellows to win, in reality their backs are up against the stove.

Three Odd Fellows shared high scoring honors this past week. Rod Trimble, John Sharrow and Dean Pennell each totaled 960 points. Robert Pearl led the Masons with 929 points. There were eight and a-half tables in play.

The tournament resumes at 7:30 p.m. Feb. 20 at the American Legion Hall.

1992 Mount McSauba Sno Challenge

The Sno Challenge offered fun for young and old, including Tim Kliff.

Left: Snowmobilers competed against each other to see who could get to the top of the mountain first. The snowmobilers came to Charlevoix from throughout northern Michigan.

Right: She might have a few years on her, but she's got character. And she hauled her character to the top of Mount McSauba in the truck hill climb.

Emily Godwin-Chulik (left) and her friend ascend Mount McSauba to have a go at this sliding stuff.

Trucks which made it to the top of Mount McSauba found themselves with a nice view of the trucks below.

Students will get a chance to see an opera

Just imagine touring most of the capitals of Europe, entertaining great royalty with your wit and talent at the keyboard - all at the ripe old age of six! Those were the early years of the musical genius we know today as Wolfgang Amadeus Mozart.

Sponsored by the Crooked Tree Arts Council, nearly 2,000 elementary students in this area will follow Mozart's life from childhood prodigy, through his amazing musically productive teens and twenties to his early death at age 35 when Michigan Opera Theatre (MOT) makes a visit to area schools Feb. 27 and 28 with their production called "Let's Play Mozart", designed for K-6th grade audiences.

This is a return engagement by MOT. Last year they spent a week in residency visiting Charlevoix-Eminet County schools presenting workshops and programs and a public performance of Verdi's opera "La Traviata". Major funding for this year's two-day tour is being underwritten by Petoskey Plastics, Inc. Friday, Feb. 28, MOT will take it's program about Mozart and his music to Boyne City and Charlevoix Elementary Schools. This tour is also being supported by the Michigan Council for Arts and Cultural Affairs' Touring Arts Agency.

As part of their major focus on Mozart's 200th anniversary year, MOT under the general direction of David DiChiera and Karen V.

DiChiera, Director of Community Programs, a public performance of Mozart's comic one-act "singspiel" or "musical" called "The Impresario" will also be given by members of the Michigan Opera Theatre on Thursday evening, Feb. 27 at 8 p.m. in the Petoskey High School auditorium. "The Impresario", a short opera for all ages, is about an opera impresario who wants to give up producing opera and become a p.m. in the Petoskey High School auditorium. "The Impresario", a short opera for all ages, is about an opera impresario who wants to give up producing opera and become a chicken farmer so he doesn't have to be bothered with ambitious stage directors, bothersome patrons, and temperamental divas. He is convinced in the end to continue producing opera but only if everyone behaves! Reservations for this single performance may be made by calling the CTAC office, 347-4337. Tickets will be $10 for adults and $5 for students.

Concern voiced about material presented to students

by WENDI WRIGHT

Duane Nelson, minister at the Church of the Nazarene in Charlevoix, had some words of caution for the school board at the board's regular meeting Feb. 3.

Rev. Nelson appeared before the board with a prepared speech, and began by telling the board and the audience that he was speaking only for himself; that he was not representing any organization or group of people.

He said he also wanted to make it clear that the speech to follow was not an indictment of the school board; only cautionary remarks. He said that as an occasional substitute teacher in the Charlevoix system, he has been pleased with the school's responsiveness in dealing with past concerns.

He told the board he was there to speak to them because in the six years since he had been in the community, he has seen "Charlevoix the Beautiful" and "Charlevoix the Ugly," and it was heartbreak over the direction given children in the schools that had prompted him to appeal to the school board once again.

Nelson said he felt the school board should do everything possible to involve parents in the school system. He said invitations to meetings do not go far enough, as today's parents are stretched thin, and are too tired to attend meetings in the evenings. He said he feels that it is the school's responsibility to inform parents more completely.

The first example Nelson cited involved the distribution in the high school of a book provided by the District Health Department #3, titled "Get It, Got It, Good." The book explores issues of substance abuse, teenage sex, and contraception. Nelson said he felt the book did not go far enough in discouraging teenagers from having sex. His main concern, he said, was that the book condemned drug and alcohol use, but not non-committal in the discussion of sex and various methods of birth control available.

Nelson told the board that he felt parents should have been informed that the high school students were receiving these books. He told the board that parents had expressed concern to him because they didn't know what kind of information their children were being given.

Nelson went on to list three instances in which movies he felt were inappropriate were shown, or planned to be shown in high school. The first movie, "The Breakfast Club," which focuses on peer pressure and adolescent insecurity, was shown in a class at the high school. Nelson said he objected to this movie because it was rated "R" for strong language. He explained that the situation had been resolved to his satisfaction, when after he complained to David Smith, high school principal, the teacher was reprimanded, and had apologized to parents and to Rev. Nelson.

The second and third movies Nelson cited, were not shown in class because of intervention on the part of Nelson and another area minister. Nelson said he objected to "Dances With Wolves," and "Silence of the Lambs," because of graphic violence, nudity and strong language.

Finally, Nelson described to the board what he views as the lack of discipline in the school system. He cited as an example a student who used foul language before a basketball game and was not disciplined in any way. He said that allowing poor language in children lowers the child's ability to respect authority. Nelson said he had complained many times about the language used in the classrooms in which he was a substitute teacher, and that the principals had always been receptive to his concerns. He added, however, that he felt he was no longer asked to sub because he had been critical.

Nelson concluded his comments by stating that he was not there to fight with the board, but that he had simply wanted to express his concern over the "misdirection given to children without parental consent."

In response to Nelson's speech, board members discussed the emergence of the use of videotaped movies in the classroom, and the need to write a policy designed to limit the use of commercial movies on the basis of educational value.

Opposition voiced to proposed state redistricting

By L. Scott Swanson

John Haggard fears that a state redistricting proposal may jeopardize Charlevoix County's interests in the state house of representatives.

A three-judge state redistricting panel has recommended that Charlevoix County be placed in a state house district with Cheboygan, Presque Isle and Alpena Counties; three counties on the state's eastern shoreline. Haggard feels that these three counties have different interests than Charlevoix County and that Charlevoix County would be better off in a district with Antrim, Otsego, Kalkaska, Crawford and Oscoda Counties. Currently Charlevoix shares a house district with Antrim, Otsego, Crawford, Roscommon and Ogemaw Counties and is represented by State Representative Ralph Ostling, R-Roscommon.

Haggard is the Charlevoix County Republican Party Chairman, but says this is not a matter of party politics, but is simply a matter of looking after the best interests of Charlevoix County.

According to Haggard, if the proposed redistricting plan is adopted by the State Supreme Court, it could put Charlevoix County in a politically difficult position at the state level for the next 10 years.

"I think it (the redistricting issue) is the most important thing in Northern Michigan, as far as Charlevoix County is concerned, bar none," Haggard said.

Haggard has talked to the Charlevoix City Council, Charlevoix County Commissioners, an attorney and members of political parties from other counties. He said the people he has talked to have generally been willing to help get the proposed redistricting changed and feel the change is possible.

"We need every bit of support we can get," he said.

Although there is general support, that support is not unanimous. Haggard said some party officials in Lansing would just as soon not stir things. Haggard's response is that since the proposal is not in Charlevoix County's best interest, he is unwilling to sit quietly and watch it go through.

The plan was submitted to the State Supreme Court Feb. 20. The court will be taking testimony March 4.

Haggard has been talking to county commissioners in an effort to have them file a brief opposing the redistricting. He has also talked to attorney Roy Hayes and his firm about drafting a brief. Monday evening, Haggard elicited the support of the Charlevoix City Council. He has also talked to city administrators in Boyne City and East Jordan.

Judy, Judy, Judy's...it's a local place to meet

By Laurie Lounsbury

It's where local political issues are hotly debated—it's where inside jokes are told and repeated—it's Judy's Restaurant in Charlevoix, currently owned by Ed and Judy Johnson, where a devoted band of patrons have been hanging their hats for 40 years.

"We have a bunch of really nice people coming in," said Judy Johnson, as she puts the finishing touches on a hamburger she's about to serve.

The restaurant, located near the corner of Antrim and State St., got its beginning in the early 1940's, when Keith and Thelma Wagner owned the business and called it "Wag's." The location of the business, so close to City Hall and the Courthouse, made it immediately popular with city councilmen, lawyers, judges, and anyone looking for the latest scoop on local happenings. Ann Left bought the cozy, informal establishment from the Wagners and it became Left's, a family business run by Ann, her son Butch, and daughter Sue.

The tradition of drinking coffee and sharing news has continued throughout the changes in ownership. John and Bill Haggard, Sam Supernaw, and Mike Gibbons took over after the Lefts until Judy Elzinga bought it in 1977 and changed the name to Judy's. Elzinga and her sister, Sue Meier, spent eleven happy years in the business, until Elzinga, now married to Mark Holland, decided to sell the business and devote more time to a

Throughout the years and the changes in ownership, the "coffee and conversation crowd" has remained essentially the same. On any given day of the week you can probably find the same men laughing at Sheridan Root's practical jokes or arguing over last week's council meeting.

"Owners come and go, but we stay," Oscar Stroud, one of the regular customers says with a smile.

Ed and Judy Johnson have been the proprietors of Judy's since they bought it in 1988. It was a lucky coincidence that the new owner and the former owner shared the same first name. The changes they have made have been minor, with some redecorating and menu additions. They would like to increase their dinner business, but are pleased with their breakfast and lunch crowd.

The first round of action usually takes place between six and eight in the morning at Judy's. The center table fills up quickly as regulars order coffee and pull up chairs. Conversation at the center table is the featured attraction, and throughout the course of the day, at least one or two familiar faces will be gathered at this table, while others drift in for coffee breaks or meals.

Last Friday morning, the first shift of coffee klatchers had already come and gone by 7:35a.m. At 9:30, the mid morning coffee break crowd was starting to assemble. Oscar Stroud headed the table, and seated with him were Dave Dutcher, Bob Timms, Butch Russell, Bill Russell, Jerry Whitley, and a couple of second-generation restaurant regulars, Tom Left and Tom Meggison.

Jerry Whitley, a customer since the early '40s, reminisced about some of the events he's witnessed from his center seat at Judy's. Whitley spoke of the old gas station that used to neighbor Judy's, and the boardinghouse and bar for black people, run by Zack White, that was across the street. White's boardinghouse and bar provided a haven for the black chauffeurs and maids who weren't permitted to patronize the other establishments in town. Whitley recalls seeing a young black fellow coming and going from Zack's place in the '40s. Whitley stopped White at the gas pumps and asked him who the new kid was. "He's a musician," White replied. "His name is Duke Ellington."

Women assert themselves once every four years

All of you single women, take your marks, get set, go get a husband! It's 1992, a Leap Year, and according to long standing traditions, it's the year that women can lawfully pursue single men and propose marriage.

While it's difficult to determine just why leap year was designated as a year when women could pursue their choice of mates, a legend found in the book, Holidays of Legend, goes back to the time when priests and nuns could marry, and sites St. Patrick as the originator of the tradition. According to the story, St. Patrick was up in arms over a group of angry nuns, headed by St. Bridget. The nuns were in tears over the unfairness of men being the only sex permitted to propose marriage to the person of their choice. They wanted that privilege for themselves as well. St. Patrick suggested that women have the opportunity to propose marriage every seven years, but crafty St. Bridget held out in the negotiations until St. Patrick decided to make it every four years. This arrangement was taken very seriously in the Old World, as is shown by some old Scottish legislation.

In 1288, the Scots passed a law making it illegal for a man to refuse a woman's marriage proposal during a leap year unless he could prove he was already bettothed to another woman. Breaking that law resulted in a very stiff fine.

The arrangement of women being able to propose marriage during leap years must have been thrown overboard as immigrants made their way to the new world, because there are no records pertaining to pioneer women proposing marriage to dashing pioneer men.

In 1938, cartoonist Al Capp reintroduced the old custom in his cartoon, L'il Abner. In Capp's mythical town of Dogpatch, his female characters, with Sadie Hawkins leading the crowd, were free to race after any of the unattached males in town. When they caught themselves a bachelor, the man was obliged to "marry up" with the female that caught him. Cap's introduction of this day, Sadie Hawkins Day, apparently filled a gap in the American social culture, for it was well received and widely celebrated. It is still a popular event, although it has degenerated to an amusing ceremony without any actual matrimony resulting. The Weathervane will be hosting a Sadie Hawkins dance on February 29, featuring "illegally binding shotgun weddings." People are welcome to join in a rousing chorus of "Blessed be the Hogue that binds."

Team considers school's best and worst

By WENDI WRIGHT

The Charlevoix school's Strategic Planning Team was given another piece of the puzzle at its meeting Monday night. It came in the form of a report, compiled by Tom Sothard, a Charlevoix teacher, detailing the thoughts and suggestions of the community members and school staff who attended a special Strategic Team meeting last month.

Over 250 people attended that January meeting, and they were asked to respond to four questions:

1. What is working well in the Charlevoix school system?
2. What do Charlevoix schools need to improve or change?
3. How can we best prepare Charlevoix students for the future?
4. What are the biggest obstacles Charlevoix schools will encounter in preparing students for the future?

Monday night the Strategic Planning team heard the answers to those questions.

What is working well in our schools? The most common answer to this first question was "good teachers." The group also cited a well-rounded curriculum, enrichment activities, and community support as positive aspects of the Charlevoix school system. Additional comments included good discipline, good test scores, good student, parental involvement, good counseling services, and Charlevoix's new superintendent, Roberta Jackson. These are the things that are working well, however.

What do our schools need to improve or change? According to Sothard's report, the lion's share of the answers to this question revolved around curriculum, especially vocational education. Other areas of concern in the curriculum were technology, advance placement, world studies futurism, and life skills, such as parenting and financial planning. Other suggested changes/improvements included: earlier introduction and more variety of foreign language classes, more art and music, reduced class sizes, updated libraries in all three buildings, as well as the community, library, and more intramural sports to involve more kids.

In addition to the curriculum, staff training, better teacher evaluations, higher expectations for students and teachers, better communication by school personnel, better input opportunities for teachers, students, and the community, and parent involvement were all listed as areas requiring change or improvement in the Charlevoix schools.

How can we best prepare our students for the future? What should the priorities be? The number one answer to this question turned out to be "parenting and life skills." In fact, the first three most common responses seem to emphasize the person in the student; development of self-esteem and problem-solving skills were next on the list, followed by emphasizing study skills and a strong work ethic.

Finally, technology education and career development were also high on the list of priorities. Vocational education was mentioned again under this heading, as were smaller class sizes, and increased parental involvement.

What are the biggest obstacles we shall encounter in preparing our students for the future? "Adequate funding" appeared as the most frequent response to this question. Other obstacles listed were lack of family support (dysfunctional families), facilities/space (large classes), fear of change, and teacher training.

One aspect of the law governing redistricting is that the counties involved must be contiguous. Charlevoix and Cheboygan Counties are contiguous, but only for about a six mile strip on the edge of Chandler Township.

Haggard maintains that Charlevoix County has much more in common with counties in the western and central portion of the state. As an example, he cites the District 3 Heath Department, solid waste planning, and the Northwestern Michigan Planning group. He also contends that Apena County has much more in common with Aloon County than with Charlevoix County.

Prosecutors criticized

Editor,
Whoever is fed up having the babies of Charlevoix county raped and the criminals of these horrendous crimes get very little jail time, if any? Get these Prosecutors out of office NOW!

The only thing that is done for the citizens of Charlevoix, as far as I am concerned, is our fearless Prosecutors are plea bargaining us away.

What you hear is, it takes too much time and money to do our jobs. This is what I was told. What a copout! I don't believe that any law abiding citizen of Charlevoix would want to save a few dollars so a criminal can be set free.

When a baby of a law abiding citizen, who pays his taxes and who loves his family, had his little baby girl raped by a demented criminal, and when the perpetrator is apprehended for a first degree rape charge and then the plea bargain is put in place because it's easier for the Prosecutor's Office, it can not be tolerated.

I hope it won't be ever again in this county.

I don't believe these criminals of the highest magnitude should get a slap on the hand. They should get the full punishment of the law.

Please, when election time is here, let's go to the poles and vote this kind of action out of our county. Vote in someone who cares about us; you and me, instead of saving money at the expense of our most precious possessions, our babies.

Let's make the Prosecutors responsible for prosecuting and not plea bargain the undesirables back on our streets to do it again and again.

When it's times to vote - DO IT!

Edward Germain

Prosecutors' response

Editor,
In response to Edward Germain's letter, I would like the community to know the following facts:

From January, 1988 through December, 1991, the Office of the Prosecuting Attorney has charged 47 defendants with 78 separate incidences of criminal sexual conduct (CSC). Forty of those 47 defendants were convicted of either the original charges or, more likely, plead guilty to a lesser charge arranged through plea bargaining. Three defendants had the charges against them dismissed because of a failure of evidence; four defendants were found "not guilty" after a jury trial.

The conviction rate for the Charlevoix County Prosecuting Office is 85 percent.

Criminal sexual conduct trials are extremely difficult to prosecute. The crimes are such that often only the defendant and the victim were present when the crime occurred. There often is no medical evidence to support the victim's claim of molestation; this is especially true when the victim is male. It is hard to convince a jury that a defendant is guilty "beyond a reasonable doubt" when the only witness is a minor.

Additionally, it is very difficult for a child victim to testify in a courtroom where there are lots of strangers and the defendant who is accused of the crime. It is unbelievably hard for a victim of any age or sex to talk in front of strangers about intimate sexual matters, including intercourse, fellatio, sodomy, and brutality. It is especially difficult for children in a formal, public, adult forum. The victim is also subject to cross-examination by the defense which tests memory and veracity, which calls into question the victim's understanding of reality, and quite often leaves the victim feeling revictimized.

Plea bargaining is an important tool in the prosecution arsenal. There are too few trial dates available to take every case to trial. A victim may be too traumatized to testify. A victim may testify at the Preliminary Examination and may be unable to testify by the time trial is scheduled.

The Office of the Prosecuting Attorney here in Charlevoix County is aggressive in pursuing and prosecuting CSC cases. The record of this office in CSC cases speaks for itself. In the particular case Germain is upset about, the defendant was convicted and received a year in jail.

Sincerely,
Karen L. Neumeyer
Assistant Prosecuting Attorney
Charlevoix County

Redistricting plan should be opposed

An effort to change a proposed state redistricting plan merits support. (See related story page 1.)

According to the proposal, Charlevoix County would be placed in a state house district with Cheboygan, Presque Isle and Alpena Counties; three counties on the state's eastern shoreline. Nothing against those three counties or their inhabitants, but one need only to drive through Charlevoix County and any one of the other three counties to see that there are differences in geography and level of development.

Charlevoix has some different needs and interests; needs and interests which are more similar to counties such as Antrim, Kalkaska, Otsego and Crawford Counties. Several agencies have recognized this. That is why agencies such as District Health Department #3 and the Northwestern Michigan Planning and Development Consortium encompass some of the aforementioned western and central Michigan counties.

One of the requirements for counties to share a district is that the counties be contiguous. Charlevoix is contiguous to Cheboygan County, for about a six-mile stretch of Chandler Township. That's something many Charlevoix and East Jordan residents probably aren't even aware of.

Shared interests and needs outweigh shared boundary lines. In the interest of both Charlevoix County and the three eastern counties, the proposed redistricting plan should be changed. It should be changed so that it is possible for the state representative, whomever that may be, to speak for the interests of his or her entire constituency.

For the benefit of all those who have exchanged palms for pines, Charlevoix reminds those of us who are still here of Albertsville without the Alps: It is SO beautiful! Yesterday morning, Frosty the Snowman arrived unannounced. When I drove north on Petoskey, it looked as if every bush and tree had burst into fluffy white blossoms. The bright sun quickly melted the icy gloves on each little twig, so the picture didn't last long. But the beauty of the sparkling scene lifted my spirits for the whole day.

The few of us who are still in town carry on with routine meetings. We listen to the talk in the coffee shops on the impact of K-Mart Mall on Bridge Street. Let me report to you that the face of Bridge Street is changing for the better. Much better! Gone are the too-many T-shirt shops, too many yogurt shops and too many fudge shops. Instead, a few new up-scale specialty businesses are joining the variety of successful establishments such as Metters, Shop of the Gulls, Bahnhof, the Appletree, Kountry Gallery, American Spoon, the Rocking Horse, Aardvark, and the Linda Mason Interior Design Studio.

Starting at the Edgewater Inn, TAPAWINGO is opening the former Cafe in April to be called PETE & MICKEY'S. On the corner of Park Avenue, NORTHERN POSSESSIONS has just completed a major, attractive remodeling of the building. There are other changes in the wind. Across the street, in the middle of the block, we hear the COLDWELL BANKERS REAL ESTATE OFFICE may move south on top of the hill. If this happens, then their former space will no longer be available for offices. The reason for this on the second floor, has already moved across the street from the Post Office.

Petoskey has done an outstanding job recently in revitalizing the looks of their buildings, in the Gaslight District. A sub-committee called the Design Review Committee, of which Rick Neumann, architect and authority on restoration, is chairman, has been of great help to the Downtown Development Partnership. The facade loan program has been developed with the cooperation of local banks, where merchants are offered loans up to $10,000 at two percent below prime, with a 10-year payback period. Andy Hayes of the Chamber of Commerce spearheaded the program and the results are noticeable. According to Bill Day, First of America Bank, another new program is being tackled to give incentive in remodeling vacant buildings.

It's encouraging to see positive good signs both in Charlevoix and Petoskey. I find myself enjoying the individual flavor, selection and service one gets when shopping on Bridge Street, while also taking advantage of the variety of items that are available in K-Mart which one needs in keeping house. As I see it, it's quite possible that up-scale Bridge Street shops and the pedestrian K-Mart Mall can both live together in the same town.

BEACONS

OF BLESSINGS

By Pastor Joe Johnston

A few years ago some friends of mine and I went to New Orleans, Louisiana for the Mardi Gras Festival. We had heard very shocking stories about the pervasiveness, gross atrocities and lawlessness of the Festival but were ever shocked to find out the stories were more true than we had anticipated. This pagan festival, claimed to be a religious holiday by some, was nothing more than a drunken orgy, full of every vile thing imaginable. We were appalled even though we expected it.

As my friends and I walked the streets of the French Quarter we wept over its people engulfed in sin. We were there; not to party, but to share the love of Jesus with people who were lost and dying in their sin. Some listened but, sadly, most did not. It soon occurred to us that many people we talked to had no real concept of responsibility. They were consumed with the hour at hand, with no thought for what would happen later. They denied the laws of God and the consequences for breaking those laws.

In the Bible (God's Word) the book of Hebrews tells us that it is appointed for man once to die; after that the judgment. We will all stand before God one day and He will tell us if we have been true to the responsibility He has given us. Those who have abided by God's wonderful guidelines will be granted eternal life in Heaven. Those who have not obeyed will likewise be granted eternal life in Hell.

Near the end of the Sermon on the Mount, Jesus says, "Every tree that does not bear good fruit is cut down and thrown into the fire" (Matt. 7:19) the Greek term fire here is of the same root word as Hell, Gehenna, meaning the fire which is always burning.

There are consequences to everything we do, both good and bad. The consequence of disobedience to God is Hell. I'm so glad that Jesus paid the price for all to be free from Hell. He tells us that unless we repent we will surely perish.

So what about America? Are we all going to Hell because of abortion, incest, murder, rape, lying, stealing and gossip? No! Only those who refuse to repent (turn from disobedience to God) from such things. The rest of us who do, will go to a literal Heaven where we will stand face to face with God and continue to be His children.

We need not forget to pray for those who as of yet have not repented. If God does not judge us then He will have to apologize to Sodom and Gomorrah.

America...
One nation under God with liberty and judgment for all.

Charlevoix Public library, it's a place

By L. Scott Swanson

In a way, it's kind like Alice's Restaurant. If it's information you're after, you can get anything you want at the Charlevoix Public Library.

The Charlevoix Public Library began in 1909 as a Carnegie Library at the corner of State and Clinton Streets. It moved to its new building at 109 Clinton Street in 1967.

Despite being a small-town library, the amount of information either contained at, or accessible through, the Charlevoix Library is amazing. Even if you can't find what you're looking for among the 22,000 volumes within the library, the library belongs to a library interloan system which allows books from other libraries to be checked out through the Charlevoix Library. In addition to that, the library is in the process of computerization which is going to place even more information at people's fingertips.

"People have wanted us to be more computerized and we're going that way," explained librarian Marybeth Wallick.

The Charlevoix Public Library belongs to the Northland Library Cooperative, a group of 17 northern Michigan libraries. Through a grant program, the cooperative is having all of the holdings of the libraries listed on a computer CD-ROM system. Once that project is completed, a person sitting at a workstation in the Charlevoix Public Library will not only be able to look up books in that library, but also in several others.

In addition to that work station, the library will also have another CD-ROM station where people can read things on screen. Among the subjects available at that station will be an encyclopedia, business statistics, U.S. History, an almanac and assorted information pertaining to animals.

Although the computers are expensive and it's taken a lot of work to determine what will best suit the library's needs, Wallick is enthusiastic about the computerization. "I can't wait 'til that stuff gets here. That looks like fun," she said.

Computers are by no means the first technological advance the Charlevoix Public Library has added. About a year ago, the library began building a video collection. With the videos, Wallick has tried to steer clear of competing with commercial video establishments. Instructional and travel videos are among the more popular videos at the library.

The Charlevoix Public Library has a budget of around $150,000 per year. Most of the funding, around $120,000, comes from a five-tenths of a mill property tax levy in the Charlevoix school district. The millage is separate from school taxes, but the book-keeping is done through the school district.

The library also receives about $24,000 from fines collected by the county for things such as traffic and parking violations. Wallick said that in some counties, libraries have had problems with county commissioners attempting to divert those funds to other uses, but that in Charlevoix County, the county commissioners have always been very good about funding for area libraries.

There are also people who make private contributions to the public library. Those contributions amount to a few hundred dollars a year.

And yes, the library does collect money for overdue books. But at a quarter a book, that doesn't add up to much; perhaps $200 a year.

When asked what type of people frequent the Library, Wallick said, "A total cross-section." In order to appeal to such a

Some public library notables

Some things you should know but probably don't: 1. The library has travel videos. 2. The sidewalk is kept so well-swept by Mr. Smith.

This is unusual: There's a Harlequin Romance book in the Michigan Room.

The library's 5 best books according to the librarian: There are 7 of them. They are the Bob Miles collection which were donated to the library.

wide variety of clientele, the library keeps a wide variety of information. In fact the library has such a variety of books, that you don't even have to be able to read in order to enjoy some of them. Among the books at the library are picture books for parents to go through with infants.

Wallick said that in comparison to other similar communities, Charlevoix has a public library which is bigger both in terms of physical dimensions and number of books. Most of the books are purchased either from large book companies or at a discount from area book stores.

Asked if she reads a lot herself, Wallick replied, "As much as I can, but there's no way you can keep up with it all."

The library has three full-time staff members: Wallick, Jean McGhee and Shirley Kemp.

In addition to the main area of the library, there are other things taking place in other parts of the building. There is a magazine exchange in the entryway, where people may drop off or pick up old magazines to read. There is an activity room in the basement which is utilized by non-profit organizations.

The library is open: Monday and Thursday from noon to 8 p.m.; Tuesday from 10:30 a.m. to 5:30 p.m.; Wednesday from 1 p.m. to 8 p.m.; Friday from 1 p.m. to 5 p.m.; and Saturday from 11 a.m. to 3 p.m.

Along with fulfilling traditional library functions, the library also serves as a location for various nonprofit groups to meet. The library activity room hosts a variety of children's events. This past Saturday morning, children met in the room and also toured an ambulance.

Librarian Marybeth Wallick and Diana Tank take a look at one of the seven books in the Bob Miles collection. The collection is kept in its own shelf which was built for the library by Bill Garten.

Ski teams fail to qualify for state

Charlevoix's girls' ski team just missed qualifying for the State meet, finishing third last Thursday's Regional meet at Schuss Mountain behind Petoskey and Traverse City. The Rayder boys' team placed eighth.

Katherine Campbell and Dan Hoadley did qualify for the State meet as individuals. Campbell placed fifth in the giant slalom and sixth in the slalom. Hoadley placed seventh in the slalom.

Rayder coach Eric Lundteigen said that, as always, the regional competition was tough in northern Michigan.

"It's definitely the toughest region in the state," he said.

Although neither team qualified, Lundteigen was not disappointed with his skiers.

"We had a good meet. We just got beat," he remarked.

Individual results for the Rayders were:

Girls
Campbell 6S, 5GS: Kelly Heck 15S, 28GS; Amy Spaa 16S, 27GS; Kim Keller 25S, 13GS; Jessica Kline 60S, 20GS; Shelia Siegwart 85S, 25GS.

Boys
Dan Hoadley 7S, 91GS; Dan Spang 31S, 30GS; Charles Meier 42S, 1H; Heck 53S, 26GS; Scotty Boyer 63S, 23GS; Jake Porath 103S, 42GS; Ryan Smith 47GS.

Charlevoix's eighth grade basketball team celebrates after winning the Inland Lakes middle school basketball tournament. Charlevoix beat the host team 42-33 in the finals. Charlevoix was coached by Hank Wagner. Former coach Barry Pierce, who had to leave the team earlier in the season due to health problems, was brought down from the stands by the players following the game to help them celebrate. Team district is a problem...

Injuries, illness and a good Rogers City team conspired to eliminate Charlevoix from Class C team district wrestling tournament last week.

Charlevoix had to forfeit five matches, consequently spotting Rogers City 30 points on the way to a 52-16 loss.

Winning for Charlevoix were:

Jason Pajtas at 152 pounds on a 9-2 decision;
Shawn Young at 130 pounds on a 1-0 decision;
Chris McCallum at 125 pounds on a pin in 2:48;
Dan Browe in the heavyweight division on a 7-0 decision.

Rayders losing matches were:

Jason Hughes at 103 pounds on a 12-2 decision;
Jason VanLoon at 119 pounds on a pin in 3:58;
Tony Potter at 145 pounds on a pin in 49 seconds;
Keith Parish at 189 pounds on a 14-1 decision.

...but wrestlers do better individually

Eight of 10 Charlevoix wrestlers competing in the individual District Meet at Sanford this past Saturday have qualified for this Saturday's Regional Meet in Ithaca.

Jason Pajtas won the 152 pound weight class. He opened the day with a pin, was almost pinned in his second match prior to pinning his opponent and took a 6-4 decision in the finals.

Chris McCallum placed second at 135 pounds, losing in the finals on a 9-2 decision.

Shawn Young placed third at 125 pounds going 3-1 on the day and taking a 6-4 decision in the consolation finals.

Tony Potter, a junior, took fourth place at 145 pounds.

Jason Hughes, a freshman, took fourth at 103 pounds, losing an 8-6 overtime decision in the consolation finals.

Keith Parish, a sophomore, lost a 5-4 decision in the consolation finals to take fourth place.

Dan Browe went 2-2 in the heavyweight division to take a fourth place. Charlevoix was competing in a district loaded with some of the state's best Class C heavyweights.

Prior to the season, coach Greg Bryan said he wouldn't be surprised to have as many as six wrestlers qualify for the state meet.

Illness had bothered the Rayders at the team district meet earlier last week, but by this weekend several of the wrestlers had recovered.

College hoops career concludes

When the Southeastern College basketball team takes to the floor this week, a Charlevoix player will be putting the finishing touches on a successful college career. Darrin Batdorff of Charlevoix has been a four-year starter at the Lakeland, Florida college despite the fact that he didn't go out for basketball during his junior and senior years at Charlevoix High School.

"Darrin's just been a real solid player, a guy that gives you the same game every time," said Southeastern coach Scott Laing.

Although neither Batdorff nor Laing would pretend to be operating on any hero near the same plane as Detroit's All-Star forward Dennis Rodman, many of the things Laing says about the Charlevoix forward bring to mind descriptions of Rodman.

"He's an emotional player, very intense."

"When we go to a man-to-man defense, he's guarding the other team's best player."

"He's real strong. He's always in great shape."

"On offense, sometimes he gets 18 or 20 points a game; but a lot of those will be off rebounds and put-backs. I think he's always taken pride in defense."

Southeastern College is a Division II school with about 1,200 students. They play in the Florida Christian College Conference and belong to the National Christian College Athletic Association. None of the colleges in the conference offer scholarships.

Batdorff, the son of Delbert and Carolyn Batdorff, didn't go to the college with the intention of playing basketball. In high school, he had played some basketball in his freshman and sophomore years, but felt his strongest sports were football and track.

When he arrived at Southeastern, he began playing some pick-up games in the gym to fill spare time.

Coincidentally, Laing happened to be in need of some players. Several players from the previous year's team had graduated and

Darrin Batdorff
Laing had some holes to fill. Some of the other students told Laing that Batdorff had been hanging around the gym and playing some basketball. Although Laing hadn't realized Batdorff played basketball, he knew who he was because Batdorff was in his health education class.

One day after class as the students were fitting out, Laing corralled Batdorff and asked him to consider trying out for the Southeastern team. Batdorff said he hadn't played any competitive basketball in three years, but he agreed to try out.

"He came out and we could see that he was an athlete and could help us right off the bat," Laing said. "He's been a four-year starter. We'd lost a lot of players and freshmen were forced to play."

The team has been improving during the past four years. The first year they won only six games and the next two years they won 21 and 27, either sharing or winning outright the conference title. This year the team is 17-11 entering tournament play.

Laing said that like the team, Batdorff has steadily improved.

"He's a whole lot better player than when he started here," Laing observed. He described Batdorff as a player who came into the program raw and unpolished, but a good athlete who works hard and takes pride in playing tough defense.

Although the strongest part of his game is defense, he recently scored his 1,000th career point.

Rayders lose to East Jordan

Charlevoix's varsity basketball team continued to be streaky in a come-from-ahead loss to East Jordan Friday evening. The Rayders led 10-4 after the first quarter, but trailed 59-51 at the end of the final quarter.

After Charlevoix's spurt in the first quarter, East Jordan rallied. At halftime, the Rayders led by only a point, 38-27.

East Jordan took the lead in the third quarter, but Charlevoix came back to keep the game close in the fourth. The game was nip and tuck with just minutes to play, but with time winding down the Rayders were still behind and consequently had to foul. East Jordan handled the pressure well and made their free throws.

Brad DeGrow led Charlevoix's offense with 12 points. Brian Coolman added 11 and Luke LaBlance 10.

Charlevoix will host league-leading Traverse City St. Francis Friday evening.

State student testing has gotten tougher

By WENDI WRIGHT

The results of the annual Michigan Educational Assessment Test are out, and on the whole Charlevoix students fared pretty well, according to Connie Drury, Middle School guidance counselor. Drury gave a full report on the test results to the school board at its regular meeting Feb. 17.

Drury prefaced his remarks to the board by saying that the testing system in Michigan entered a new era with this year's test. In the past, he said, the test had been geared toward assessing minimal skills in students, and now the emphasis was on essential skills, requiring a higher level of proficiency. This shift in emphasis coincides with the outcomes-based form of education Michigan schools are adopting.

What the shift means to students and teachers is that the tests are more difficult, especially this year, as some of the items on the test were a surprise, and had not yet been taught in Charlevoix classrooms at the time the test was taken. Drury cited the 4th Grade and 10th Grade Math tests as examples of parts of the test that were particularly difficult. On the whole, however, Charlevoix students equaled or exceeded the state average in most categories. For example, in the 4th Grade reading category, 44.8% of the Charlevoix students were at the highest achievement level, while the state average was only 34.7%.

The only category in which Charlevoix fell well below the state average was 10th Grade reading. 26.9% of Charlevoix students scored at the highest achievement level, compared to the state average of 38.7%.

Drury told the board that the test results in all categories reflected the newness and higher difficulty of this year's test, as well as a curriculum alignment problem. He told the board that some items on the test had not been taught to the students at the tested grade level, because in the present curriculum they were scheduled to be taught later in the year. He said he felt a review of the curriculum was necessary, in order to ensure that the curriculum for each grade level coincides with what the state will be testing at that level. He added that he felt it would take two years for Charlevoix students to achieve higher scores as the curriculum is adjusted to the timescale of the new test.

St. Mary's hosts chili dinner

The St. Mary's Home and School Association will be sponsoring a chili supper from 5 p.m. to 7 p.m. Friday, Feb. 28 at the Parish Center. The cost of the supper will be $2.25; students and senior citizens $1.50; families $10; and preschoolers free.

Charlevoix fifth grade students in Kathy Gowell's class recently dressed the part for their study of colonial times. In addition to dressing in colonial attire, the students stood for recitation and wrote with chalk on slates. The colonial study unit is popular with the students and is something Gowell and other fifth grade teachers have been doing each year.

Other areas viewed as obstacles included obtaining and holding quality staff, students not prepared to learn, long-range planning, management of the "knowledge explosion," too much TV and Nintendo, and social and economic polarization.

As Whitley recounted tales from the good old days, Mike Wiesner, Curt Thompson, Barry Wood, Russell Lewis, and Lee Moerland took up seats at the center table. Lewis told stories of Thelma Wagner and her attention to neatness in the restaurant. "One woman kept coming in for breakfast and wiping the silverware off with her napkin, which made Thelma absolutely furious," Lewis recalled.

The conversation shifted to the successful SnoChallenge Festival. Lee Moerland joked about the only problem caused by the big fireworks. "The height of the Mountain dropped six inches when they shot off the big fireworks," Moerland said with a grin.

The noon whistle brought Max Novak and John Haggard to the center table, where they debated the 911 issue. "I'll tell you how Charlevoix County can have an economically feasible 911 plan," Haggard said. "The plan should be not to have 911."

With that subject resolved, they began to discuss school board activities. Novak remembers bringing former school superintendent Gordon Van Wieren into Judy's on a regular basis, so that Van Wieren would be aware of the public's opinion. "I've been thinking of inviting Robert Jackson (the new superintendent) to Judy's for breakfast, but I'm not sure if I should," Novak said. The center table at Judy's is almost always an entirely male crowd, and the presence of a woman at that table brings looks of surprise to the regulars as they come through the door. While the center table is always occupied by the enduring male crowd, the surrounding tables fill up with a mixed variety of patrons. "Women are always welcome here," said Judy Johnson. Husband Ed added, "It's becoming more of a mixed crowd, and we like it."

In the summer, tourists frequent Judy's to find out what's happening in town. Says Holland, a former owner, "The tourists loved it - it was like a show for them." Tourists and regulars both found themselves getting their legs pulled by Sheridan Root. He would convincingly tell the rapt listeners stories of dirt bikers trying to climb the water tower, or would have people rushing to the windows to see an invented flock of ducks crossing the street. "You never knew what Sheridan was going to say," said Meier. Holland added that Judy's has always been a good place to go in the morning to start the day. "People will always say something that will wake you up."

Judy's Restaurant is a unique, present day example of something that rarely exists in our current, fast-paced society. It's a place for old friends and new adversaries to gather and hash out their differences; or to simply put aside their political opposition for a few moments and enjoy the camaraderie. It's a political haven, a comfortable meeting place, and a welcome respite from the world outside.

Weather Shield prospers in sporting goods market

(Editor's note: The following story is one in a series of stories about local industries being written for the Courier by Ralph McRae. McRae is a former council member and mayor and is presently a member of the Charlevoix Industrial Development Committee. This week's story about Weather Shield Inc. is a continuation of a story from last week.)

By Ralph McRae

In 1967, Paul Olsen purchased the Paul Reed firm and a short time later renamed it Weather Shield. For the next 16 years, gun cases, Hot Seats and Magic Leafs were the company's main products.

Olsen also owned two other manufacturing plants. Coy Groves, manager of the local Weather Shield plant, has also managed those two facilities.

Olsen died in 1986. The following year, through NBD bank of Detroit, Weather Shield was sold to the Fairfax Corporation of Fairhaven, Michigan. Fairfax was a long established supplier of seat cushions to the auto industry. In taking over Weather Shield, 60 additional employees were required for the seat-making business. Groves became the manager of both divisions.

In November, 1990, Fairfax was purchased by the Lear Sigler Corporation. In Dec. 1991 the seat making business departed Charlevoix and was moved back to its home plant in Fairhaven.

In January, 1991 Groves left Lear Sigler and became part owner of Weather Shield. Weather Shield leased 25,000 square feet of space. Groves, originally from West Virginia, had been involved in plants in Maryland which are similar to Weather Shield. For years, he has attended annual sporting goods conventions and become knowledgeable of the sporting goods industry.

Weather Shield is now selling most of its products to two of the country's largest merchandizing chains: Walmart and K-Mart. Suppliers to these chains are required to have not only superior products, but also dependable delivery schedules.

The manufacturing of Hot Seats was discontinued last year. The company now has three main products. The hottest item, volume-wise, is a cover for outdoor grills. In less than 12 months, Weather Shield has made 150,000 of the grill covers for Walmart.

Gun cases are another important Weather Shield product. Manufacturing gun cases is a fairly complicated procedure. First, rolls of nylon fabric 54 inches wide are cut into strips 70 feet long. Fifty four of these strips are placed one over the other. On the top piece, a hard-board pattern is used to mark the outline for a gun case.

A hand-operated device cuts under and through the 54 plies of fabric. In less than two hours, 2,000 pieces of fabric are ready to be converted into gun cases. A foam rubber pad is glued to the inner surface and then sewing machine operators take over, sewing on zipper tapes and cloth straps for handles. Lastly, zipper slides are set in and surplus threads snipped away. Following final inspection, the gun cases are placed in shipping cartons.

On average, a gun case is completed every 48 seconds.

The production of golf bag covers is less complex. A neat round bottom is sewed on the bottom. Zippers close the covers and velcro fastened opening make golf bag handles reachable. To begin this process, 123 layers of nylon material must be cut to the proper shape. The plant is now working on an order for 25,000 covers.

Soon Weather Shield will be introducing a new product, the Fanny Pack. The pack will be worn around the waist and have five zippered pockets. It will be ideal for hunters and fishermen. Weather Shield's first order is for 25,000 Fanny Packs.

In addition to Walmart and K-Mart, Weather Shield will also produce for other sporting goods distributors. No sales representatives are used. Orders come from old customers who often tell others about Weather Shield.

Sewing machines are used on all production lines. Operators of these machines are among the plant's most skilled and experienced workers. Currently, Weather Shield has 31 employees. Five more will be added in the near future.

Coy Groves is the CEO, plant manager, purchasing agent and general expeditor. Dorothy Groves is the office manager. Coy Groves Jr. is the shipping clerk. All shipments are by UPS. If they were not picked up every day, a major backlog problem would develop. Deliveries are made nationwide to the various stores.

Hot Seats and Magic Leafs used to be Weather Shield's main products, but they have been replaced by grill covers, gun cases and golf bag covers. (Photo by Ralph McRae)

County updated on 911 plan

A two-county 911 plan is inching its way toward becoming a reality. Charlevoix County Commissioner Phil Johnson recently presented the Board of Commissioners with an update on Emmet County and Charlevoix County's 911 plans.

Emmet County hired Ken Nickel as a consultant for their 911 plan, and is prepared to move ahead with the plan. According to Johnson's report, the cost of a two-county plan, combining Charlevoix and Emmet County, would be 25 percent more than the cost of a plan exclusively for Emmet County. Emmet County's plan included $1.5 million in new radio equipment, which might not be necessary for Charlevoix County.

Johnson made a motion to hire Nickel for consultation with Charlevoix County, at an expense not to exceed $1,000. Nickel would be able to assess the needs of Charlevoix regarding radio equipment and start up cost for the 911 plan. The motion was approved. As Charlevoix moves toward a two-county plan with Emmet County, the commissioners still need to act on Antrim County's 911 Plan. Antrim County has already filed a 911 plan, which would include the Charlevoix County exchanges in Boyne Falls, East Jordan, and Boyne City. Prosecuting Attorney Kraag Lieberman has recommended that Charlevoix County file for a court injunction against Antrim County to stop their plan.

Oh Boix

A collection of praises, awards and accomplishments involving Charlevoix people.

Gregg Seaman of Charlevoix was among the students named to the first semester Dean's List at Siena Heights College in Adrian. To be named to the Dean's List, a student must have a grade point average of 3.5 or better on a 4 point scale.

Four Charlevoix students were included on the fall semester Dean's List at Michigan Tech University. They are: Matthew Dixon, a senior in Mechanical Engineering; Michael Himebauch, a junior in Electrical Engineering; Edward McLennan, a freshman in Mechanical Engineering; and Neal Stangis, a sophomore in Physics. To be named to the list a student must have a grade point average of at least 3.5 on a 4 point scale. Stangis had a straight 4 point.

EMEA David M. Bordas (USN), son of David and Linda Bordas of Charlevoix has graduated from the U.S. Naval Electrician's Mate Class A Service School, Command Training Center, Great Lakes, Ill. Bordas graduated fourth in his class and will be transferred to the fleet aboard the aircraft carrier U.S.S. Dwight D. Eisenhower based in Norfolk, Va.

The lime was used for plaster

John Sharrow recently stopped in at the Courier office to clarify the background of the Charlevoix Limestone Company which was mentioned in the Feb. 5 Courier. Sharrow said that in the plant's early years, it didn't manufacture cement, but instead mined limestone which was crushed into lime which was used to make plaster for walls and ceilings in houses.

City adopts '92-'93 budget

Total city budget is approximately $9.1 million

By L. Scott Swanson

By a 4-2 vote, the city council adopted a 1992-93 fiscal year budget Monday evening. Council members Butch Russell and Jackie Cross voted against the proposed budget.

In discussion prior to the vote, Russell said he opposes raising water, sewer and electric rates by three percent. The increase will allow the city to begin putting money away for the future construction of a new public works complex on U.S. 31 south of Charlevoix.

Russell said that when the city purchased property for a new public works site, it was under the premise that there would be no hurry to construct a new building. Now, a short time later, utility rates are being increased to ultimately pay for construction of a new building.

"I can't agree with it," Russell said.

Former council member Bob Timms sided with Russell. He cited poor economic times saying, "Times aren't as flush as they've been in the past. I think this is a poor use of taxpayers-rate payers money." Timms noted that he had been opposed to the property purchase in the first place and feels that by setting aside money for construction of a new public works complex on the property the city is "throwing good money after bad." Council members Cheri Hoffman disagreed with Russell and Timms, arguing that it is wise for the city to put aside a little money each year so that when the city is ready to build the money will be there and bond and interest costs can be avoided.

Hoffman characterized the three percent increase as something "so minuscule that it will hardly be noticed" and added, "I'd rather do it this way, a little at a time."

Felter said that even though money is being set aside, that doesn't mean that building will begin right away. He said it could be six, seven or even ten years, but that by setting money aside, when the time comes to build, the money will be there.

Prior to the adoption of the budget, city manager Mike Wiesner asked the council if they wanted to leave in place plans to expand the fire department's full-time staff from three to four employees. This past fall and winter, following a

Fiddlers' Jamboree this Saturday

Several young fiddlers from Charlevoix will be playing in the Fiddlers' Jamboree this Saturday at the East Jordan Civic Center. The young fiddlers are part of Krista Knight's Suzuki Violin Class.

Knight says the violin and fiddle are exactly the same instrument, the difference is simply in how the instrument is played. Her students play a good deal of classical music throughout the year, but not at the Fiddlers' Jamboree. The Jamboree is an old-fashioned romp, stompin', hoe-down performance. "We call this dessert," Knight said of the Jamboree.

Knight, who plays a great deal of Blue Grass music, says that in recent years she's seen a growing interest in Blue Grass music among high school and college students.

man, Ted Felter and Bill Haggard

Even with the snow covering the yards of Charlevoix, we'll still be seeing splashes of spring green soon, as Waste Management customers begin using the new mini green garbage bags. The new bags went on sale March 2, at a cost of $1.25 a bag (up from $1.50 a bag). Waste Management will continue to pick the orange bags until customers run out of them. Grocery stores and other suppliers of bags sold the orange bags until March 2, when Waste Management picked up all of the old inventory and provided the suppliers with new green bags. Grocery stores experienced a bit of a run on the orange bags, as customers stocked up on the bags at the lower rate.

Don Pizzino of Waste Management said that the cost of the bags had to increase because landfill costs have increased. "As operating costs increased at the landfill, the company had to pass those costs on to the consumer."

Bureau Way of Charlevoix, said that the landfilling cost increase at the landfill is due to better such as the rising cost of construction of the landfill waste cells and the used in the cells.

Way also said the rate increase had nothing to do with the Charlevoix County Council's decision not to re-act on the solid waste commission for consideration of Waste Management's proposal. The change is a result of the fact that the County's landfill costs have increased.

despite its large size.

Saturday, Feb. 29 the Charlevoix Eighth Grade Band had its first festival experience as it journeyed to the new Petoskey Middle School for the Junior High Band Festival. The group received 1 ratings from one concert judge and the sight reading judge and 2 ratings from two of the concert judges for an overall rating of 2. ...Fiddlers' Jamboree

It's an interest they find is shared by older people. That multigenerational interest is clearly evident at the Jamboree.

"It's a great experience because it's a meeting of generations," Knight said of the Jamboree. "It's a neat melting of different ages and people."

The young people in Knight's class range in age from five to 16. Perhaps as many as 20 of them will be performing at the Jamboree. Although the children are often the hit of the Jamboree, Knight points out that her students also enjoy seeing the older fiddlers play.

The Jamboree is broken down into two segments. From 1 p.m. to 5 p.m. there is an open stage for fiddlers. From 7 p.m. to 10 p.m. there is a square and folk dance. While fiddlers take center stage, other people are welcome to bring along their nonelectric instruments and play back up. Dance callers are also welcome.

There is no set admission fee although donations are accepted at the door. Refreshments and food are available.

The Jamboree is sponsored by the Original Michigan Fiddlers' Association. For additional information, phone Bill Stevens at 547-9153.

ment staff. The increase will cost the city at least $25,000 per year.

The council has not yet hired a new fire chief or an additional fireman. Responding to Wisner's question Monday evening, Felter suggested leaving the money in the budget for the time being and amending the budget later should the council choose a different alternative for the fire department.

In adopting the budget, the council also approved salary increases for the city electric superintendent, police chief, treasurer, recreation director, sewage treatment plant superintendent, and golf course greenskeeper. Salaries for the electric superintendent, police chief and treasurer will increase from $31,742 per year to $34,500. The recreation director's salary will increase from $11,060 per year to $13,818. The salary for the sewage treatment plant superintendent will increase from $30,746 to $31,246. The salary for the greenskeeper will increase from $20,152 to $23,077.

The city millage (property tax) levy for the coming year will be approximately the same as this year.

The general fund (taxes to pay city operational costs) millage will continue to be 8.5 mills. The infrastructure (taxes to pay for street, sidewalk, water and sewer improvements) will be 4 mills. Debt retirement (taxes to pay off city debts) millage will decrease from 1.73 to 1.56 mills.

A mill is $1 for every $1,000 of a property's state equalized value (SEV). A property's SEV is half of that property's theoretical market value.

The general fund expenditures for the city electric superintendent, police chief, treasurer, recreation director, sewage treatment plant superintendent, and golf course greenskeeper. Salaries for the electric superintendent, police chief and treasurer will increase from $31,742 per year to $34,500. The recreation director's salary will increase from $11,060 per year to $13,818. The salary for the sewage treatment plant superintendent will increase from $30,746 to $31,246. The salary for the greenskeeper will increase from $20,152 to $23,077.

The city budget is broken down into nine major categories: general fund, major street, local street, electric, sewer, water, debt service, downtown development authority, and cemetery trust.

The general fund is the city's operational fund and most directly affects property taxes. The utility funds, which account for more than half of the city's total expenditures, are almost entirely funded by user fees.

OPINIONS

By Laurie Lounsbury A smooth operator

They say life goes in cycles. Maybe that's why the technological advances with computers and telecommunications have brought us full circle, back to the days of nosy switchboard operators who knew everyone's business and made no attempt to hide that fact.

Remember Sarah, the switchboard operator in Mayberry? She knew everything there was to know about Barney and his romance with Thelma, and was quick to throw in her two cents whenever she got the opportunity to bend poor old Barney's ear.

If you pick up a phone today and call an 800 number for a catalogue company, you might think you're talking to Sarah in Mayberry. With the touch of a computer button, these phone operators can tap into the intimate details of your life. They will know your clothing size, spending habits, and color preferences. I can just imagine where this computer interfacing is leading to, and the thought of it is mind boggling. It might not be too long before this could happen to you.

Jane Smith, a single woman, receives a catalogue in the mail and calls to place an order. The phone operator asks Jane for her key code number off the label on the catalogue. Jane gives her the number, and as soon as it is logged into the computer, her privacy flies out the window.

"Yes Jane, what is it you'd like to order?" says the phone operator named Sarah. (They're always named Sarah-it goes well with the title, Switchboard Operator)

"I'd like to order the slacks and shirt on page 34," Jane says.

"I imagine you'll be needing that in a size ten shirt and a size eight slacks, and you probably want it in shrimp. Shrimp is your best color, isn't it, Jane?"

"Yes, well, actually, I need the slacks in a size ten."

"Oh, putting on a little weight, are we, Jane? Well, that can happen when you break up with a boyfriend," Sarah says.

"How did you know that?" Jane asks.

"I see here on my computer screen that Mr. Slobnick hasn't sent you any jewelry from us for months," replies Sarah.

"Yes, well, uh..."

"No need to explain, Jane, (computer clicking noises) I see here Mr. Slobnick is overextended on his credit limit anyway. In fact, (click, click) Mr. Slobnick was recently turned down for a mortgage loan. Appears he got fired from work two months ago. Probably got caught sleeping on the job. All those late nights must have done him in. Just as well you're not with him anymore, Jane. Who wants to be dating a deadbeat with an overextended credit line?"

"What late nights? He doesn't work nights..."

"Now Jane, who said anything about WORKING nights? The month before he got fired he ran up a huge bill with us, lots of lacy nighties and jeddies in a size six and a high cut bathing suit in a size six EXTRA LONG! My gosh, the woman must look like a Barbie Doll. (click, click) She's not going to be a size six for long, judging by the number of times he's been taking her out for dinner. eighteen Dinner-For-Two charges on his Visa in one month!"

"Boy, he never took me out that much..."

"Just put it behind you, Jane, he's not your type. He bought a sleeveless black muscle tee shirt and black leather slacks from our men's department last year. Can you see yourself out with him, you in your raw silk, peach colored blazer with the gold buttons, and him dressed up like a motorcycle gang member? It never would have worked."

"So maybe I should..."

"What you should do is buy yourself a nice new wardrobe and find a new guy. How about the undergarments on page 17? They have the built-in tummy control panels, which will come in handy until you get back to a size eight. That shouldn't be too long, (click, click) I see here you bought an abductor and an aerobic step last week."

"Yes, well, I had some time on my hands, you know..."

For now, city should decline sponsoring grant application

For this year, the city council should decline a request to sponsor a grant application for a community swimming pool. Ironically, the council's refusal to sponsor an application this year might help, more than harm, pool supporters' chances of getting some type of state grant.

Pool supporters have asked the city to sponsor an application for a state recreational bond grant. In order for the application to be considered, it must be sponsored by a government entity. The city council has told pool supporters to fill out an application and they will review and consider it later this month. The application must be submitted by April 1.

Last year the school board sponsored a pool grant application and arranged for a special election seeking local tax dollars for a pool. The grant application was rejected by the state and the request for tax dollars was rejected by local voters.

Now, pool supporters claim they would like to build and operate a pool without local tax dollars. They have asked the city to sponsor a grant application, which they anticipate getting a response to sometime next winter. While awaiting a response, they would continue fundraising efforts. Then, assuming everything falls into place just as proposed, the city would get the grant from the state and the pool supporters would have raised enough money so that a pool could be built and operated without using local tax dollars.

Giving the proposal the benefit of all doubts and assuming it would work out, there are still some questions to be answered before the pool begins to enjoy any widespread community support.

For example, according to the pool supporters' proposal, each year $17,000 in operational costs would come from user fees paid by the school. As was pointed out at a recent meeting, the school derives its revenues from local tax dollars. Would adding a $17,000 per year school expenditure require the school to seek a tax increase? School superintendent Robert Jackson was at that meeting and said the school is currently evaluating its program and she views the $17,000 as money the school would derive through reallocation of existing revenues rather than increased revenues. The obvious question then is, where exactly is the school going to reallocate that money from? What is the school going to cut in order to come up with $17,000 a year for a swimming pool?

The pool proposal also calls for an annual fundraising effort generating $30,000 per year. In recent years, pool supporters have hosted an auction. According to their figures, the auction is capable of generating up to $30,000. The question is, can they do that year in and year out? In addition to that, what happens if the fundraiser comes up short or for some reason is discontinued?

Again, giving pool supporters the benefit of all doubts, let's assume that in coming months these questions can be answered to the satisfaction of pool skeptics. Beyond that, assume that between now and next year pool fundraising efforts are wildly successful.

Compare the scenario you have now with what you might have next year if those assumptions came to pass. Look at this from the perspective of a state agency which hands out grant money.

Right now, you have an application from a group which admittedly doesn't yet have all its funds in place. The proposal comes from a community where questions remain to be answered and where many residents are at the very least skeptical about the project the grant money would fund. As a grant awarding agency, you would be looking at a grant request from a community which isn't even sure it would take the money if you did decide to award it.

By next year that situation might be different. The application could come from a community where questions have been answered. The money could end up being for a project with broad support. And the grant agency could be looking at a community which would be happy to receive the money.

Signs of Spring Jan Glass

THE WINDS OF MARCH ARE UNPREDICTABLE. THEY COME WITH GREAT GUSTO, BRINGING WINTER ONE DAY AND UNBELIEVABLE COLD THE NEXT. THEY ARE SUPPOSED TO BRING DANCING DAFODILS. SO FAR THE ONLY SHOTS THAT HAVE FORCED THEIR WAY THRU THE DIRTY SNOW IN OUR YARD HAVE BECOME TASTY MOUSELS FOR THE HERDS OF RABBITS THAT ROAM THE NEIGHBORHOOD. BUT SPRING IS ONLY A COUPLE WEEKS AWAY. THE TREES KNOW IT TOO. FOR THEIR BUDS ARE SWEETING AND THE CATKINS ON THE POPLARS ARE FORMING. THE PUSSEY WILLOWS ARE ABOUT READY TO BE PICKED FOR THAT FIRST "FRESH" BOUQUET OF THE YEAR. TODAY TWO VERY AGGRESSIVE MALE STARLINGS CAME TO THE FEEDER. THEY WERE STILL IN THEIR SPECKLED WINTER PLUMAGE BUT THE BACKS OF THEIR NECKS AND SHOULDERS WERE BEGINNING TO TAKE ON THE DEEP IRIDESCENT BLUE-BLACK THAT IS THEIR SPRING AND SUMMER GARB. A PAIR OF REDPOLLS ALSO STOPPED BY - SO THE SIGNS OF SPRING ARE HERE.

From the road, they may look like bison, but they aren't. They're Scotch Highland cattle and they are being raised at the Lepman farm on M-66. The cattle's thick hair allows them to have less fat and leaner meat.

No, they aren't buffaloes

Scotch cattle enjoy Charlevoix highlands

By Laurie Lounsbury

What has the hair of an English Sheepdog, the horns of a Spanish bull, and can clear the bristly burdock plants off a piece of property with amazing speed and efficiency? It's the Scotch Highland breed of cattle, and the hair, horns and grazing habits of these animals are just a few of their interesting characteristics.

A herd of 15 Scotch Highland cattle have found a home at Dick and Gina Lepman's farm on Shaw Road.

The Lepmans have been buying and selling different breeds of cattle for the last few years, and now it seems they've found the ideal species for breeding at their farm. "They're easy to care for and they'll eat practically anything," said Dick Lepman.

The Lepmans are planning to breed the Scotch Highlanders and sell them for beef cattle. Because the animals have such long, thick hair, they don't need to put on a lot of fat in the winter to stay warm, so the beef is very lean and low in cholesterol. They are a shy, docile breed, which is fortunate, given their long, threatening horns. Patrick Martin, the caretaker at the Lepman's farm, says the Scotch Highlanders' large horns are the one feature that makes marketing the cows somewhat difficult. There is always the threat of danger in herding or corralling the cattle. Martin says he's had no problems with the cattle and their horns, other than occasional damage to the barn walls when the beasts get a little playful. Martin went on to say that the bull, who is the friendliest in the herd and also possesses the most lethal horns, is aware of his horns and moves his head carefully around people so as not to hurt them.

Martin said that of the different breeds of cattle he's tended at the Lepman's farm, the Scotch Highlanders have been the easiest. "They don't try to get out of the fences," Martin said. He speculated that he could probably leave the front barn door open and the cattle would remain inside, ignoring the path to freedom. As it is, the back barn door is always open, which leads out to the fenced-in grazing pastures. The Highlanders love outdoor living, even in the snowy, inclement weather of Northern Michigan. Their sturdy characteristics can be traced to the centuries of breeding in the remote highlands of Scotland, where only the fittest and most adaptable animals survived.

The Scotch Highlanders are the oldest registered breed in America, with the first herd being established here in 1884. American cattlemen recognized the desirable, hardy qualities of the animal and brought them over to improve the bloodlines of the western herds. As a result, the Scotch Highlanders contributed to the success of the American cattle industry.

Dick Lepman says he and his wife Gina are having a lot of fun with this new breed on their farm. They currently own a bull, cow, a calf, four steers and eight heifers, and they're hoping for another calf this spring. The cow threw a calf last spring, without the help of a veterinarian. Another desirable feature of the Scotch Highlanders is their ability to calve on their own, with only one percent of the cows needing assistance during the birth process.

"Buster the Bull has a girlfriend in Northport, too," joked Gina. Isabelle Firestone of Northport owns a couple of heifers and has contacted the Lepmans with the hope of having their bull sire one of her heifers when they come of age.

The Lepmans would like to see their beef cattle used locally at area restaurants. They are planning to host a banquet this summer for all of the area restaurateurs, so they can feature and promote their Scotch Highlander beef.

Armor expert to speak to children

Crooked Tree Arts Council's March Kidstage presentation features Jay Johnston of Cheboygan, a professional builder of suits of armor. The presentation will begin at 1 p.m. Saturday, March 7, at the Virginia McCune Arts Center, and is for grades K-6, though the older children might get the most enjoyment from the hour-long event.

Johnston will start with a lecture/demonstration on the history of armor and armor making. He will display a suit of armor, reproduction weapons and shields, cold-forging techniques and discuss who wore armor, why and when.

The audience may then touch and try on the pieces of his suit and explore other hands-on activities such as calligraphy, "brass" rubbings and shield coloring, after which Johnston will don the whole suite of armor and field questions.

Johnston has been making armor for about ten years, having spent some time studying at the U of M in metal-smithing classes, and has since taken an interest in the middle ages through a group known as the Society for Creative Anachronism. He has been sharing his knowledge and enthusiasm for medieval times with mostly upper elementary students in schools in Michigan and Indiana.

Johnston has been making armor for a living, selling to members of the Society and collectors around the country. One of his involvements with the Ann Arbor Medieval Festival over the years has been to set up a working forge, clanging out small pieces of hot-raised plate metal for show and tell. He has been the subject of articles by the Ann Arbor news, Changing Times Magazine and the Associated Press. He has also appeared on the television program "Good Afternoon."

Admission to Kidstage productions is $3 per person. For more information about this event, please call the Arts Center at 347-4337.

OF BLESSINGS

by PASTOR MERLE WELLHOUSEN

Many of you are aware the season of lent begins with Ash Wednesday on March 4th. The word "Lent" comes from the Old English word "Lencithen", which means the lengthening of the daylight hours as spring appears. The season of Lent, which lasts 40 days, begins with Ash Wednesday and concludes with Palm Sunday (which is the Sunday before Easter). The season lasts forty days, which helps us to remember the forty days Jesus spent fasting (not partaking food or water) in the wilderness and being tempted by the Devil; not to mention the number 40 also had significant meaning in the Bible: Moses fasted forty days on Mount Sinai, Elijah fasted forty days on the way to the mountain of God, and the Israelites spent forty years in the wilderness prior to entering the promised land.

The theme for the season of Lent is one of repentance (turning away from sin and turning towards God for forgiveness). It is a time of reflection upon each individual's relationship towards God; how we really fall short of God's expectations and realize how much we really do need the forgiveness Jesus offers through His death on the cross.

The Bible tells us that we have come from ashes and to ashes we shall return. That is why the first day of Lent is called Ash Wednesday. In Genesis chapter 2, the Bible says that God fashioned man from the dust of the ground and breathed into his nostrils the breath of life and the man became a living being. Some churches have a ceremony on Ash Wednesday where they rub ashes on an individual's forehead with the words "from ashes you came; to ashes you shall return", to help symbolize this.

During this season, prior to the celebration of Easter (the day set aside to remember Jesus' rising from the dead to defeat death once for all), try to spend some quiet time in personal reflection. Think about Jesus. Why He came. Why He had to die and what the significance of the Resurrection is? How does all this relate to you? What does this all mean personally to you and for your future?

This is a time of reflection, repentance, forgiveness and HOPE!

Pajtas qualifies for wrestling finals

Otherwise, the meet was a disappointment

Charlevoix took seven wrestlers to the regional meet in St. Louis Saturday, but only one wrestled well enough to qualify for the state finals later this month.

Jason Pajtas placed second in the 152-pound weight class, losing a 4-3 decision in the finals. Pajtas, a senior, will take a 36-3-1 season record into the state finals. He has amassed more than 100 wins in his high school wrestling career.

Other Rayders wrestling in the meet and their results were:

Jason Hughes, a freshman at 103 pounds, lost two decisions.

Shawn Young, a senior wrestling at 125 pounds, lost two decisions, 7-6 and 4-2.

Chris McCullum, a senior wrestling at 135 pounds, lost his first match on a technical pin, won his second match and had to default in his third match due to an arm injury.

Tony Potter, a junior wrestling at 145 pounds, lost on a technical pin in his first match and lost on a pin in his second match.

Keith Parish, a sophomore wrestling at 171 pounds, lost twice on pins.

Dan Browe, a senior heavy weight, lost his first match 5-2 and lost his second match on an over-time decision.

Pajtas will travel to the state meet March 13 and 14 in Battle Creek.

Skiers have a tough day at state meet

Charlevoix skiers Katherine Campbell and Dan Hoadley skied as individuals in the state championship ski meet at Sugar Loaf Mountain Monday, but neither did as well as they would have liked.

Campbell had one of the best times of the day on her second slalom run. Unfortunately, that was negated by a fall on her first run. She finished 20th in the giant slalom.

Hoadley also had trouble falling and did not place in the top 20.

Rayder coach Eric Lundteigen said, "They didn't have a great day. However it was a successful year for both of them."

Warm temperatures left the course choppy and growing choppy with each skier. Campbell and Hoadley both had the misfortune of drawing late runs.

Elementary girls' basketball tournament

A Petoskey team won the Charlevoix Recreation Department's Second Annual Girls Youth Basketball (Elementary Division) Tournament Saturday.

In the championship game a Petoskey team coached by Bill Kane and Mike Welch defeated Charlevoix's Nets team coached by Roger Gowell 19-16. Petoskey trailed throughout the game, but rallied in the final minutes. Jamie Gowell led the Nets with 7 points.

Both teams were undefeated entering the finals.

In the consolation game, the Pistons coached by Liz Grunch beat the Spurs, coached by Dave Norton, 14-12. Liz Dohm had 10 points for the pistons while Andrea Arnold had 6 for the Spurs.

The tournament was run by volunteers Rick Grunch, Jim and Faye Parrish. Saturday, March 21, the Charlevoix Recreation Department will host a junior high girls' tournament at the Charlevoix Middle School. Eleven teams are signed up to play: six from Charlevoix, four from Petoskey and one from Grayling.

Brownie troop chooses recycling for community service project

Charlevoix Brownie Troop #261 recently visited area offices and businesses to distribute recycling literature as part of a community service project. At each business, the girls gave a two-minute recycling presentation. The troop is going to enter the project in the 19th Annual Colgate Youth For America community service campaign.

Bud Boss takes a brief break while milking one of the 95 cows producing milk at the Bob Potter farm on Barnard Road.

The business of dairy farming

By Ralph McRae

This story concerns an industry which might be considered different than most - and yet it is one of the oldest types of industries in existence. This factory has 95 workers, working every hour of every day. The workers are four-legged, hide-bound contraptions. They are better known as cows.

Last January, Michigan dairy farms produced 450 million pounds of milk, the work of 340,000 dairy cows. The milk sold at an average price of $14 per hundred pounds. Dairy plants in Michigan produced 1.8 million pounds of butter in December, plus 1.4 million gallons of ice cream. Because of all the pizza outlets, Michigan's cheese output has greatly expanded.

Nationally, more than 8 million cows produced almost 11 billion pounds of milk in January, or about 1,283 pounds of milk per cow.

But this story is about one particular milk producing business - the Robert Potter farm located a few miles south of Charlevoix on Barnard Road.

The farm is turning out 650 gallons of milk daily. The farm land was purchased in 1932 by Bob Potter's father. In 1950, Robert and Mae Zella Potter started the dairy business. Now, after 42 years, he has sold the company to his son in law, Wilson (Bud) Boss.

Employed at the farm for 17 years, and married to Judy (Potter) Boss for 15 years, Boss has accumulated on his own 332 acres of land. These acres have been added to the 180 acres owned by Potter. An additional 300 acres are leased. All the tillable land is used to grow alfalfa, corn and hay.

All told, the dairy operation represents a total investment of more than $750,000, a larger investment in plant and equipment than that of many other manufacturers. Included in the farm's assets would be 844 acres of land, numerous barns, five silos, sanitizing and milking equipment, 100 heifers and 95 Holstein cows. Each of these cows are worth about $1,200 each. The heifers will all eventually enter the milk producing ranks.

The highest of the silos are the blue ones, costing about $60,000 each. The silos contain a carefully balanced mixture of feed. The alfalfa, corn and finely-cut hay in the feed are supplemented with vitamins and soy meal. Three times each day, the feed drops from the silos onto conveyors and is deposited in feeding troughs. It costs about $3.20 a day to feed each cow. Every other day a nutritionist comes to the barns to analyze the manure to see that the cows are receiving the essential food elements. Nutritional values in feed varies due to differing soil conditions.

The cows are housed in two large sheds. One shed shelters cows in their first year of production and heifers about to become mothers. The other shed houses milking veterans. In the sheds, the cows are not kept in stalls, but are roam freely within open areas.

Every few days a calf is delivered in a special birthing place. Ordinarily 50 percent of the calves are heifers, but for the past year only about 20 percent have been heifers. Most of the young bulls are shipped out. For the first two weeks of their lives the calves receive cow milk, then for the next 30 days they are given manufactured replacement milk containing the proper nutritional ingredients for a growing animal. Finally, the calves are weaned and put on feed pellets and moved to the open area of the shed. Later, the young heifer's are transferred to Bud's Boss' barn.

The heifers are ready to be bred about 13 months after birth. A veterinarian comes to the barns on the third Wednesday of each month. He is able to pinpoint, within a few days, the time a heifer was impregnated. The gestation period for cattle is about nine months.

(Next week this story will continue with a look at the milking parlor.)

Local group learns ways of Wall Street

Women's investment group learns by doing investing in the stock markets

By L. Scott Swanson

This coming Saturday, a group of about 15 Charlevoix ladies will meet for two hours and engage in a spirited discussion which will affect corporate America.

This is not a stereotypical women's club. You won't find people sitting around gossiping over tea and cookies. Shoot, they don't even serve coffee. When the ladies of the Charlevoix Women's Investment Club (CWIC) meet, they meet to conduct business. After all, that's what the group is about - business. Business and investing in business.

Wall Street and the world of stock markets and investments may seem rather mysterious to many people, but members of CWIC have taken the time to unravel some of that mystery. The group formed about six years ago and currently has investments with a total value of $35,677.96 against a cost of $24,192.70.

That's not bad when you consider how much the group knew about the stock market the first time they had a broker come in to speak to them.

"We were so green, we didn't even know what questions to ask," recalls Bev Kaiser, one of the group's original members.

Kaiser says the group began when Louise Gill saw an ad in a magazine for the National Association of Investment Clubs (NAIC) and wrote a letter asking for more information. NAIC is an organization based in Royal Oak, Michigan and works with investment clubs throughout the country. The clubs allow people without a great deal of money to pool their resources and make investments.

"It's available to the ordinary person to invest," Kaiser explains. "You don't have to have a lot of money to invest. You just have to start."

CWIC began as a core group of friends who wanted to learn about stocks and other investments. Over time some people decided the group wasn't for them and left while others joined. The group has a partnership agreement which is modeled after an agreement recommended by NAIC. The group can have up to 15 members. Currently the group has a very stable membership.

"It's available to the ordinary person to invest. You don't have to have a lot of money to invest. You just have to start."

Bev Kaiser, Charlevoix Women's Investment Club.

Pam Pennington is CWIC's current president. Pennington is a nurse in the obstetrics department at Charlevoix Area Hospital. She learned of the group from one of her patients at the hospital.

"It's been a wonderful experience for me. It's just enlightening," Pennington said.

By the time Pennington joined, the club had established a foundation. She said that for a person without a financial background it's very encouraging to be able to learn from the other members of the club. Perhaps the reason other members of the club are willing to offer the encouragement is because they also started with limited knowledge.

The Charlevoix Women's Investment Club is a local group which studies and invests in the stock market. The group formed about six years ago. Current members are: (front from left) Marilyn Wilmut, secretary Keith Morris, Louise Gill, Bev Kaiser, (back row) Marge Dinwiddie, Cathy Tillen, president Pam Pennington, Sue Coen, vice president Diane Penfold, Nancy AbFalter, Elizabeth Mielke, treasurer Betty Coen. How did this car come to be here? Well, it wasn't easy. Monday morning, about 9:50 a.m. Wilma Stabnick pulled out of the Oleson's parking lot south on Bridge Street. She bumped a car driven by Cliff Biddick Sr., lost control of her vehicle and went up on the curb, knocking down a light pole and a small tree before coming to rest against the outside wall of J.R.'s Restaurant. Stabnick got out of the car which then began rolling backwards. The now driverless car backed across Bridge Street through the 7-11 parking lot and over an embankment on the south side of Belvedere Avenue. Nobody was injured. Stabnick was ticketed for failure to keep a vehicle under control.

...local group invests in corporate America

Kaiser said that for the first few months, the club didn't do much investing. It took a while to accumulate money which was all right because it also took a while to figure out what they were doing.

NAIC provides organizational and investment information and the club also works with local stock brokers Garrett Miller and Harold Smith. Kaiser said the two brokers have been very good to work with. She said they're "very helpful when asked, yet not the least bit pushy."

Although the NAIC manuals are helpful, the concept is primarily learn by doing.

Club members can participate for as little as $20 per month. Club members own varying percentages of the club's stock and according to the club's bylaws no one club member can own more than 20 percent.

The club is often broken down in committees with the committees assigned to study particular fields of industry and companies within those fields.

"We don't say we have a lot of fun. It's work and we share it," Kaiser explained.

Even though the research requires some thought and effort, it's interesting and has its rewards.

Pennington finds that researching multinational corporations expands her horizons and gives her a more global point of view. "You're not stuck in your own little Charlevoix world," she says.

"You broaden your world to read and listen to all these things which affect our particular investment," Kaiser notes.

At the monthly meetings, committee reports provide the foundation for vigorous questioning and spirited discussion. Members of the group are encouraged to express their opinions so that all angles of a particular investment possibility are considered. Kaiser noted that something the club members seem to have in common is that they all like working with numbers.

As club president, Pennington's role is to foster discussion, yet keep discussion orderly. Kaiser said she likes to see the questioning and discussion because she feels that encourages committees to do more study and research.

Discussion leads to stock purchasing decisions. CWIC studies 10 years of a company's earnings history and tries to project what the company will do in the next 10 years. The club's goal is to find a company that will double in price within the next five years. Currently CWIC owns stock in 11 corporations. The investments are highly diversified with companies in fields such as agriculture, insurance, health care, beer and solid waste.

Asked for a hot stock tip, Pennington smiled and said, "Join an investment club."

Kaiser said that lately rather than buying new stocks, the club has been buying more of the same stocks. Pennington and Kaiser both feel their experience in the club has been valuable and educational and that other people in the community could benefit from a similar investment experience.

"We're not in this to become brokers or to wheel and deal. We're in this for long term and just to learn," Pennington said.

"Every one of us who started the club said, 'Why didn't we start 15 or 20 years ago?'" Kaiser commented. She added that if there are other people in town who would like to start their own investment club, there are several members of the CWIC group who would be willing to help. People who would like more information may phone 547-9397.

OPINIONS

by EDITH GILBERT

EDITH GILBERT

A swan, a duck and a seagull are sitting on the city dock watching the ice flows drifting through the channel.

"Looks like spring is early this year," observes the seagull. "Guess the town will be getting into high gear for summer now. Did you hear what happened at the city council meeting last night?"

"Sure did," replied the duck fluttering his wings. "They ducked the pool issue again! I'll never understand that decision. Don't they know PEOPLE like to swim just as much as DUCKS do? It's great exercise."

"You and your pool! What this town needs is an auditorium," chirps the swan stretching her neck and fluttering her wings like a graceful ballerina. "Our kids should have a stage with lights for their high school plays. They need the experience of performing on a real stage."

The seagull speaks up. "Let's finish the job we started on the bandshell! We need a professional sound system right now for the entertainment that's booked in the park this summer."

"Bandshell, bandshell! That's all you ever think about," says the duck flipping its tail from side to side in imitation. "It's now time to support the pool! Get in the swim. GET IN THE SWIM. That's our slogan!"

"Oh, pooh on the pool," answers the seagull. "The bandshell only cost $175,000. You guys are talking MILLIONS!"

"The pool is only budgeted for one million," quacks the duck, his bill opening and closing breathlessly. "It's the dumb auditorium that's targeted at $3 million at least."

The swan stretches her long neck straight up into the air, her bill points to the sky. "Oh, I can see it all now — lights, music, applause, encores. Tra la, tra la!"

No one notices the black crow landing on the piling nearby. She shifts her weight from one foot to the other and says, "Some people think we need a Science Center in the school and some people think we need a new middle school in Charlevoix."

"Projects ought to be prioritized. There's just so much one small town can do at one time," continued the crow. "Take the successful Hospital Renovation Campaign for example. Almost everyone contributed to this project, as you all know. Here there was no opposition!"

"You are so right," said the duck. "Speaking of the Hospital, have you seen the new Boulder Park Terrace on Upright Street adjacent to the Hospital that's opening in May? They refer to it as an Assisted Living Center for senior citizens, but it looks more like a well-furnished French Country Inn inside. Sure it took six years to get off the ground, but thanks to a guy like Ralph McRae diligently nudging the project along, it's now a reality. A beautiful reality. Wait 'til you see the place! You'll be so impressed."

"Hey, let's get together again for the opening. I flew over the new building yesterday and it looks great. I bet there'll be a lot of food for us scattered around on the lawn —" said the seagull.

A soft breeze ruffled the calm water of Round Lake. One by one the duck, the seagull, the swan and the crow took off toward Lake Michigan. Another informal Charlevoix meeting was over.

Letters to the editor

Disagrees with pool editorial

Editor,

My letter is in response to your editorial of March 4. I am appalled by your negative approach to the pool proposal.

Some 30 years ago our family maintained a home in Birdland Estates. We chose to spend as much free time as possible here in Charlevoix because of the opportunities offered us as a family. Men that we knew then who made a real difference in the growth of the community were Rev. Harold John, Earl Young, Oscar Stroud and Del Terrell. They were risk takers with really positive attitudes. Another important one was Dale Boss. Among other projects, he promoted the establishment of Mt. McSaubia. Because of his positive approach, exciting activity for the children and young adults of Charlevoix. Mr. Boss promoted the sale of shares and organized a work force that participated in the building of this facility.

Unlike Mt. McSaubia, the pool will be a year round facility for the very young who cannot yet ski and for the older residents who no longer ski as well as for young active persons.

The National Association of Physical Education proposes that swimming and exercise in water is the finest physical activity for all ages and even the handicapped. Several of our older Charlevoix residents can attest to the fact.

I do not understand how a local paper can send such a negative message to the residents of an exciting active community such as Charlevoix. You misrepresent your readers by proposing that any grant request be delayed. The proposal is realistic and supported by many concerned citizens as well as school personnel.

Martha Strawbridge

Primary election March 17

For the first time in more than a decade, registered voters in the state of Michigan will have the opportunity to vote in a presidential primary election. The polls will be open March 17, from 7 a.m. to 8 p.m. for any citizens who registered to vote on or before February 18.

The Democratic and Republican candidates will appear on separate ballots, so a voter must choose which ballot he would like to vote. If you choose to vote on the Democratic ballot, a written preference must be submitted. For a registered Republican voter, a written request will not be necessary for the Republican ballot. However, a voter who has a preference on file for the Republican Party cannot obtain a Democratic ballot.

By voting in the presidential primary election, you will have the opportunity to help decide which presidential candidates should be supported by Michigan delegates attending the 1992 Democratic and Republican Party conventions. In the Charlevoix area, polls will be open at the following locations:

City of Charlevoix, City Hall,
Charlevoix Township, Stroud Hall.

Bay township Hall, Horton Bay,

Marion Township Hall, Marion

Boulder Park Terrace preparing to open in coming months

Boulder Park Terrace, the long-awaited Charlevoix nursing home, is scheduled to open in June. Tours and special events will take place in May with the first residents admitted in early June.

Deborah Saur, director, says, "This will not be a 'traditional' nursing home. It will be patterned after an elegant hotel with an emphasis on service and comfort in a homelike environment."

Proof of this is the "Dock," a central area where residents and their guests can visit the "Salty Dog" Tavern, and "Tip of the Iceberg" ice cream parlor and gift shop. Residents will enjoy meals in the "Chart Room" restaurant dining on fine linens and china. Michael Ryan, formerly with Stafford's One Water Street in Boyne City, will manage the food service. In addition, there will be a full service beauty salon, library and even a garden room with a small aviary.

"Of course, our first concern is to offer a high degree of medical care," says Saur, "but at the same time we will cater to the life satisfaction levels of our residents." She stresses that all of this will be provided at a cost that is the same as ordinary facilities.

Residents will be able to choose between private and semi-private rooms, all with private baths. Draperies, bedspreads and furniture are coordinated and promote a residential feeling. In addition, day care facilities for those who need temporary care and an overnight program for those who want to spend a night, weekend, week or even a month will be offered.

Sixty-one residents, including 49 who require skilled nursing care, will be accommodated by the Con-

ter. The nursing ratio will be twice the state requirement for nursing homes. Staff member will be trained, equipped and able to handle the highest levels of care, including respirators, closed-head injuries, tracheotomies, continuous oxygen and intravenous solutions. Medical direction and quality assurance will be provided by the medical staffs at Northern Michigan Hospital and Charlevoix Area Hospital; co-owners of the Center. Boulder Park Terrace Nursing and Assisted Living Center is located at 1467 West Upright in Charlevoix. For more information, call 547-1005.

A Christian storybook will be read to the children, followed by a mid-morning snack and playtime. The mothers will then take time for Bible Study, fellowship and prayers. The book "A Mothers Touch," by Elise Arndt will be used first for study and discussion. The author realizes as Mother/Teacher in our homes, we prepare our children for life. beach or park.

All young mothers are encouraged to come. For more information please call Laura Wellhausen at 547-1062.

Church schedules prayer time

The Charlevoix Church of the Nazarene will be opening its sanctuary for prayer Tuesday at the following times: 7 a.m. - 9 a.m.; 11 a.m. - 1 p.m.; and 5 p.m. - 7 p.m. The prayer time is opened to all who sense the need of prayer in their own lives and those of the community. There is not set organization to this time, only the opportunity to pray.

The church is located on N. US 31 at Waller Rd. in Charlevoix. For further information or questions, please call Rev. Duane Nelson at 547-5711 or 547-9293.

"Children at Risk" video to be shown

The Charlevoix Church of the Nazarene will be continuing its presentation with the second of a two-part series of the Focus on the Family video, "Children at Risk." The second part will be shown on Sunday, March 15, at 6 p.m.

In "Children at Risk," Dr. James Dobson and Gary Bauer present the different types of negative influences the American society has placed on its children over the last 30 years. They also give common sense advice to parents, teachers, and government leaders on how these children can be protected. They portray in vivid terms the cultural battle raging around the role of faith in the American society, what values must be taught in the schools, how the family can be strengthened and protected, and the sanctity of life. This film is for the whole community.

The Charlevoix Church of the Nazarene is located on N. US 31 at Waller Rd. in Charlevoix. If there are any questions, please call Rev. Duane Nelson at 547-5711 or 547-9293.

School bus drivers haul a precious cargo

By Laurie Lounsbury

Imagine running a daycare center for 60 kids. Now imagine you're in a room that's only eight feet wide by 30 feet long. Add to the picture the fact that the room moves all the time, stopping and starting, twisting and turning, and other large, dangerous objects are moving all around you. This is the challenge that school bus drivers face every day, as they transport hundreds of children to and from school.

"You have to be able to handle a large vehicle, you have to be able to handle kids, and you have to do both at the same time," said Gordon Russell, school transportation supervisor.

A child living in Charlevoix from age five to 18 will spend, on average, about 2,400 hours on a school bus. While they're on that bus, the bus driver will act as chaperone, care giver, and disciplinarian. And the driver will do all this while maneuvering a 13,000 pound vehicle through traffic, snowstorms, and muddy roads. It's clearly a job that requires a special kind of person.

While most parents accept the fact that a school bus driver is responsible for their children's safety, few stop to think about the fact that the driver is also doing a full time job of handing out discipline and care. Dealing with motion sickness, squabbles, and misbehavior all goes with the territory. It's the bus driver's responsibility to train the children about safety and discipline starting with their first ride to school.

"You've got to train them early, then you've got to be consistent," said Bob Houghton, an eleven year veteran of bus driving.

Even so, some kids will push the rules to the limits, making it necessary to send a note home to the parents. Bus drivers have standard discipline problem form slips that they can fill out and give to the child, to be read and signed by the parents. Parents' reactions to these notes can range from total cooperation to defensive hostility. One parent made her child write a note of apology to the bus driver. Another parent of a high school student offered to ride the bus with her child one day a week if the problem continued. Other parents seem to shrug their shoulders and pass the responsibility back to the drivers. "It's always easier if you get the parents' backing with problems," said Russell, who is ultimately responsible for all of the drivers and students.

Russell, a soft-spoken, patient person, is accustomed to dealing with the daily mishaps that are bound to occur. He's been running the bus garage for seven years, and his duties range from maintaining the buses and doing all necessary repairs to driving kindergartners. His phone starts to ring early in the morning. "Can you pick up my child at his grandparents house today?" or "My son's having a birthday party after school tomorrow. Can his friends ride the bus home with him?"

While the phone keeps ringing, drivers are also radioing in to the garage. Sometimes it's a call to let Russell know a child missed his stop or got on the wrong bus, and other times, it might be a call to say a bus got stuck on a muddy back road. The closed circuit radios on all of the buses were installed a year and a half ago, and are a welcome addition. With radios, a missing child can be quickly located and a frantic parent will be reassured that their child is fine.

Another new addition to the school buses are the eye-shaped rear view mirrors. Mounted on the front fenders of the buses, these widely curved mirrors allow the driver a full view of the front of the bus, right into the wheel wells, one of the "danger zones" around a bus. With the help of these mirrors, a child is never out of sight of the bus driver.

Most of the bus drivers are semi-retired, which gives them the scheduling flexibility to drive a bus. They will work for one hour early in the morning, then be free until the after school pick-up time. They spend their Saturdays driving to wrestling meets, or give up Friday nights to drive to football and basketball games.

Each age group of children presents a different challenge to the drivers. A second grader climbs on a school bus after school, sobbing uncontrollably. The bus driver quickly gets out from behind the wheel to console the child. "He fell down in the mud puddle," one child says in explanation. "He didn't fall. He got pushed," says another child. The driver brushes the muddy snow off the child and calms him down, then gets back to the business of loading the rest of the children on the bus.

Middle school children present a different set of challenges. Rosalind Stump, a driver of all age groups, says of the middle schoolers, "They're just middle schoolers doing what middle school kids do. It's challenging, but I like all of them."

Some of Charlevoix's school bus drivers have been at the job for 20 years. Today, Angel Bearss and Harold DeYoung are driving the children of some of their earlier passengers.

Bus drivers do more than transport children from home to school and back again. They assume the role of guardian for hundreds of kids every day. They have to look forwards and backwards at the same time. "Josh, face forward; I need to see you smiling face." "Trisha, you have to sit down now."

These gentle reprimands are dished out while jostling a bus through traffic or bouncing down the back roads. Bus drivers are the rolling caretakers of our kids.

Rayders begin district with win Mancelona beaten 74-45

By L. Scott Swanson

Eleven Rayders scored as Charlevoix opened district basketball play with a 74-45 win over Mancelona Monday evening. Charlevoix took the lead late in the first quarter, opened an 11 point lead by halftime and blew the game open in the second half.

Charlevoix entered the fourth quarter leading 57-39 with coach Jim Kanine looking for an opportunity to clear his bench. Ken Olinger came in and got five points in the quarter, the first on a baseline drive which took him under the backboard and then back out again for a reverse lay in, and the second on a three-point rainbow. Sophomores Matt Norton and Brandon Webb, called up from the junior varsity for the tournaments, got a chance to play. Wednesday evening Charlevoix will play Harbor Springs. The winner of that game will play again Friday evening against the winner of the Boyne City and East Jordan game. All district games are being hosted by Charlevoix and begin at 7 p.m.

Brad DeGrow looks for a shot in the opening game of the District Tournament. Charlevoix beat Mancelona 74-45 to advance to Wednesday evening's game against Harbor Springs. Francis B. Flanders

New president joins County State Bank

By L. Scott Swanson

Francis B. Flanders has joined Charlevoix County State Bank as the bank's new president. His appointment was recently announced by Brian D. Bell, Chairman, President and CEO of CB Financial Corporation of Jackson. Flanders' first day on the job at Charlevoix County State Bank was Monday, March 2.

CB Financial Corporation recently purchased Charlevoix County State Bank, with the acquisition effective Feb. 28. The bank president position had been vacant since the July 10 death of Gordon Wellman. LoAnne Brown served on an interim basis prior to the appointment of Flanders.

Flanders is not unfamiliar with northern Michigan, nor is he unfamiliar with, or to, CB Financial Corporation. Flanders comes to Charlevoix from Alpena where he worked with NBD Alpena Bank for 15 years, most recently as senior vice president. Prior to working in Alpena he was with City Bank and Trust in Jackson, another CB Financial Corporation bank. Flanders worked at the Jackson bank from 1957 to 1976. With that bank, he was vice president in charge of Commercial Lending.

"I was happy where I was, and I'm even happier now," Flanders says of his move from Alpena to Charlevoix. He noted that the job offer and subsequent move all happened very quickly.

As the bank's new president, Flanders expects to benefit from many of the same strengths that made the bank a desirable purchase for CB Financial Corporation. Flanders described Charlevoix County State Bank as a bank which is in a very good market, is a wonderful bank with an experienced and seasoned staff and yet has room for some additional products and services. Flanders says the affiliation with CB Financial will give Charlevoix County State Bank the economic strength to offer customers some services which couldn't be offered by a lone bank.

"We're not going to make sweeping changes," Flanders said. "We'll just enhance what's already being done very well."

As an example of services which will be enhanced, Flanders said one thing he intends to do relatively quickly is bring some better mortgage products to Charlevoix. The bank will be able to do this because its increased economic strength will allow it to benefit from secondary mortgage markets.

Flanders' family is originally from the Flint area although he is a graduate of Oscoda High School. He is also a graduate of Michigan State University and the Stonier Graduate School of Banking at Rutgers University. In addition, he is a Certified Commercial Lender by the American Bankers Association, has attended Indiana University. He is past president of the American Institute of Banking, Past Director of Robert Morris Associates, and active in the Rotary Club of Alpena, Boy Scouts of America, Alpena Chamber of Commerce and Director of Junior Achievement.

Flanders wife died a year ago. He has three children who are now adults and five grandchildren. Hunting, fishing and skiing are among the recreational activities he enjoys.

Dairy farming is an industry with some strange hours

(The following story is one in a series of stories about area industry being written for the Courier by Ralph McRae. McRae is a former mayor and city council member and is currently a member of the Charlevoix Industrial Committee. This week's story is a continuation of a story which ran last week. The story is about the Bob Potter dairy farm which is now being operated by Potter's son-in-law Bud Boss.)

By Ralph McRae

Cows are milked twice each day. The first milking is at 4 a.m. That time of day is enough to deter many a person from becoming a dairy farmer. It takes a very dedicated person to keep those hours seven days a week. The second milking time is 3 p.m. It takes about three hours to milk 95 cows.

A few minutes before milking starts, 40 cows are moved into an enclosed area just outside the milking parlor. The cows are urged forward by a ringing bell that lets them know that just behind them is a moving partition of low voltage wires. Most of the cows are eager to be relieved of their surplus milk. Most of the cows fall into a routine. The cows that are first in line one day tend to be first in line the next day. However, there are a few free spirits that come as they please, never coming at the same time.

Before receiving chrome plated suction tubes, the cow's udders are sprayed with an antibacterial fluid. Eight cows at a time enter the milking parlor in two rows, four to a side. Standing in the milking pit, Boss goes from cow to cow. By the time he is done attaching the suction tubes to the last cow, the first one will be finished milking.

Combining vacuum action with pulsating compression motions, the tubes remove the milk. Sensors detect when the milk stops flowing and the tubes fall off and spring back out of the way. Before the cow leaves the parlor, its udders are again sprayed with the antibacterial fluid.

As the milk comes out from beneath each cow, it can be seen in a glass bulb in the line. Before the milking process begins, all the pipes and tubes are sanitized by three separate flushes of 160 degree water, each flush using a different agent to make sure the system is clean. After milking is completed, the whole system is flushed again.

If a particular cow is being treated with antibiotics, that cow is removed from the milking group and its milk is given to the calves.

The system allows the farmer to determine just how many pounds of milk each cow gives each day. If a cow's production drops off to an unacceptable level, it is taken away. The meat often ends up in fast food outlets. The hides are used for shoes etc. The average cow produces large quantities of milk for only four years, beginning in their second year of life.

From the milking parlor, the milk is pumped to the cooling room and then into a 2,000-gallon stainless steel holding tank. The tank has cooling coils inside it. Each cow on an average day will give 56 pounds of milk.

Every other day the Thompson Milk hauling firm picks up 1,300 gallons of milk which is delivered to the Dean processing plant in Ewart. (That's almost enough milk to satisfy the daily intake of all of the people in Charlevoix.) In the Ewart plant, much of the milk is converted into cream, butter, cottage cheese, yogurt, ice cream and regular cheese. Some of the milk will go to a distributor in Gaylord who will deliver it back to retail outlets in Charlevoix.

Most of the litter for the barn floors is now made from newspapers donated by Waste Management Inc. from their recycling program. The hay chopping machine reduces the newspapers to moisture absorbing litter. Straw and sawdust were used for litter in the past.

For years the government subsidized the dairies by buying their over-produced butter and cheese. These products were then stored in large caves in Arkansas. But now the dairies must not exceed their last year's production total. For every hundred pounds of milk 11.5 cents is withheld, if the dairy stays within last year's total, they will receive the funds accumulated through the 11.5 cent withholding. If they go over, even by one pound, they lose those funds.

For some unknown reason, the price of milk declined last year. This year it is expected to be higher.

Bud Boss is assisted by Dave Albrecht. Boss' sons Mark and Rob and his daughters, Kari Jo and Mandy also do chores around the barn and help with the calves.

Bob Potter, besides retiring from the dairy business, also resigned after 14 years as the city of Charlevoix's assessor. He still is the assessor for Charlevoix and Marion Townships. With his diminished workload, he hopes to have time to travel to other countries.

Local car dealer receives sales award

Pat McKeown Dodge City of Charlevoix recently received a Chrysler Corporation SSI award. SSI stands for Sales Satisfaction Index. The award is based on customer surveys and is given to dealerships based on customer satisfaction with the dealership's handling of sales and sales follow-up work.

Ken Weller, sales manager at Pat McKeown Dodge City, said the dealership received the top rating of approximately 100 Chrysler-Dodge dealerships in the Detroit zone. Weller said the dealership hasn't necessarily been doing anything different to win the award, but has just been involved in an ongoing effort to get to the top.

In addition to Weller, the sales staff during the time period for which the award was received was composed of Anita Pentecost, Joe Elliott and Kevin Tucker. Tucker is now the new sales manager at Pat McKeown Ford.

SCRAPBOOK

This photo of Hilma Hardy was dated March 6, 1929. A wet, spring snow weighed down the tree branches and provided Hilma with a good hiding place.

Grange plans spring hoe down

It's St. Patrick's hoe down time again with Barnard Grange hosting a square and round dance at the American Legion Hall Saturday night, March 14 from 8 p.m. to midnight.

The Tag-alongs, with some visiting musicians, will provide the toe tapping music to waltz, polka, two step and square dance by.

Square dance callers for the evening will be Lloyd Cummings, Dave Stolt, Al Smith, Rod Stevens and Bill Stevens.

There will be finger food served during the evening, so if you don't dance come anyway, you can visit, swap stories, listen to the music and eat.

Donations are $8 per couple or $5 per person. No alcoholic beverages please.

Parents will meet to plan student party

An organizational meeting for parents who wish to help organize the 1992 All-Night party for Charlevoix High School's graduating class is scheduled for 7:30 p.m., March 19 at the Charlevoix High School library. The purpose of the party is to provide graduates an opportunity to have a good time with their classmates while staying safe and sober on their graduation night. In recent years the party has been highly successful due to parental involvement and wide-spread community support.

For additional information phone: JoAnne Patrick at 547-9842; Betty Martin at 547-2089; or Dana Pajtas at 547-4767.

Alano club to sponsor Bowl-A-Thon

The Charlevoix Alano Club will participate in a Bowl-A-Thon fund raiser Sunday, March 22. The Alano Club, a non-profit organization, was formed in 1986 to provide a drug and alcohol free environment for anyone interested. The Alano Club also provides meeting space for 16 meetings per week of 12 step groups. It presently has more than 100 members and depends entirely on fund raisers, donations, and dues to remain open. Anyone interested in supporting the Alano Club may do so by sponsoring a bowler. To do so, contact any member or call 547-9184.

Council selects interview process

By L. Scott Swanson

The interviewing process to hire a new city fire chief will include a representative from the volunteer firemen and will also include input from fire officers from other communities. This process was chosen by the city council Monday evening despite city manager Mike Wiesner's objections to having a volunteer fireman included in the interview process and despite volunteer firemen objecting to having fire officers from other communities included in the interview process.

Currently, John Martin is filling two roles. Martin had been the city fire chief for the past 10 years. As of this past October, he became the city street department superintendent, taking the place of Wayne Carter, who retired. Between October and now Martin has been the street department director and also filling in as fire chief.

Following a debate about the possibility of restructuring the fire department, the city is now moving in earnest toward hiring a new fire chief. The city fire department is currently staffed by three full-time firemen, who staff the fire station on rotating 24-hour shifts, and a unit of volunteers. According to the proposed restructuring, there will be three full-time firemen who will work rotating shifts, plus a fire chief who will work a normal day shift and fill in when one of the three fulltime firemen is on vacation. The decision to restructure from a three to four person fire staff involved a big hassle, much controversy and plenty of friction between Wiesner and the volunteer firemen.

Given that backdrop, the volunteer firemen wrote a letter to the mayor and city council members requesting that one of the volunteers be allowed to sit on the interviewing panel for a new fire chief and fulltime fireman.

At Monday evening's council meeting, Wiesner suggested a three stage interviewing format. In the first phase, he suggested that a panel made up of himself, mayor Dave Novotny and council members Jackie Cross, Ted Felter and Cheri Hoffman paper screen applicants down to a group of about five candidates. These five candidates would be interviewed by the entire council in a public meeting and in a separate interview by a panel made up of the public safety director from Petoskey and fire chiefs from Sault Ste. Marie and Farmington Hills.

The panel of firefighters from other communities would not vote on hiring a new chief. They would simply provide input to the council and the council would select a new chief, as is required by the city charter.

Wiesner said the system proposed is almost identical to the system used to hire the city treasurer and police chief. In response to the volunteer firemen's request for representation on the committee, Wiesner said he questioned the practice of having city employees be part of the hiring process.

"I feel that the volunteers are too close to the situation," he said.

Wiesner said that if a representative of the volunteer firemen is to be included in the interviewing process, he would recommend that be at the paper screening level.

Volunteer firemen who were in the audience said the city charter says the council shall appoint a fire chief and that it says nothing about the city manager or people from outside the community being involved in the process.

Felter said he sees no problem with the city getting outside input. He said the charter says the city council will hire a fire chief and he said they will do that. He said the charter doesn't say the city council can't seek outside input to help them make their decision.

Council member Buich Russell said he feels the council can pick a fire chief without outside help. Cross said he agreed. Hoffman and council member Bill Haggard said they favored the input from firemen from other communities.

Felter also said he has no problem with a representative from the volunteer firemen being included in the interviewing process.

Local HAM radio club reaches out to the world

By L. Scott Swanson

No matter how intelligent you are, every night, all around the world, there are people holding conversations which are over your head - literally over your head. These people are amateur radio operators and they use the airwaves to converse with other amateur radio operators around the globe.

Locally, the Chain O Lakes Amateur Radio Club is a group of approximately 40 area amateur radio enthusiasts, commonly referred to as HAMs. HAM is an acronym derived from the first initials of three early amateur radio operators. Several members of the local club are from Charlevoix, but there are also members from East Jordan, Ellsworth, Boyne City, Petoskey, Central Lake and other communities.

Tom Oleksy of Charlevoix is the club secretary. He's been interested in amateur radio since he was about 14 years old.

"It's just fun to get together and communicate," he says of the club. He notes that the club allows area radio operators to pool their resources and get a lot of things done.

The club supports a repeater station which is on the KHQ radio tower north of East Jordan. By going through the repeater station, a person with even a portable HAM radio can talk to any other radio operator within about a 50 mile radius.

HAM radio differs from citizen band (CB) radio in that all HAM radio operators are licensed and regulated by the Federal Communications Commission. One of the fundamental regulations is that amateur radio operators can't use their radios for any type of business purposes or monetary or personal gain. Often HAM radio operators will use their radios to help people in one way or another, but it's strictly on a good will basis.

Oleksy told of a recent incident where he and another club member were out driving and found a lady who had lost control of her car and gone in the ditch. They were able to radio for assistance and get her back on the road.

...local HAMs calling

Club member George Buxmann is involved with radio emergency assistance at both the national and local level and has even helped out in international emergencies.

Buxmann said the last big emergency he helped with was the San Francisco earthquake. Charlevoix is very fortunate in that it is a place where disasters are rare. Therefore many people probably don't realize some of the problems an area faces when a disaster occurs.

As Buxmann explains, a disaster will often cause major communication problems. In a situation such as the San Francisco earthquake, some phone lines were disabled and those that were left quickly became jammed. People throughout the world who had friends and relatives in San Francisco were anxious to know if their friends and family members were all right. HAM radio operators were able to help provide that information.

Buxmann also helped get information in the Mexico City earthquake. Detroit has a large Mexican-American population and shortly after the earthquake hit, Buxmann began helping some of the Detroit people find out the status of family members. For the first few days, he found information difficult to come by, but then he altered his system and was able to get in direct contact with an English speaking woman in Mexico City. His efforts ended up helping 77 families. After the crisis, the Mexican-Americans from Detroit invited Buxmann to a dinner and he also received a letter of appreciation from the Mexican Consulate.

Buxmann and other local radio operators are currently working with the Charlevoix County Emergency Services Department. "We're trying to get more HAMs involved so we could provide communication anytime phone lines went down," Buxmann explained.

Buxmann routinely talks to his son in California. How far radio signals will carry and in what direction they will carry varies with atmospheric conditions. Recently, California has been coming in as if it was next door.

Craig Stewart of Charlevoix recently went extra terrestrial with his radio communications. About a month ago, he talked to the Soviet space station as it passed overhead. He said that there was only a limited amount of time to talk so he could only exchange some basic information. Once the cosmonauts have landed, they are going to be sending him a card that radio operators exchange to verify contacts.

Although HAM radio operators have their own jargon and often use technical language, amateur radio is not such a difficult or expensive hobby to get into. People can buy used equipment at swap meets and establish a simple set up for $250 or less. All HAM radio operators are licensed, but there are varying skill and license levels beginning with novice and escalating to general, advanced and advanced-extra ratings. Among the requirements are varying proficiency levels in Morse code. As an operator gains higher ratings, he or she is allowed access to more radio bands.

Amateur radio is also a hobby which appeals to both young and old. Several members of the Chain O Lakes club are on the far side of 60. The club's youngest member, Tim Roeth, is only 13. He's had his license for about two years.

For Roeth and his mother, Mari, and father, Terry, amateur radio is a hobby the whole family now shares. Pat Martin, formerly of Charlevoix and now of Trout Lake, got Tim interested in amateur radio. Terry became involved so that he would have a hobby to share with his son. With both her son and husband enjoying amateur radio, Mari figured if you can't beat them, join them.

People who are interested in learning more about HAM radio may phone Oleksy at 547-2430 or come to one of the club's monthly meetings. Meetings begin at 7 p.m. on the second Tuesday of the month at the E.O.C. room at the Charlevoix County Sheriff's Department.

Today's HAM's recall early Charlevoix radio enthusiasts

The term "silent key" is used by amateur radio operators as respectful reference to deceased radio operators. Tom Oleksy, secretary of the Chain O Lakes Amateur Radio Club, says Charlevoix has several silent keys.

Oleksy became interested in HAM radio when he was a teenager. At that time, there was no club in Charlevoix and there were only a few radio operators. These HAMs were old-timers, but Oleksy said they were willing to make time for him and others interested in amateur radio. These old-timers became an inspiration to Oleksy and others and were instrumental in getting amateur radio off the ground in northern Michigan.

Among Charlevoix's silent keys are:

Jim Gaskin (W8BHU). Gaskin, the father of Pete and John Gaskin, was retired when Oleksy met him.

Art Nettleton (W8OUY), who worked at the county building and lived on Charlevoix's north side.

Phil Lawrence (K8CSM). Lawrence was a part owner of Fair-port Marine and did a lot of work on boat radios. He taught a class which enabled Oleksy and other area people to get their HAM licenses.

Roy Lockwood (W8CIL). In his later years, Lockwood had vision and hearing problems, but found ways to work around that so he could remain active in HAM radio.

OPINIONS

Editorial

Interviews should use all resources

The city council did a nice job of sorting through differing opinions Monday evening to arrive at a solution which makes sense.

In order to understand any issue involving the city fire department these days, you must first be aware that the city manager and many, if not all, of the volunteer firemen are currently at odds. Both sides may well have the best interests of the city at heart, but there's just no meeting of the minds on how best to pursue those interests.

Lately, city council members (and the local press) seem to find themselves seated in the midst of one aspect or another of this ongoing dispute.

Monday evening the council adopted an interviewing process for a new fire chief which didn't fully satisfy either Wiesner or the volunteer firemen. (See related story on page one.) But from the standpoint of the public, it's a decision which is satisfactory.

Wiesner suggested a three phase interviewing process. In one phase a committee made up of the mayor, council members and Wiesner would paper screen applicants and select about five candidates for interviews. In one interview, candidates would speak to a panel of three fire department administrators from other communities. In another interview, candidates would be interviewed by the city council. At the end of the interviews, the council would review input from the administrative panel and use that to help them select a new fire chief.

There were two points of contention in this suggested course of action. The volunteer firemen wanted to be represented in the interviewing process. Wiesner didn't want them to be part of the process. The volunteer firemen also didn't want involvement from outside fire department administrators.

City council members, to their credit, decided to make use of all expertise available and include a volunteer fireman in the interview process and to use the panel of outside fire administrators.

Allowing volunteer firemen to be represented in the interviewing process has two advantages. It gives the process input from someone directly involved with the fire department and by giving the firemen a role in the hiring decision it encourages them to work harmoniously with whomever is hired.

Using the panel of outside fire administrators gives the city council the opinions of people with professional expertise in firefighting and also offers a fresh opinion from someone outside the community. That has value. It makes good sense.

Two other fire department matters which came up Monday evening were less logical.

In the first matter, the council is going to end up making a decision through not making a decision. After a big debate this past fall, the city council decided to expand the full-time staff of firemen from three to four members. Now, there's talk of reconsidering that decision. At Monday evening's meeting, the possibility of reconsidering staffing levels was raised, but council members decided to postpone that decision until after a new fire chief is hired. Then, they will ask him what he thinks should be done.

Delaying the decision fails to make sense for two reasons. First, candidates for fire chief should know what they're in for at the time of the interviews, not after they've been hired for the job. Secondly, if it's going to be the new fire chief's decision, then the decision he will face is having a four-man staff which means he works an eight hour day, five days a week, or having a three-man staff which means he works a 24-hour shift every third day. It's a safe bet, he will want to work days.

The second matter concerns what should happen with the fire chief position between now and the time a new chief is hired. Currently, former chief John Martin is filling in at the fire department and is also serving as street department superintendent. At Monday evening's city council meeting, volunteer firemen complained that some fire department equipment (a couple pieces of hose, a pump and some kind of bracket) were being used by the street department. Apparently in response to that, there was discussion of replacing Martin with a different acting fire chief.

Fortunately, the council thought better of that and instead instructed the city manager to check into the problem, correct it and report back next week.

Two points need to be made regarding this matter. First, if there really is a problem with fire equipment not being where it is needed when it is needed, just tell people to leave the equipment where it belongs. There's no need to make a federal issue out of it. Second, and more importantly, city equipment is frequently shared by departments. In a small city, that is both good and necessary. There's no need for departments to get provincial.

Police officers praised

Editor,

I think it's time to speak up for our law enforcement officers in the city and the county of Charlevoix.

George Lasater, the sheriff of Charlevoix County, and Dennis Halverson, the chief of police in the City of Charlevoix should be congratulated for the outstanding job they are doing for us in this community.

Whenever you need help from the police they are there for you. They go after the law breakers and they follow up and collect the evidence needed for the court system to prosecute the criminals. Sometimes their work looks like they are doing it in vain because the people they arrest for a crime are put back on the streets to do it again.

Let's stand by our law officers and give them our support because their hands are tied after they turn the evidence and the perpetrator over to the courts.

Congratulations and thanks to the officers and, let us not forget the helpfulness of the auxiliary officers of the County of Charlevoix for the outstanding job you are doing for this community.

Sincerely,
Edward Germain

Pool application supported

Editor,

To: Members of the Charlevoix City Council

At the initial meeting of the Mothers for the Pool a couple of years ago, we learned that a majority of those present either had a near-drowning experience or had a friend or relative who drowned. This may help explain why we are so dedicated to the cause of building an indoor community swimming pool. But a pool can be fun as well.

My husband and I have talked to innumerable people who related stories of how swimming helped them recover from injuries or eased their back pain or arthritis. One woman said she was able to continue to control her diabetes through pool exercise when she no longer could jog. This in addition to the benefits of maintaining fitness increasingly touted by health experts who are concerned, for example, that we're becoming a nation of "couch potatoes."

...pool effort explained

Besides the importance of children learning to swim and practice water safety, there are social benefits, I believe, as well. Not all children can compete in sports but they needn't feel "left out" if they have a swimming alternative. More importantly, our youth can learn there are alternatives, especially during winter months, to drugs and boredom.

After the vote rejecting a $2.9 million pool on school property, the pool committee honestly wanted to know if it should continue its time consuming effort to build a community pool. A 1991 survey, designed with input from you, plus school board members plus 100 test surveys conducted at service clubs and churches, indicated continuing support if we stay in the $million or under range. If the school district is not involved in management, if pool is not on school property, if the pool is near a recreation complex if units of government would work together to avoid taxes for the project. Yet some council members seem more influenced by critical phone calls than by this scientific data.

Have we forgotten how we all pulled together to acquire North Point? We applied for a state grant first, then raised the money to buy the land. Foundations are more apt to give when there are matching funds. The chicken clearly comes before the egg in such cases.

The willingness of the township to share pool expense is a big plus because cooperation between government units earns points. We're competing with other communities for this recreation bond money. A lot of Charlevoix citizens voted for this bond so why shouldn't we have an opportunity to obtain some of these funds for our community?

There has been little discussion among community leaders of the positive economic benefits in addition to health and safety benefits. Infusion of capital from outside sources should create jobs and support our major industry of recreation and tourism.

Having attended many pool committee meetings I'm aware of how the committee has tried to respond to public concerns. Over the years, it has spent hundreds of hours researching sites; costs and grant-making rules. It continues its fundraising after a hiatus in deference to the Charlevoix Area Hospital capital campaign.

It is understandable, but unfortunate, that the Council feels it is under pressure to sponsor a grant application. First, you were asked a few months ago to "approve this resolution to study a pool authority and the authority will apply for the grant." This was based, I understand, on information the committee had at the time.

Then the DNR advised in writing that a pool authority would not qualify as a sponsor. Hence, there was a possibility that the City of Charlevoix and Charlevoix Township might co-sponsor the grant. However, the DNR said "no" to co-sponsorship, that it had to be the unit of government that controls the proposed site.

Not to add to your feeling of pressure, a government sponsor has even greater significance than its application to the DNR recreation bond. It is crucial to the success of other grant possibilities (Kresge Foundation — which gave $400,000 towards the construction of an indoor pool at Safety Harbor, Fla.; Kellogg Foundation; local industry, etc.)

Let's do what's best for young and old and give the city an opportunity to qualify for these grants. Let's give it our best shot!

Sincerely,
Barbara MacArthur

It's just a step and down steps!

Now they're buying a turquoise and black step, plugging in a "Step" videotape, and stepping along to who else? Steppenwolf, singing "Born To Be Wild."

It won't do to take a couple of two by fours and build your own step. I can't explain the phenomenon, but home-made steps could result in piano legs instead of Cher-legs. I'm not sure, but I think it has something to do with the sporty turquoise and black color scheme of the storebought step.

Some women like the step aerobic program, but would rather spend their $60 on some basic necessity, like Retin-A cream, or a new spring handbag, so they try to substitute a common household item for a step. Tool boxes fit the height requirement for a step, but when they tip over and spill hammers and socket wrenches on your toes, the urge to step is replaced with the urge to hurl a vise grip at a smiling Cher on the TV.

Don't think you can actually use the existing stair steps in your home instead of the $60 step. That might work for a few minutes, but when the video instructor starts in with the arm movements, "Punch those arms, up, down, side, side," you'll be punching the family portraits right off the stairwell walls. Besides, the step routines are carefully choreographed to be done ONLY with the aerobic step.

I don't mean to step on the toes of women who buy these steps. More power to them for working out. I just think that, for $60, a step should do more than lie there on the floor, forcing a person to step on it or over it. Heck, the kids' toys strewn all over the floor accomplish that same task. If the creator of this step had been a woman, then the step would move around in a V pattern and vacuum the rug every time you stepped on it. Speaking of vacuuming, I'd better get back to my housework. Pay no attention to that turquoise and black thing tucked under the couch. It's, uh, my new spring handbag.

Hospital staff thanked

Editor,

This letter is to acknowledge the staff in the emergency room at the Charlevoix Hospital. March 4, our son was severely hurt and required immediate and specialized attention. Through quick and professional handling of the situation our son was given the proper treatment. Based on this situation, I would gladly use our local hospital again. Thanks goes to Dr. Laine, all the nurses and the ambulance crew that transported him to Petoskey. Their handling of the situation was truly professional.

FAMILY

Giles - Peterson

Katrina Marie Giles and Philip John Peterson of Bay City and formerly of Alpena were married January 11, 1992 at the First Assembly of God Church in Alpena. The double-ring ceremony was solemnized by Rev. Mario Cuppetelli in the presence of family and friends.

Katrina is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Stanley Streeter of Oshtemo and Richard Giles of Clare.

...city to begin interviewing for a new fire chief

Felter made a motion, which Haggard supported to have the process include a volunteer fireman and a committee of firemen from other communities. The motion passed by a 4-2 vote with Russell and Cross voting opposed.

In a related matter, the council also briefly raised the possibility of not hiring an additional fireman and going back to the former system of having two firemen and a chief. After scant discussion, the council by consensus decided to wait until a new chief is hired and seek the new chief's input as to whether or not to hire an additional fireman.

Also in regard to the fire department, some of the firemen in attendance complained that fire department equipment is being used by the street department.

Council member Butch Russell suggested appointing Bob Roloff, currently one of the two full-time firemen, as acting fire chief until a new chief is hired. Under Russell's proposal, Martin would have been asked to continue filling fire department shifts, but not as chief.

The council decided to defer action on that issue until next Monday evening. A special meeting had already been scheduled for next Monday evening to discuss a proposal for the city to sponsor a grant application for a community swimming pool and also to discuss the revised airport master plan.

Sheriff's officers receive awards

Former U.S. Attorney Roy Hayes presented awards of valor to several members of the Charlevoix County Sheriff's Department at the County Commissioners' meeting last Wednesday. The awards were given in recognition of the sheriff department's actions during the shooting incident and subsequent arrest of Steve Salisz Jr. and Beth Webb February 4, 1991. The incident was "a situation of danger to the law enforcement," Hayes said.

Hayes went on to say that he had chosen Charlevoix as a place to live largely because of the high quality of law enforcement. "The quality of law enforcement is the quality of life itself in a community," Hayes said.

Receiving the National Sheriff Association Awards were: Sgt. Michael Wheat, Sgt. Donald Schneider, Undersheriff Dale Boehm Jr., Deputy Sheriff William Cousineau, Communications/Security Officer Babette Meggison, and Sheriff George T. Lasater.

Receiving the Sheriff Star Award were: Communication/Security Officer Corinne Russell, Communication/Security Officer Siiri Avery, and Department Secretary Debbie Storm.

Above: Undersheriff Dale Boehm (right) receives an award from former U.S. attorney Roy Hayes and county commission chairman Don Smith for his role in apprehending two armed people last spring.

by REV. BRUCE HAMILTON

I was talking to a young man about the stresses and strains the change of seasons brings to his business. He exclaimed, "Look at all these gray hairs, pastor!" I kind of laughed and told him that he had better get used to them. He looked at me with an equally big grin and said, "But you're forty. You're supposed to have them!" It is amazing how humbled you can become when someone holds a mirror up in front of you.

I just finished a couple of weeks on crutches due to a sprain. In the doctor's office, when he looked at my ankle, he said that I may just have to get used to it always being a little weak. Not that I am old mind you, but I seem to remember when such things happened to me as a kid the doctor would tell me to tough it out. You'll be as good as new in a few weeks. There's the mirror again.

Speaking of mirrors, we just remodeled our church bathrooms, that included installing new larger mirrors. Did you ever notice how the bigger the mirror is, the more of yourself you have to look at?

The point of all this reflective conversation is to remind you that when we really do take a long hard look at ourselves, we don't always like what we see. In some ways, taking care of the physical things about ourselves that we don't like is the easy part. Diet and exercise can do wonders for our outer selves. It's the emotional inside of us that is a little harder to work on.

If you are a Christian, consider this: God's people are supposed to be like a family. We are meant to be brothers and sisters who truly care and are supportive of one another. The scripture is very clear on this point, "there is now no condemnation for those who are in Christ Jesus." If you are going through a rough time, be reassured that you are in good company with a lot of fellow strugglers. All of us have our moments. The difference is in how we handle them.

When most folks encounter rough waters, the tendency is to tough it out. The more serious things may find us trying to bury them in our minds hoping they will just go away. They won't. The only way they will get taken care of is if you get some help.

You can count on prayer as being more than words thrown up into empty air. It unleashes divine power. You can count on fellow Christians to offer you a listening ear. God's Spirit sometimes speaks most clearly through someone else who cares about you too. You can count on this one thing above all. Whatever the problem, whatever the wrong, God loves you from the inside out. He wants to help you uncover, know, and really love the real you.

(Rev. Bruce Hamilton is pastor of the Charlevoix Community Church of God on Hurbit Street. Beacons of Blessings is provided to the Courier by Hamilton and other members of the Charlevoix Ministerial Association.)

Players and fans rushed onto the floor following Friday evening's game to celebrate the Rayders' district championship. It was the Rayders' first district title since 1988.

Rayders beat Rams in district

Charlevoix held Harbor Springs to a single basket in the second quarter, building a 15 point lead that led to a 54-44 win in the district semifinals March 11.

Based on a comparison of season records, the Rayders entered the game favored to beat Harbor Springs and move on to face East Jordan in the finals. Although being favored to win and actually winning don't always go hand-in-hand in tournament play, the Rayders were able to take care of business on their home floor against the Rams.

Charlevoix opened the game with an 8-0 run. Harbor Springs began the game with shooting trouble, a problem which haunted them throughout the evening. Despite leading in the first quarter, Charlevoix was not playing particularly well. Defensively, the Rayders failed to control the boards and gave up multiple shots. Harbor Springs, though not a tall team, was active on the glass and aggressively pursuing rebounds. Unfortunately for the Rams, they couldn't make a second or third shot any more than a first shot.

In the second quarter, the Rayders improved both offensively and defensively. Offensively, the game opened up and Rayder guards Don Jess and Luke LaBlance handled the ball well in the open court. With 6:30 left in the quarter, a crossing pass from LaBlance and a bounce pass from Jess left a Harbor Springs defender with a twisted gyro and Jason Psihopaidas standing alone beneath the basket to finish a fast break and start an 11-2 Rayder run. The final basket of the run saw Brian Coolman slide into an open spot and LaBlance find him for an easy basket. In between, Jess hit two baskets, one a three-point rainbow from between 22 and 25 feet out.

Harbor Springs called time out with 2:16 left in the half, but coming out of the time out Charlevoix went on a 6-2 run to close the half leading 27-12.

In the third quarter the Rayder offense slowed and more points came from the half-court offense. DeGrow had six of the Rayders' 10 points in the quarter while LaBlance had the other four. Harbor Springs whittled away at the Rayder lead and closed to within 10 points 29-19 midway through the quarter.

Charlevoix maintained their lead through the fourth quarter and with time winding down Harbor Springs was forced to foul. Charlevoix's final 10 points of the game came from the free throw line.

Charlevoix's scoring was very balanced. DeGrow led the team with 14 while Jess had 10. Keith Carey, Psihopaidas and LaBlance each had eight.

Campbell named all-state skier

Katherine Campbell of Charlevoix has been named to the second team of the Michigan All-State Ski team.

Campbell, a senior, was voted to the team by members of the Michigan High School Ski Coaches Association.

Currently, she is training for a week at a U.S. ski camp.

Pajtas places third in state

Jason Pajtas closed out his high school wrestling career with a third place finish at state finals competition this past Friday and Saturday. Pajtas went 4-1 in the 152 pound weight class.

Pajtas finished the season with a 40-4-1 record. For his high school career, he was 112-40-1, the second highest win total for a Rayder wrestler.

Pajtas got off to a good start Friday at the state finals with a 14-5 win over Travis Wade of Climax Scott. Wade was the defending Class D state champion.

In his second match, Pajtas beat Rick Quillen, a regional champion from Goodrich, by a score of 11-1.

Saturday, Pajtas got behind in his first match and fell one point short in a come-back bid, losing 6-5 to the eventual state champion Jeremiah Osher of Ida. Pajtas trailed 4-1 early in the match.

In his fourth match of the weekend, Pajtas found himself in a re-match with Wade. Once again, he won, this time by a 4-1 decision.

In the match for third place in the 152 pound weight class, Pajtas handily defeated Matthew Higgs of Battle Creek Penfield with an 8-1 decision.

Jason Psihopaidas looks for a shot against an East Jordan defender. Psihopaidas made a spectacular bounce pass to Keith Carey in the fourth quarter with the game on the line.

High school students learning CPR

by Ralph McRae

In our community, as in other towns, there are many volunteers doing what they can to make life a little better. Numerous organizations exist only to help other people.

One of the people doing volunteer work to help others is Mary Ann Cox. She has been showing hundreds of high school students how to save lives through cardio pulmonary resuscitation (CPR). As of this week, Cox has trained 164 Charlevoix High School freshmen and sophomores. Without remuneration, she uses lectures, illustrations and hands-on exercises to teach two classes each week-day afternoon.

Cox has been a registered nurse for 22 years, working in emergency and intensive care units in Ohio and Michigan hospitals. Until two years ago she was the Director of Nursing Services for the Charlevoix Area Hospital.

Given her career, Cox has had to use her CPR training on several occasions. As an American Red Cross Association instructor, she must be re-certified in CPR every two years.

Our country's leading cause of death is heart failure. Many of these deaths can be prevented if CPR is initiated within four minutes. No equipment is necessary. CPR is simply a matter of learning a skill which will temporarily keep blood and oxygen flowing after a heart stops.

In the high school, CPR is taught to Physical Education and Health class students. The CPR classes are limited to eight students at a time, who meet for five 50-minute classes.

Some of the time is devoted to demonstrating how to save a choking person. Ninety percent of choking fatalities are children younger than five years old. To aid in demonstrations, a manikin is used.

Several times during each class, Cox goes through three important CPR steps. To assist in remembering them, the steps are called A,B,C which stands for airway, breathing and circulation.

In CPR the chest is externally compressed which squeezes the heart so that it pumps some blood through the body. When functioning normally, the heart pumps about 2,000 gallons per day in an average person. Even when CPR is done properly, the amount of blood being pumped is far less than normal. Yet it can be enough to give a victim a chance to be revived.

Last week, Nicki DeNio, Melissa Anderson, Charnell Byers, Tony Krysinaki, Bryan Jarema, Steve Cook, Paul Henne and Kurt DeGrow were nearing their final class session. In their final session, they would take a written test before receiving their CPR certificate. The CPR classes are being taken by underclassmen. After two years, as juniors or seniors, they will take a short refresher course to renew their CPR certificate.

In addition to working with students, Cox has been involved with Heart Start, a local program which raised $22,000 to equip Charlevoix city ambulances with defibrillators which can help restore the hearts of some heart attack victims back to their natural rhythm. The Heart Start group has supplied Cox with all of the tools needed for the high school CPR classes.

Big Rock receives safety award

Employees of Consumers Power Company's Big Rock Point nuclear plant have received the utility's 1991 President's Award. The Award is annually presented to employees who achieve the safest work performance among the company's nine electric generating units around the state.

The plant's 150 employees were recognized for their achievement at a congratulatory breakfast March 5.

On hand to honor the employees were Consumers Power Chief Operating Officer Michael G. Morris and Vice President of Nuclear Operations David P. Hoffman.

"The two important products we provide to Michigan residents, electricity and natural gas, are also potentially very dangerous if not handled properly," said Morris. "Thankfully, your safety record confirms that you have not lost sight of that fact."

Big Rock Point Plant Manager William L. Beckman noted, "While like every business we spend a lot of time discussing budgets and production, I am very proud of our employees for once again winning this Award because working safely is the bottom line, most important part of our job."

It is better to light a single candle...

Betsy Stewart, with husband Bill and Outlet Manager Betty Maiden, stand behind an array of discounted candles in their newly expanded showroom.

Bullfrog light company expands show room for walk-in customers

By Laurie Lounsbury

If you don't have the time to dye Easter eggs, you could always get Easter Egg Candles. If it's October and you don't have time to carve a pumpkin, you can always burn a Halloween Pumpkin Candle. These unusual holiday candles are just a few of the festive features in the newly expanded, Bullfrog Light Company's outlet store. Owners Bill and Betsy Stewart have recently tripled the size of their retail store in an effort to accommodate the local desire for their products.

When the Stewarts moved their candle manufacturing business to Charlevoix in 1985, it was never their intention to have a retail business. As locals learned about the candle company, they would drop in to buy a candle. Stewart eventually decided to set up an outlet store for the local and tourist customers in Charlevoix. "I didn't want to aggravate the people who lived here and it seemed like there should be a way to sell them a candle or two," said Stewart.

Stewart got into the candlemaking business years ago, when his kids came home with a craft project and needed some help from dad. Stewart first fiddled around with wax and string in ice cube trays. Long after his kids got bored and moved onto other projects, Stewart was still interested in candlemaking. "I spent ten years experimenting and horsing around before I decided to make candles for a living," Stewart said.

Making a living in the candle business has its ups and downs, as Stewart explained. The candle business is on an upswing right now, but, because candle popularity is cyclical in nature, Stewart expects a downward change in the trend in the next few years. Right now, the company is enjoying a successful period, filling orders for major department stores like Dayton Hudson and Marshall Fields. "Candles are really in right now," Stewart said.

The Bullfrog Light Company first became known for their wide, cylindrical candles and rose petal candles that glowed brightly when they burned. Now they have expanded their candle repertoire to ball shaped candles, egg shaped candles in pastel colors for Easter, and even orange pumpkin shaped candles with pumpkin faces for Halloween. "We do a lot of test marketing in here," Betsy Stewart said of the retail outlet. New candle designs are first sold in the outlet before the Stewarts offer them to their major accounts. With their newly expanded showroom, the Stewarts are also offering a variety of candles and candle-related items from other suppliers. Patio candle holders, brass candlesticks, and Mexican glass candle holders are some of the new items available at the Bullfrog Light Company.

March is the month the Stewarts devote to their local patrons, offering 30 percent off on the already discounted candles. During the month, customers can browse through the new showroom, enjoy a complimentary cup of cappuccino or a cookie. Business hours during the month of March will be Monday through Friday, 9 a.m. to 4 p.m., and Saturday, 10 a.m. to 3 p.m.

Elzinga honored

Charlie Elzinga, Charlevoix, local agent for Farm Bureau Insurance, received two company awards for his sales and service in 1991 and for his achievements throughout his career.

The awards, presented at the company's recent sales convention in Traverse City, included the 1991 All American Award for the company's top producers. The award honors Elzinga as one of the top Farm Bureau Insurance agents in Michigan.

Elzinga also earned the 1991 Elton Smith Award for overall excellence as an agent, the sixth agent in company history to be so honored.

Pool grant application receives a yes but...

By L. Scott Swanson

Yes, but... Monday evening the city council agreed to sponsor a grant application for an indoor community swimming pool, but they attached some stipulations to the agreement. According to the stipulations, the city will only accept the grant if pool proponents can raise $2,678,940 for an endowment fund to cover pool operational costs. (In addition to that, it will cost approximately $1 million to build the proposed pool.) The council stipulated that if the city is awarded a Michigan Department of Natural Resources Recreational Bond grant, it will only accept the grant with the provision that the local share of construction funds will be private money rather than local tax dollars. It was also stipulated that the endowment fund must consist of cash or letters of credit, not pledges.

This $3 million plus would have to be raised within about the next nine months. Pool supporters have said they anticipate receiving as much as $500,000 from the Recreational Bond grant.

Earlier this year, when pool sup-

Chamber develops "Action Agenda"

By L. Scott Swanson

The Charlevoix Chamber of Commerce has developed and released what it calls an "action agenda." The agenda sets forth goals for Charlevoix's downtown area and calls for several specific steps to be taken in the coming months and years.

Some of the recommendations involve subjects which have been controversial in the past and are likely to be controversial in the future, but whether the recommendations are adopted or not, at the very least the action agenda will provide a format for discussion. Among the recommendations likely to trigger debate are:

-Retaining the city Downtown Development Authority (DDA) (Currently the DDA is scheduled to expire in 1998);

-Recruiting and electing City Council candidates and making recommendations for DDA board appointments made to help assure continuing public policy support for downtown improvements;

-Utilizing bonding (i.e. having the city borrow money, rather than paying as it goes) to move ahead on several projects at once, or one major project (such as Bridge Park improvement);

-Proceeding with the installation of new decorative lighting in the downtown area.

The diagram above shows the floor plan for the proposed community swimming pool. The pool building would include a six-lane pool and locker rooms. Initially, it would not have a spa, but plumbing would be put in place to allow one to be added. A gym could also be added.

...city will apply for grant

porters asked the city to sponsor the grant application they presented lower projected operational cost figures and higher projected revenue figures. In recent weeks, the city council had city manager Mike Wiesner and city treasurer Rick Brandt develop projected cost and revenue figures. Their figures showed a higher projected cost and lower projected revenue. (See accompanying summaries for a cost comparison.)

Pool supporters estimate operational revenues of $115,000 against costs of $98,000 per year for a $17,000 per year surplus. City figures project revenues of $34,845 per year against costs of $144,863 per year for a $110,018 per year deficit.

In comparing the two estimates significant differences in revenue projections include projected contributions from the school and fundraising projects. Pool supporters project revenue of $17,000 annually from the school for students using the pool. They also project revenue of $30,000 per year from an annual fundraising event such as an auction. In his revenue projections, Wiesner noted that he did not include projected income from the school since he has received no written commitment from the school. He also did not project revenue from an annual fundraiser.

On the cost side, pool supporters projected staffing costs of $50,000 per year and chemical costs of $1,500. Wiesner projected staffing costs of $80,648 per year and chemical and supply costs of $11,576 per year.

Monday evening, pool spokesmen Roger Srigley and Dave Strawbridge disputed the city figures. Srigley said the city's projected operating costs were inflated and called the city estimate a "conservative budget to the point of creating a new definition of conservative budget."

Strawbridge said pool supporters spent a great deal of time studying operating pools and the annual operating cost the endowment fund and fundraising will need to cover is about $70,000, not $110,000.

"I don't care what Mike (Wiesner) says. It's not going to be that ($110,000)," Strawbridge said.

Wiesner defended the figures he and Brandt presented. He said he had worked with the pool supporters for several months and concluded that previous estimates had been a matter of "fitting figures to what we wanted to hear."

Wiesner added that he had spent a lot of extra time developing the figures and noted, "I pride myself on realistic budgets. I feel this is a realistic budget."

Two council members expressed a preference for the more conservative budget figures presented by the city staff.

Council member Cheri Hoffman said she "would rather overbudget and not spend rather than underbudget and have to tax."

Council member Butch Russell said, "I think we asked for some realistic figures and that's what we got."

Russell was the only council member who voted against applying for the grant. Hoffman was joined by Pat Gaskin, Jackie Cross and Ted Felter in supporting the grant application. Council member Bill Haggard was absent.

A crew of ten people have been working in Charlevoix for nine days photographing indoor scenes for the next fall/winter Spiegel designer Catalogue.

One of the decorating themes calls for a log cabin, western, red bandanna ambience — the Big Sky, Montana look that is becoming increasingly popular in interior design. However, the logistics of transporting a housefull of furniture through the Rockies in a snowstorm and back seemed more challenging than was deemed necessary.

Thus Holly Rothschild, as professional location coordinator, reminded Mike Garcia, the Spiegel account executive, that the Mettler Cottage in Charlevoix would be a far more ideal location — not only because it is close to Chicago, but both Holly and Mike have spent much vacation time at her family's cottage on Michigan Ave. and they are both well known in the area.

People flipping through the glossy pages of a Spiegel catalogue are not aware of the detailed planning that goes into every shoot. In Chicago, the first step involves the selection of the objects to be featured. In this case there are triangular wooden cheese boxes that are stacked in a corner like a cabinet. There are tables and chairs, mirrors and lamps, rugs and airy candelabra designed with horseshoes. These miscellaneous items are all placed in relationship to each other by designers with the help of a computer. The crew then brings the black and white printouts to Charlevoix with them. The printed layout is then used as a guide when the objects are placed in the various rooms of the log cabin cottage against a backdrop of hand-hewn beams and the hand-laid stone fireplace. Finally, the photographer steps up and waits for the proper sunlight to stream through the windows. Flash, flash, flash goes the camera.

When the shoot is done, a team carefully wraps every piece of furniture and accessory, puts it in a box and loads it on the truck. But first the walls going up and down stairs are draped with padding, so that nothing is scratched. When all the Spiegel furniture is loaded on the truck it's time to put the original cottage furniture back as it was. This is easy to do since the team has previously taken photographs which serve as a reliable guide.

It's now time to check out of the Edgewater and move on to Chicago where the whole process will be repeated again for next week's shoot in a contemporary home in the suburbs of Chicago. And in another home again the week after that, and again the week after that. As they say, that's one way to make a living! For your information, I've been told the fall/winter catalogue will be available around the Fourth of July. Watch for it! Only you will know that there's a slice of Charlevoix in it.

O.M. coverage criticized

Editor,

On Saturday, March 14, 1992, six Odyssey of the Mind teams from the Charlevoix Public Schools traveled to Alpena, Michigan to participate in the Region VII OM Competition. The teams did extremely well. (St. Mary's Charlevoix sent two teams) — all eight teams coming in the top ten of their problem and division. The teams competed against 31, 23, 17, 15 or 5 teams at a time! Our congratulations to these 50 students who spent much of their free time over the last five months in preparation!

While extremely pleased and proud of our young people's achievements (9th, 8th, 6th, 5th, 3rd, 1st, 1st places) we are embarrassed and disappointed that their hometown paper, The Charlevoix Courier, chose to omit coverage of this "other-than-athletic" school activity. To give our students proper recognition for their academic efforts would indeed encourage them as well as even more students to work toward academic excellence.

Editor, it is not too late to take pictures of ALL the teams and publish their names in the Courier.

Virginia Schairbaum
Volunteer OM Coordinator for all the coaches: Kay Beatty, Sheila Bogart, Lorrie Fershee, Eileen Heck, Phyllis Hess, Jennie McFalls, Frannie Phalen, Mary Lou Smith.

Editor's note:

The story regarding the O.M. competition appears on page 5 of this week's Courier.

Photos of two of the teams appeared in last week's Courier. Due to time and space constraints, we often are unable to take photos of every person or team participating in events — athletic or otherwise. Despite those constraints of reality, we try to be a very people oriented paper. By way of example, the Courier edition referred to included photos of more than 50 area people ranging in age from pre-school to senior citizen.

We would like to wish the best of luck to the two O.M. teams advancing to state competition.

Davis explains check problem

Editor,

As you no doubt have heard, I recently released personal financial information that shows I have written overdrafts at the "House bank." Because you have been a friend and supporter, I feel I owe you an explanation.

First, I apologize from the bottom of my heart. I fully recognize that my sloppy accounting has led to my embarrassing the very people who have been so loyal to me all these years. To people like you who have always been there for me and who I have always counted on — I can only say how sorry I am.

I could offer a long list of excuses. The period in which the audit was done was the worst period of my financial life, coinciding almost exactly with a painful separation and divorce. The "bank" was run so poorly that days often went by before deposits were credited; this fact alone may have led to an overstatement of the number of overdrafts I wrote, a fact I intend to investigate more carefully.

But none of these excuses really matter. I realize that the bottom line is that Congressmen got benefits that most Americans didn't, and that was wrong. It should not have happened.

But I think I owe you one thing in addition to the apology: I owe you an answer to the question everyone is asking — "How could someone overdraw more than 800 checks? It's not an excuse, but here is my explanation.

The "House bank" is not a bank at all. It's a "cooperative deposit fund" that offered none of the services that a true bank offers. You couldn't get a loan from it; You couldn't get a credit card or a mortgage. The money wasn't federally insured; and, believe it or not, it didn't even pay interest on our funds.

It had only one feature — overdraft protection. The people who ran the fund never returned a check for insufficient funds. Instead they called us and asked us to deposit money to cover the overdraft.

I used the overdraft protection for a number of reasons. I knew no taxpayers' money was involved. When an overdraft occurred, it was covered by other Congressmen's money, not public money. I knew I wasn't breaking any laws or rules because as a deposit fund it was not subject to normal banking rules. I knew no money was ever lost; in fact, I now understand that our deposit fund had an average balance of more than $1 million each month. In short, no one was getting hurt.

And there is one other thing I have to tell you. When I came to Washington, "bank" officials told me that our fund had overdraft protection up to the amount of our next payroll check, and I did my banking based on that assumption. Even the Ethics Committee's final report confirmed that this overdraft up to the next paycheck was a standard operating feature of our fund. Yet when the number of bounced checks was announced, this overdraft protection was not taken into account. This fact alone accounts for the vast majority of my overdrafts.

Some have suggested that the Congressional bank was somehow exempted from normal bank regulations. The reason our fund was not subject to bank regulations is that this was not a bank. Any group of people can set up a deposit fund, and they too would be exempt from bank regulations as we were.

What really hurts is the perception that I used taxpayers' money for some sort of sweetheart deal. Taxpayer money was never on the line. We Congressmen were simply writing checks on the combined pool of our deposits.

I hope this explanation gives you a least some perspective on how this all happened. These overdrafts were certainly a mistake on my part, but on the whole, I think I have served the people of the 11th District well. I have always been very attentive to the needs of my district, and I will redouble my efforts to serve it. Together we have done so much, and yet there is so much more to do. Now, I need your help. I hope you can be there with me.

Again, I offer my sincerest apologies. I will do everything in my power to earn back your support and respect.

Sincerely,
Congressman Bob Davis

Band boosters say thanks

In an effort to promote good health care to young children in the community, the Northern Michigan Medical Society and the Northern Michigan Medical Society Auxiliary has donated the "Shape Up For Life" coloring book. The coloring books will be distributed to Northern Michigan Hospitals, Charlevoix Hospital and Cheboygan Memorial Hospitals Emergency Department and Pediatric Department.

Recycling paper: Who takes the stuff?

An environmentally concerned citizen had a box of paper that he wanted to recycle. It wasn't newspaper, and it wasn't glossy magazine paper either. It was just paper—some computer paper, some used office paper, some cardboard and a stack of leaflets. With the recycling industry currently on uncertain footing, this person had some confusion about what is recyclable and what isn't, and just when and where you can recycle it.

Three R's Recycling, located on the north side of Charlevoix, will take the biggest variety of recyclable material. They accept cardboard, tin, newspaper, office paper, computer paper, glass, and plastic milk jugs, and plastic laundry jugs.

The Cedar Ridge Landfill will accept newsprint, tin, glass, plastic milk jugs, and clear plastic jugs. Cedar Ridge does not accept office paper or computer paper, nor do they take any cardboard.

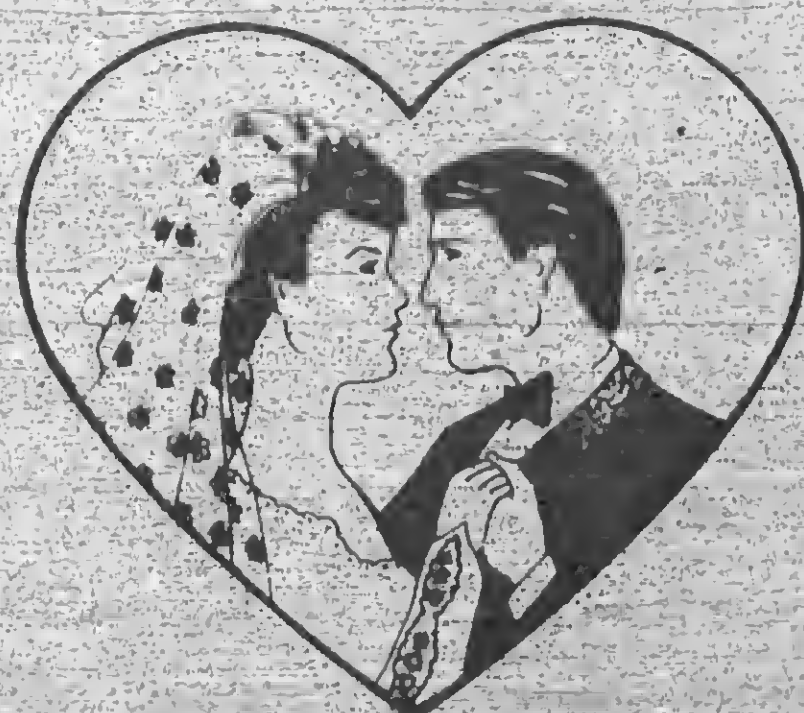

The Waste Management Recycling Center, on U.S. 31 South, accepts the same products as the Cedar Ridge Landfill. Waste Management and the Cedar Ridge Landfill both take recyclable materials at no charge, while Three R's does have a three dollar charge per load.

Larry Smith, Day Shift Supervisor at Three R's, describes a load as being, "As much as a person can fit in a car or the back of a pick-up truck." Smith also said that Three R's would greatly appreciate it if customers would sort their recyclable material before they bring it in. Cardboard should be sorted from newspaper, and office paper should be separated from computer paper.

Three R's continues to survive as a private recycling business, in spite of a soft market for recycled material. Smith cited the tin market as an example. "Tin pays for the gas to transport it, the labor, and lunch," said Smith. Cedar Ridge Landfill isn't accepting cardboard because there just isn't a market for it.

Drop off hours at Three R's Recycling are Friday from 8 to 5, and Saturday from 8 to noon. The drop off hours at Cedar Ridge, located off of M-66 Highway are Monday through Friday, 7 to 4. Waste Management's drop off center on U.S. 31 South are Tuesday and Thursday, 1:30 to 6:30. All recyclable materials should be properly sorted.

by REV. LOWELL ANDERSON

John F. Kennedy's famous phrase "Ask not what the country can do for you, rather ask what you can do for your country" has become one of the quotes of the century. It is indeed important to ask the right question!

Too often Christians are asking, "What can my church do for me?" rather than asking the question "What can I do for my church?" While it is important that church involvement meets the needs of the individual parishioner, it is likewise important that the parishioner meets the needs of the church. If a congregation is comprised of more takers than givers, then everyone is short-changed. Everyone needs to give as least as much as he takes.

The vitality of a congregation is dependent on the faithfulness and consistent involvement of everyone. It's not only important that the Pastor is always there for you in your time of need, but that other "brothers" and "sisters" in your church family are there for you - and in turn you are there for them.

Faithful attendance, therefore, is not simply a matter of getting one's needs met but being there for others. According to Guinness book of Records, Roland E. Daab of Columbia, Illinois held the record for unbroken attendance in Sunday School. On May 23, 1976 he attended his 3,000th consecutive Sunday School session - an unbroken period of more than 57 years! I simply cannot believe that a record like that is self-serving alone. There must have been a few of those Sundays that it would have been more in keeping with Roland's self-interests to have gone fishing, visited the family out of town, or just slept in.

I tend to think that Roland Daab did not attend without one absence in 57 years just to get his name in the world record book. A record like that speaks of being an example to others, faithfulness to a commitment, being there for others.

The right question at this point seems to be "What would my Church be like if I was supportive, committed, and faithful as Roland Daab? What if every Christian was like him?"

(Rev. Lowell Anderson is pastor of the Charlevoix Assembly of God Church. Beacons of Blessings is provided to the Courier by Anderson and other members of the Charlevoix Ministerial Association.)

BUSINESS

You know what they say about woman drivers...

In this case, they say she's hard-working, well-trained, prompt, safe and efficient

(The following story is one in a series of stories about area business and business people being written for the Courier by Ralph McRae. McRae is a former mayor and city council member and currently is a member of the Charlevoix Industrial Development Committee.)

By Ralph McRae
Fewer than 10 percent of United Parcel Service (UPS) drivers are women. Katherine Whitley Lawson of Charlevoix is one of them.

UPS is in the business of delivering messages, letters and packages to millions of people each day. Their trucks, which are more formally referred to as package cars, are the familiar Pullman Brown colored vehicles often seen on our streets and highways.

Lawson and UPS were matched up through the Michigan Employment Security Commission office. At the time she applied, she met the requirements of being at least 21 years old and able to drive a vehicle with a stick shift transmission. She also had to pass a physical and a driving test.

Lawson's first assignment with UPS was a three-week training course in Lansing. The course emphasizes the company's policies and code of ethics. UPS has grown through strict adherence to a doctrine of prompt and reliable service.

After completing the training course, Lawson returned to this area's UPS center which is located in the Fochman Industrial Park near Petoskey. For the first several months at the center, she was on stand-by - filling in for other drivers and learning how to sort incoming packages.

Each night five double-bottom feeder carrier trucks, three from Grand Rapids and two from Toledo, arrive at the Petoskey center. The contents of the trucks are removed and placed on a long conveyor which carries them past package cars parked on either side of the conveyor. Handlers quickly pull off the packages, placing them in one of eight sections in the proper package car. In the package cars, shelves on either side of sky lighted walkway provide compartments for each part of a driver's route. The packages are organized so that the first one on the car will be the last one off.

Loads are timed so that it will take about eight hours to complete the daily routine. Vehicles leave the center at 9 a.m. Stops are calculated to take one minute each, to deliver and return to the wheel. Seldom will you see a UPS driver walking. Drivers appear lean and trim and must be able to carry packages weighing as much as 70 pounds. A physical examination is required every two years. Drivers stop live-ly. The faster they trot, the quicker they are home free. Each package car's drop off points are entered into a computer for daily printouts of total time it should have taken to do the route.

This being the slow time of the year, Lawson begins her day at the Giantway center in Petoskey and then drives to Charlevoix to make deliveries to a few blocks south of the bridge. After that, it is out to M-66, covering side roads as far south as Ironton. Extra time is allowed for bad road conditions. Several times she has been stuck in snow drifts. Once, her vehicle broke down. On getting back to the base, Lawson must file a report of her vehicle's condition. The mechanic in turn must sign off before releasing the cars back to the drivers.

During the busy months, drivers can work up to 60 hours per week. At the end of the 60 hours, the driver must turn off the motor and wait for a relief man. UPS drivers must obey all state traffic laws and local speed limits. Their biggest problems are inadequate addresses. In many small towns a lot of businesses do not have numbers on the store fronts. Charlevoix County's system of numbering has been very helpful. If the 911 emergency phone system is adopted, all residents on rural roads will have to show their names with clearly visible four inch letters. Another problem drivers learn to deal with is unfriendly dogs.

When new drivers are assigned their first route, a supervisor will be on board for the first three days. This is to help the driver adjust to making the 200 or more stops they make each day.

If a customer doesn't know how to use the UPS service, they may acquire that information by dialing the UPS 800 number listed in the phone directory.

Of the 30 drivers running out of the Petoskey center, three are women. All employees have health insurance, vacation allowance and retirement plans.

The UPS has several kinds of service. First there is ground service, one or two-day delivery. Michigan's main hub for ground service is Grand Rapids. There is also over night delivery from any place in the United States. Delivery by 10:30 a.m. the next morning is accomplished through the use of hundreds of small and large airplanes. For air service, the main transfer point is Louisville, KY and then in to Lansing. From there smaller planes fly to all points in Michigan. Every night a plane arrives at the Pellston airport. These deliveries are all personally loaded by drivers. The company also has slower and cheaper air delivery service. CODs are accepted. If the recipient is not contacted in three days, the items are returned to senders. UPS' main competitors are Federal Express and the U.S. Postal Service. The growing mail order industry and sales by TV have greatly increased UPS home deliveries.

This gigantic multibillion dollar industry was started by a Seattle man who in 1907 borrowed $100 to start a motorcycle messenger business. From Seattle, it spread to other large population centers. The UPS name was adopted in 1919. UPS is now in every county in every state in the United States and also in Canada and Germany. The company's larger planes fly to 170 different countries.

Day to day deliveries are handled by the United Parcel Service Company, now owning the world's largest private vehicle fleet and employing 67,000 people. Its latest financial report shows sales of $2.96 billion annually. United Parcel Service Company is part of the United Parcel Service of America. This corporation has 191,000 employees and annual sales of $9.6 billion. An indication of its broad range of delivery service is that it requires 58 vice presidents to run its various departments.

Lawson, while noting that UPS is currently primarily a male dominated concern, does recommend that qualified young women consider becoming UPS drivers. It is hard, but rewarding work. Lawson is proud to wear the UPS uniform and says the best part of her job is the hundreds of friends she has made. She and her husband Allen have two young children.

...Chamber develops agenda for future downtown projects

-Utilizing State Street (and perhaps other streets) for diagonal parking on one side.

-Increase visitor boat dockage capacity with a re-designed dock system.

-Other interesting recommendations which are likely to be less controversial include:

-Trying to recruit a bookstore, children's wear, jewelry/repair, and other stores not currently present in the downtown area.

-Planting and maintaining flowers at the base of sidewalk trees and in decorative planters.

-Utilizing empty store windows with either promotional or decorative material.

-Eliminating all overhead wires on Bridge Street.

-Create high visibility for parking directional signage to make parking easier to find, especially on side streets.

The items mentioned above, are not a complete list.

ing, but only a sampling, of recommendations contained in the agenda.

Many of the recommendations on the agenda were derived from a survey taken by Downtown Coordinator Rod Bensen. Bensen, was hired last year for the two-day a week position which is funded by the City through the DDA and administered by the Chamber of Commerce. One of his first large projects was the survey which led to the agenda. The agenda has been reviewed and approved by the Chamber Board of Directors and presented to the DDA board.

In a memo introducing the agenda to the DDA board, Bensen wrote, "The Agenda will be published and widely distributed, so all can understand what needs to be done and can play a supportive role. This clearly is not a 'hidden agenda.'"

In discussing with the Courier the significance of the Agenda, Bensen pointed out that it is a compilation of a lot of ideas people in the community have talked about. "It's all down in one place," he said.

City has a full slate of summer projects planned

By L. Scott Swanson

If you listen closely, you can hear it. In between the chirps of birds and the groans of flowers straining to pop out of the ground you can hear the sputter-sputter, putt-putt sound of bulldozers and cement mixers cranking up for the northern Michigan construction season.

Again this year, the City of Charlevoix has several construction projects scheduled. Mayor Dave Novotny spoke to the Charlevoix Rotary Club last Thursday and explained what community members can look forward to in municipal construction projects this year.

New parking lot between Mason and Antrim Streets

For a change, this year there isn't anything too radical planned for Bridge Street in the business district. The Downtown Development Authority (DDA) still wants to install new street lights, but presently their big project is completing the Kusina property purchase and building a new 40-car parking lot between Mason and Antrim Streets.

At the moment, the city is awaiting final results from soil studies at the site. Assuming those come back OK, the garage facing Mason Street and the building directly behind it will be taken down and the new parking lot will be constructed this summer. The remaining building will be put on the market for the establishment of a new business. The city has budgeted $89,000 for the removal of the two buildings and the construction of a new parking lot. That money would come from DDA funds.

New parking lot at Depot Beach

Depot Beach is another site where a new parking lot will be constructed. The new 80-car Depot Beach lot will be built in the area where the railroad tracks used to run. The cost of the lot is estimated at $51,600. That cost will be paid by the city. The parking lot is the first step in a long range plan for improvements at Depot Beach. Ultimately, there will also be a new pavilion and restrooms at the beach.

Although it isn't a city project, the Charlevoix Historical Society is in the process of acquiring the old Depot Building with the intention of converting it into a museum.

$3.7 million airport project begins with new 50-plane apron

The third parking lot which will be constructed this summer isn't for cars, but is for planes. A paved apron large enough to hold 50 planes will be constructed early this summer. The apron was originally going to be built last year, but was delayed until this year. Construction of the apron is the first significant step in a $3.7 million airport improvement program. The cornerstone of the program is the addition of another paved runway parallel to the existing runway. Once it is constructed, planes will be able to land on one runway and immediately clear that runway by taxiing back on the parallel runway.

Funding for the airport project will be shared with federal funds covering 90 percent of the cost with the state and city splitting the remaining 10 percent. For this year, the city's cost is estimated to be about $98,000.

Streets to be paved: Finish Dixon and repave portions of Mason, Grant, West Hurlbut and West Upright

The city's ongoing infrastructure (streets, sewers, sidewalks etc.) improvement program will focus on paving streets this year. In past years, sidewalks have been emphasized, but those are now in pretty good shape throughout the city.

Work on the east end of Dixon Avenue will be completed early this summer. That project was started last year. Finishing it will cost about $82,000.

Two street projects near the middle school won't begin until after school is out. Mason Street will be repaved between Park and State Streets. Grant Street will be repaved from Park to Antrim

Streets. The total cost for those two projects is estimated to be about $190,000. Money for repaving the streets will come from an additional four mills of property taxes the city has been levying in recent years for the infrastructure improvement program. (A mill is $1 for every $1,000 of a property's state equalized value. State equalized value is half of a property's theoretical market value.)

West Hurlbut and West Upright Streets will be repaved between Grant and State Streets. The estimated price tag there totals about $150,000.

Mason and Hurlbut Street projects will also include some sewer work with a total cost of about $25,000.

Other street paving considered

Having received favorable construction bids this year, the city is considering adding a few streets to the original list. City manager Mike Wiesner is working with construction companies this week to determine how much more it would cost to repave East Lincoln, East Hurlbut and East Upright Streets between Bridge and May Streets this summer. If the price is right, the council might borrow money from the city motor pool fund to take advantage of this year's low street repaving prices. That proposal is something the council is likely to consider next Monday evening.

Sewer service to be extended

There are also four sewer projects which the city won't be funding, but will be overseeing since the projects involve the city sewer system. Three of the projects involve extending sewer lines to developments north of town. The three developments are: North Pointe Woods, the Charlevoix Country Club, and the C & O Club.

The fourth project is the upgrading of two lift stations on Mathews Lane. The lift stations are needed to serve the new developments on M-66 and will be paid for by those developments.

Second judge issue adjourned until 1995

By Laurie Lounsbury

The Charlevoix County Commissioners found themselves trying to hash out some language differences on a judicial contract with Emmet County at the eleventh hour, only to find out the following day that it was an exercise to "hurry up and wait." The contract was an agreement between Emmet and Charlevoix Counties to share the costs of adding a second judge in the circuit court. The cost was to be shared between the two counties and with the state. The contract needed to be finalized and approved by Charlevoix County Wednesday evening, so that the resolution from the two counties could be submitted to the State Senate Judiciary Committee for their committee meeting the next day.

Thursday, the Senate committee approved a bill for five new judges in the state, and one of those new judges is to be in Charlevoix and Emmet County. The catch is that the state will not fund the new judge positions until January of 1995.

...new judge still pending

Governor Engler's press secretary, John Truscott, said that Governor Engler didn't want to pay for more judges in 1992 because the state just doesn't have the money for it. The governor would like to have the time between now and 1995 to work on reforms in the judicial system before adding new judges. Engler hopes to revise the system so that judges in different circuits can share cases. "Some circuits are very overloaded, almost to the point where people are not receiving due process, and other circuits have a light load," Truscott said. Truscott also said the governor is looking into increasing the filing fees for lawyers, hoping that a more substantial fee would cut down on the number of frivolous cases being filed. Engler wants to review the entire judicial system, because times have changed and the court systems may not be keeping pace with the changes. "Let's face it, we've become a much more litigious society," Truscott said.

Graphs and projections provided by Emmet County show a steady increase in criminal, civil, and domestic cases. The Emmet County figures also show a continued increase in cases projected through 1995.

Charlevoix County's actual number of new case filings for Circuit Court in the last five years don't show a steady upward trend. The new case filings have varied from year to year, sometimes going up and sometimes going down. Only 34 additional cases were filed in 1991, for a total of 464 cases, over 1987's case filings of 430. "Engler has always encouraged mediation and arbitration," Truscott said, for civil and domestic disputes, as a means of cutting down on the increasing number of caseloads in court.

Police release results of drowning investigation

Charlevoix City Police have completed their investigation into the Jan. 30 drowning death of 28-year-old Donald Mol. Mol drowned after he became trapped beneath the ice in Round Lake while diving. He had been doing work on a boat which was being bubbled on the southwest shoreline of the lake.

According to police chief Dennis Halverson, Mol had finished working on the boat and had swam a little way away from it. When he went to swim back to the boat, for some reason he swam past the section of open water. A witness saw him swim past the open water toward the north, where there was no open water. While under the ice, he ran out of air and subsequently died. Rescue workers were called and broke through the ice and retrieved the body. Mol was taken to the hospital, but could not be completely revived.

City police did an extensive investigation to try to determine exactly what happened. They were assisted by the Michigan State Police, University of Michigan, Michigan Department of Public Health and a forensic pathologist at a Kalamazoo Hospital.

Mol's equipment was examined by experts from the State Police and University of Michigan. They found no evidence of mechanical failure.

Although it remains impossible to say exactly why Mol missed the opening in the ice, the investigation did reveal four procedural diving errors. They were:

1. Mol didn't have a compass as part of his dive equipment. State Police divers who performed a subsequent dive at the accident scene under similar conditions noted that it was easy to become disoriented as to direction when under the ice at the accident location.

2. During the dive, Mol was not accompanied by another diver, nor was he line-tended. There also was no stand-by diver on site. These precautions are recommended by the State of Michigan Departments of Public Health and Labor Standards for diving operations.

3. The investigation could not document any formal ice diving or commercial diving certifications held by Mol.

4. A drug screen conducted on

Catwalk to be built on South Pier

By Laurie Lounsbury

They're back...

The Army Corps of Engineers will be back in Charlevoix this summer to construct a 220 foot fishing pier along the south side of the channel. The Corps of Engineers reconstructed the South Pier in 1988, altering the original straight pier with a U-shaped section to dissipate waves. Inside of the U, a rubble mound breakwater was installed. The breakwater eliminated the opportunity for pier fishing along the 220 foot stretch. Jim Withers and the Charlevoix Trout Tournament Committee approached the Charlevoix City Council shortly after the reconstruction began and asked the city to explore the possibility of restoring the 220 feet of lost fishing pier.

With the help of Congressman Bob Davis and the Army Corps of Engineers, Public Law #100-676 was passed by the Congress in November of 1988, making it possible for Charlevoix to have a 220 foot fishing platform along the South Pier. The law says, in part, "The secretary shall take such action as may be necessary to restore recreational uses established prior to May 1, 1988, or provide comparable recreational uses at the South Pier to Charlevoix Harbor project, Charlevoix, Michigan, in order to mitigate any adverse impact on recreational uses resulting from reconstruction of the South Pier." The law also says that the costs incurred by the project shall be allo-

OPINIONS

By Laurie Lounsbury

Money is like bread. The tricky part is raising it

My friend Stella Stompinetti recently moved to the little town of Ostrich Sands in the Upper Peninsula. Through years of hard work, Stella has finally saved enough money to build a new home. Being a community-oriented person, Stella took her mortgage business to the local bank in town, the Ostrich Sands First Reserved Bank of Obstacles. Stella explained to the loan officer, Mr. Hiram Jinx, that she had saved nearly $50,000, which was half of the projected $100,000 cost of building her new home.

Mr. Hiram Jinx made some quick calculations for Stella's loan application. "Let's see, Stella, how long do you plan to own this home?" asked Mr. Jinx. "Oh, forever, it's the home of my dreams," Stella replied. "Well then, we need to plan for all contingencies, for at least the next twenty years. You look like you'll live at least that long."

Mr. Jinx did some more calculating. He checked Stella's employee verification record and existing financial holdings. He finally said, "OK, Stella, we'll loan you $50,000, as long as you open up an IRA account with us in the amount of $260,000 dollars by December."

Stella was stunned. "Mr. Jinx, if I had $260,000, I'd hardly need to borrow $50,000 from you now. Why on earth do I need to have a $260,000 dollar IRA, anyway?"

"Well, Stella, according to my cautious calculations, you'll need $410,000 in the year 2014 in order to earn enough to cover the cost of your projected property taxes, maintenance costs, and other stuff," replied Mr. Jinx.

"What 'other stuff'?" Stella asked.

"Well, we could have a very bad snowstorm in the year 2011 or 2012. Your roof might cave in and you'd have to replace it at the 2012 inflated cost of living."

"I'd have insurance for that," Stella replied indignantly.

"Your insurance company might go belly up," Mr. Jinx said smoothly.

"I'd still have my job then, I'll have that income," Stella shot back.

"You might fall off your deck, hit your head, and require extensive frontal lobotomy surgery, which would mean you'd probably have to go live in the tax-funded Home for Frontal Lobotomy Patients. Now, if this happened, Stella, you wouldn't want your home repair costs to become a burden to the Ostrich Sands Bank of Obstacles, would you?"

Stella ignored Mr. Jinx's remark. "I'll have my annual bonuses. I get nearly $3,000 a year for running the company fundraiser."

"We can't assume that you'll be getting that bonus every year, Stella. However, we will accept a letter of credit from your boss if it clearly states that they guarantee to pay you that bonus every year for the next 20 years."

"What about my summer renters? My friends have agreed to rent the upstairs floor of my home every summer. I have a letter from them that says they will use the house and pay fair market rent every year, for as long as I own my house."

"Exactly how much rent is that? Numbers, Stella, I need numbers. Numbers and a reasonably cautious amount of cold, hard cash: $260,000, on top of your $50,000 down payment, ought to do it."

"I don't think that's reasonable, that's ridiculous," Stella said vehemently.

"Look, Stella. We want you to have your home. We just want to make sure that under no circumstances will we have to pay one red cent on the cost or the upkeep of your home. We just want to conservatively plan for every contingency."

"But what about the fact that you're benefiting from my home and property? I'm letting you and your customers use part of my property for your 24-hour instant teller machine."

"Yes, and we appreciate that, Stella. We will enjoy using it to the fullest, we just don't ever, ever, want to have to PAY for it. And what about your staffing costs, Stella? Don't forget about that cost."

"Staffing? I don't have any staff! I pay the yard man about $200 a year, and that's it."

"We have different projections, Stella. In the year 2014, we figure you'll spend $3,000 on gardeners, maids, and pizza delivery boys."

"Mr. Jinx, I think this is ludicrous, but since I need a home loan, and I really want to build my home, I guess I'll have to go along with it. But this really hurts my plans for the future," Stella said sadly.

"Oh? What plans did you have for the future?" asked Mr. Jinx.

"Well, I really wanted to build an indoor swimming pool someday..."

Waiting for judge is all right

At the behest of the Engler administration, a movement to add a new circuit court judge in Charlevoix and Emmet Counties has been stalled, at least until 1995. That decision has merit.

According to Engler press secretary John Trusscott, the governor favors an improved and streamlined court system, rather than an ever expanding court system. That philosophy should be applauded. Before new judges are added in Charlevoix and Emmet Counties or elsewhere in the state, every effort should be made to both reduce the number of cases filed and to streamline the procedure for handling cases which are filed.

Adding a new circuit court judge would have been costly to both the state and the two counties. Just exactly how costly has been hard to pin down. The two county boards seemed to have only a nebulous idea of the exact cost and how it would be shared. The total cost was to have been something easily in excess of $100,000 per year for state and local taxpayers.

In the past five years, more than three out of four cases filed in Charlevoix County Circuit Court have been either divorce or civil cases - either people fighting with their spouses or over other matters. For most taxpayers, other than those directly involved in a specific case, their only interest stems from that fact that they're forced to help fund the forum for these disputes.

Before the state adds judges, three things should be done:

1. Attempt to reduce the number of cases filed.
2. Streamline the litigation process.
3. Force those who use the court system to pay for it.

CMU alumni group hosts musical quintet

The newly formed CMU Alumni Club of Northern Michigan is pleased to announce an upcoming performance of the Powers Quintet in Petoskey. The alumni club is hosting the concert at the McCune Art Center on Thursday, April 9, 1992.

The Powers Quintet is made up of full-time faculty members of the music department at Central Michigan University. The group was formed in 1963 and has since performed hundreds of concerts throughout Michigan and the Upper Midwest. The group had also toured Japan performing before enthusiastic audiences there. The quintet has also released a recording titled "Quintet" by Jean Francaix and "Eight Etudes and a Fantasy" by Elliott Carter.

Members of the group describe their performances as having a great deal of variety. Although their concerts are generally "classical" in nature, they appeal to a very wide audience and will be appreciated by any music lover. The Powers Quintet includes these members: Joanna Cowan, Assistant Professor of Music and teacher of Flute; Roger Rehm, Professor of Oboe; Linda Bartley, Assistant Professor of Clarinet; MaryBeth Minnis, Assistant Professor of Bassoon; and Jack Saunders, Professor of Horn.

The concert will begin at 8 p.m. Thursday, April 9 at the McCune Art Center on Mitchell Street in Petoskey. A reception will follow the performance at the art center. That will allow alumni from Central Michigan University and other guests the opportunity to mingle. The concert is open to everyone. Admission is $3 for adults, and $2 for students. Tickets will be available at the door.

The Powers Quintet will also perform for area music students at Petoskey High School during their visit to northern Michigan, and will give brief clinics to students interested in the particular musical instruments.

Politicians set themselves apart

Editor,

The recent public disclosure of U.S. Congressional Representatives who wrote checks at the House Bank with insufficient funds hit real close to home.

Representative Bob Davis was the third worst offender among current and former members of Congress and wrote 878 checks worth $344,000 with insufficient funds. His response: "I did nothing illegal, I broke no House Rules, the bank had no rules."

The rule makers in this instance were Davis and his fellow members of the U.S. House of Representatives who participated in this special bank as a perk for themselves. As has been the custom, Congress usually exempts itself from regulations it imposes upon mere citizens, such as the Age Discrimination and Employment Act, the Fair Labor Standards Act, the Occupational Safety and Health Act, the American's with Disabilities Act, the Equal Pay Act, the Equal Employment Opportunity Act, the Employee Retirement Security Act, and Title Seven of the Civil Rights Act of 1964.

In the view of many, Representative Davis has been in the Congress far too long. Some would say he is an embarrassment. Certainly this most recent indiscretion, and there have been others, should give Mr. Davis pause to consider whether or not he can continue to serve effectively the members of his district. He certainly is one of the better arguments for term limitation as a growing percentage of the electorate is either refusing to register, vote or participate in the American political process.

At the very least, a special prosecutor should be appointed to expose every wart on the House bank. Representative Davis says public funds were not used to support the House bank, rather members used other members' money when they were overdrawn. How is it possible, you might ask, for a bank that collects or pays no interest, assesses no fees, in-effect generates no income as a result of the services it provides, is able to operate without losing money? The answer is: it could only happen in Washington, D.C.

Poll after poll has shown that the people are fed up with the Congress and they ought to be voted out of office, except, "for my Congressman". From my perspective, as a registered voter in Representative Davis' district, I think he is the problem, and he ought to go. Representative Davis is a good example of poor leadership. He does little to promote public confidence in government.

Jinsky - Wilkinson

Shirley & Floyd Wilkinson

Shirley Farkas Jinsky and Floyd Wilkinson were married Feb. 22 at the Cross of Christ Nazarene Church in Cheboygan. Arrangements of blue and white carnations, a unity candle and white pew bows decorated the church for the 4 p.m. ceremony. A long-stemmed red rose was given to each mother. Pastor Curtis Cruik performed the double ring rites witnessed by 200 wedding guests.

The bride is the daughter of Mrs. Mary Ann Farkas of Charlevoix and the late Bill Farkas. The groom is the son of Vernita Wilkinson of Cheboygan and Ernest Wilkinson of Topinabee.

The bride was given in marriage by her children, Lori Jinsky, from Nellis Air Force Base in Nevada, and Denny Jinsky of Charlevoix. The bride wore a floor-length iridescent midnight blue taffeta gown featuring a navy blue velvet bodice with a sweetheart neckline, tulip sleeves and a diamond shaped opening in the back. She wore a spray of miniature ice blue roses and flowers in her hair and carried a cascading bouquet of white carnations, red roses and ivy.

Music for the ceremony was provided by church organist Larry Brook and vocalist Mary Ann Stephan from Charlevoix.

Judy Niswander attended the bride as maid of honor and wore a multi-colored velvet blazer over a full-length cranberry skirt with ribbons and flowers in her hair. She carried an arrangement of daisies, carnations and ivy.

Best man was the groom's brother Gerald Wilkinson from Cedarburg, Wis. David and Tom Wilkinson, brothers of the groom, helped seat the wedding guests.

A reception for 550 guests followed the ceremony at the Knights of Columbus hall in Cheboygan. Host and hostess were Dave and Ellie Bauers, sister of the groom. Mary Farkas, Kathy Meggison, Julie Wilkinson and Jody Vander Ark, sister of the bride, helped serve the wedding cake.

A rehearsal dinner, hosted by the couple, was held at Pappa's in Cheboygan.

Following a honeymoon to the Fort Myers, Fla. area the newlyweds are residing on Burt Lake near Cheboygan. The bride is a medical assistant at Burns Clinic in Petoskey and the groom is co-owner of E.F. Wilkinson & Sons Inc. Construction in Cheboygan.

Puppet show scheduled

Nothing engenders a sense of fantasy, enchantment and adventure better than a classic tale, and nothing engages hearts and minds more effectively than a live theatrical production. Puppetry is one of the oldest and most respected forms of theater, and it will come to the stage of the Virginia McCune Arts Center in April KIDSTAGE production, "Of Rabbits and Vegetable Villains," a show about Peter Rabbit. Children in grades Kindergarten through six will see two-foot tall hand and rod puppets and create a simple hand puppet to take home.

Just a week before Easter, the timely presentation will be on Saturday, April 11 at 1 p.m. at the Arts Center.

Admission to the KIDSTAGE production is $3 per person.

These fielders are ready to pounce on a groundball like chickens after a bug.

How do you field a groundball. Get in front of it, and smother it, just as Travis Sikavistas is doing here.

A league where there are no free agents, just free spirits

When nearly 50 young boys gather in the elementary school gym, you would expect the shrieks and laughter to reach ear-splitting decibel levels. Yet the air was still and heavy with tension as fifty kids lined up to take their turn at bat for the Little League try-outs.

A handful of girls joined the boys as they all took turns batting, fielding, and sprinting their way into the "Major League" of Little League. Coaches stood on the sidelines and made notes on the players' abilities. From these notes, the coaches will draft the kids of their choice. The draft round selections may sound a bit advanced for ten and eleven year old ball players, but it insures a balanced mix of players on each team.

The mood in the gym lightened up as kids started hitting. Line drives to the bleachers and pop-ups against the ceiling. One pop fly brought a bit of the ceiling tile down with it, after it's short trip skyward. A boy waving his arm at bat remarked, "Boy, I wouldn't want to be the one to tell Mr. Moyers that we broke his gym."

As jaunty levity replaced nervous tension, the boys started to strut their stuff for the benefit of the coaches. There was lots of posing for grounders, cries of "I got it!" and playful running around in the outfield.

It won't be long before teams are picked, practices are held, and the ballfield will fill up with youngsters itching to hear the umpire cry, "PLAY BALL!"

There'll be no making light of Jonathon Boss' batting stance. Rod Carew and Stan Musial also stood in the batters box in a peculiar fashion.

Tony Williams, perhaps some very distant relative of Boston's Ted, takes a rip at a pitch during Little League try-outs.

BEACONS

by REV. ROBERT ZEERUP

Can we not see that we are perhaps in the greatest time the world has ever known since the birth of Jesus Christ. We stand at the threshold of the rapture of the church. (1st Thessalonians 4:13-18) and we can hardly wait for Jesus to come and to take us out of this mess. We seem happy and content to have at least our names, written in the Lamb's Book of Life: content and concerned for just a select few that we may know.

But I ask you my friend what is it that we are doing in this late hour for the cause of Christ? I for one am broken in spirit when I hear the Lord say (1st Peter 4:17,18). "If the righteous scarcely be saved where shall the ungodly and the sinner appear." I begin to count the unsaved in just my family alone and I am brought to tears as I realize the judgment that awaits those who have not yet come to Christ.

It is God's will that all men come to Christ; it is also God's will that we pray one for another. Oh how we must pray for the sinner and the backslider.

In Luke 15:3-7 the scripture tells us that when one sheep is lost no matter how tired, no matter how much leisure time we have to give up, no matter the lack of rest and sleep at all cost you must find that lost sheep. Verse #7 bellows out at us as Jesus responds: "I say unto you, that likewise joy shall be in heaven over one sinner that repenteth, more than over ninety and nine just persons, which need no repentance."

Again Jesus speaks to us from the book of Mark verse 2:17 where he says: "I came not to call the righteous, but the sinners to repentance."

Can we not see that we have been made whole by the blood of the lamb Jesus Christ, but many of our family, friends and the people of our town are yet lost without Christ. Why are we not in travail for men's souls?

The great Lord of heaven has told us that he would pour out His spirit in the last day. Truly we are in the last day.

I look up to my Lord and say, "Here am I Lord" pour out that spirit on me that I may do as the Lord has commanded me to do.

Lord I want to convert sinners from the error of their way! James 5:20 again speaks to us. "Let him know that he which converteth the sinner from the error of his way shall save a soul from death, and shall hide a multitude of sins."

As a church we have many responsibilities to this world we have been blessed to live in but the biggest is that of winning just one more soul to Jesus Christ. Proverbs 11:30 would tell us "He that winneth souls is wise."

Oh Lord for the wisdom to lead just one more soul to the loving arms of Jesus Christ.

May 1992 bring forth the biggest harvest of souls our city has ever known. You and I dear friend can make a difference in many lives if we will but commit to call upon the Lord for the lost.

Local skiers return from national training

Two Charlevoix skiers recently spent 10 days skiing with and against some of the top junior high and high school skiers in the country. Carolyn Campbell, 14, skied at the United States Ski Association J-3 ski camp in Winter Park, Colorado. Her sister, Katherine, 17, skied at the J-1 camp at Mount Bachelor, Oregon.

Katherine was one of only seven girls from the Midwest to qualify for the J-1 camp. Carolyn was one of only 10 girls from the Midwest to qualify for the J-3 camp. The girls qualified through a series of Central United States Ski Association (CUSSA) races this past winter.

Time at the camp is devoted primarily to racing. When not actually racing, the skiers are usually doing training runs. The training runs are timed and are much the same as a race.

"I was racing against U.S. Ski Team girls and it was pretty tough competition," Katherine said. At the J-1 camp, 60 girls and 95 boys from throughout the country compete in slalom, giant slalom, super G and downhill races.

Midwestern skiers tend to be at their best in the slalom, due to the shorter midwestern hills which lend themselves to slalom training. Katherine was disappointed with her race results at J-1. She said she was on her way to a top 30 finish in the slalom, but fell.

She also had an opportunity to try downhill racing for the first time. In downhill, there are fewer turns and speeds are much faster. Campbell crashed near the end of a training run. She estimates that she was going between 50 and 55 miles per hour when she relaxed for just an instant, got back on her skis and lost control. Although skidding across the snow at 50 miles per hour is not something she would recommend for others, or for herself again, she came away from the incident with only a few bruises.

Carolyn was more pleased with her race results. She said she went to the camp looking to get a top ten finish in one of the events. She placed sixth in slalom among 50 girls at the camp.

Both girls said the main difference they noticed in skiing at the camps was that the courses were much longer. In Michigan, they're used to skiing on 50 second courses. On the western slopes, they were skiing on courses that took 1:20 to 1:30 to complete.

Looking to the future, Katherine, who is a Charlevoix High School senior, is considering the possibility of attending an Eastern U.S. college that has a ski program so she could ski with the college team. Part of the appeal of attending the J-1 camp is that several college coaches are there scouting talent. Equipment manufacturers also were at the camp looking for skiers that they might offer to sponsor.

Carolyn, is an eighth grader at the Charlevoix Middle School. Next year she will be looking to fill the void on the high school ski team created by her sister's graduation.

Not to be outdone by any other publication, the Charlevoix Courier has put out its own swimsuit edition.

While we won't divulge the names of the people photographed, we do offer the following clue - The Courier swimsuit edition was shot on location as photographers from around the world converged on Sequanota Club, circa 1930, to shoot these shots for the Courier Swimsuit Issue.

BUSINESS

Boulder Park Terrace staff readys for opening

(The following story is one in a series of stories about area businesses being written for the Courier by Ralph McRae. McRae is a former mayor and city councilman and is currently a member of the Charlevoix Industrial Development Committee.)

By Ralph McRae

In the next few weeks the community will be hearing more about the Boulder Park Terrace Nursing facility which is now nearing completion. An open house is tentatively scheduled for sometime in May.

Located at 1467 West Upright, Boulder Park Terrace is a large building constructed of stone, wood and glass. But it is not the building, but the people who direct the building's operations that will determine Boulder Park Terrace's acceptance by the public. Much of that burden of proof will fall to the facility's executive director, Deborah (Debbie) Saur.

Saur grew up in Allegan. Early in her career she became involved in food services at the Allegan Nursing Home. While there she completed an 18-month college course in nutrition and became a certified dietetic assistant. Later, she became associated with the Beverly Enterprises company, a giant health care corporation that owned and operated 1,200 nursing homes in the United States. While employed by the company Saur attended the Michigan State University Nursing Home Administration program and became a licensed nursing home administrator.

Beverly Enterprises had 65 nursing homes in Michigan. Saur served as an administrator at some of these facilities. Among her specialties was labor relations and negotiations. Saur was assigned to five nursing homes to settle labor problems. Ultimately the Beverly Corporation sold off all of its Michigan care centers due to labor difficulties.

Deb Saur, administrator for the Boulder Park Terrace medical care facility, is preparing for the opening of the facility as construction nears completion.

Prior to accepting her present position, Saur was for five years the administrator of the Gaylord Nursing home. She was initially hired for the Charlevoix project by the Liberator Health Care Company. Since that time, Liberator has sold the project to Northern Michigan and Charlevoix Area Hospitals.

As executive director, Saur is responsible for the facility's day to day operations. One of her first responsibilities has been to hire a staff to serve the patients. Currently, 30 nurse's aids are going through a training course at the Grandvue Nursing Home. They must have hands on clinical experience before receiving the required certification for patient care. One or more Registered Nurses will be on each of the three shifts. For every eight patients there will be a nurse's aid. There will also be housekeepers and maintenance workers. A total of 50 people will eventually be employed at the facility.

Assisting Saur in managing the facility will be:

Constance Nowka, Director of Health Services, who will be responsible for patient care.

Micki Olmstead Hagen, Social Coordinator, who will work with patients and their families while also overseeing admissions and patient activity programs.

Michael Ryan, Director of Food Services.

Until Boulder Park Terrace is officially licensed by the State, these department heads will be classified as consultants. Pending the State's blessing, Boulder Park Terrace will only be admitting private pay patients. In other words, for a few months the facility will not be able to take people receiving Medicare or Medicaid benefits. Later, many kinds of patients will be able to receive attention at the facility. Some will receive skilled care treatment, others will enter as convalescent patients recovering from a stay in a hospital, and still others, assisted living patients, will be able to take full charge of their own health problems. Volunteers will be enlisted to make patients feel more comfortable. Boulder Park Terrace is also seeking donations of books, artwork and a variety of other things to make patients more comfortable. People interested in volunteering or donating may call 547-1005.

The general contractor for the $2.4 million construction project is Goodin Bigelow out of Traverse City. Several local tradesman and subcontractors have also been involved in the project.

Boulder Park Terrace will be owned and operated by the two hospitals - 75 percent by Northern Michigan Hospitals and 25 percent by Charlevoix Area Hospital. An operational board of directors will have management control of the complex. Saur, the board's president, will be joined on the board by three members representing Northern Michigan Hospital and two members from Charlevoix Area Hospital.

Students from the TMI (trainably mentally impaired) class at Charlevoix High School recently celebrated their teacher's birthday with music and dancing at the Argonne.

Some of us take music in our lives for granted. That's not the case with the TMI (trainably mentally impaired) students at the Charlevoix High School. The TMI students celebrated their teacher Leslie Lake's 40th birthday at the Argonne Supper Club, lunching and dancing to the exuberant music of Maggie and Murray. "They really love it," commented Lake, as she watched her students dance enthusiastically for nearly two hours. Cindy Whitley, Argonne employee and assistant teacher for the TMI students, arranged the birthday celebration for Lake and the students.

Maggie and Murray regularly entertain at the Argonne Thursday through Saturday nights, but they graciously volunteered their services for the special occasion, along with Ann Moore, another Argonne employee. The students, aged 12 to 26, rarely left the dance floor once the music began. "You're the best audience we've ever had," Maggie told them as they clapped and cheered after each number. As Maggie and Murray cheerfully belted out one song after another, students took turns standing up with Maggie and providing the tambourine accompaniment.

Last September 125 walkers from Charlevoix, Boyne City and East Jordan raised $6,719 in the annual CWC/CROP Walk sponsored by the Charlevoix County Ministerial Association. Funds are designated for overseas and local hunger relief, with one-fourth of the money being returned to local food pantries.

Mol did indicate the presence of THC, the active ingredient in marijuana. Current research does indicate that any level of THC will impair decision making capabilities.

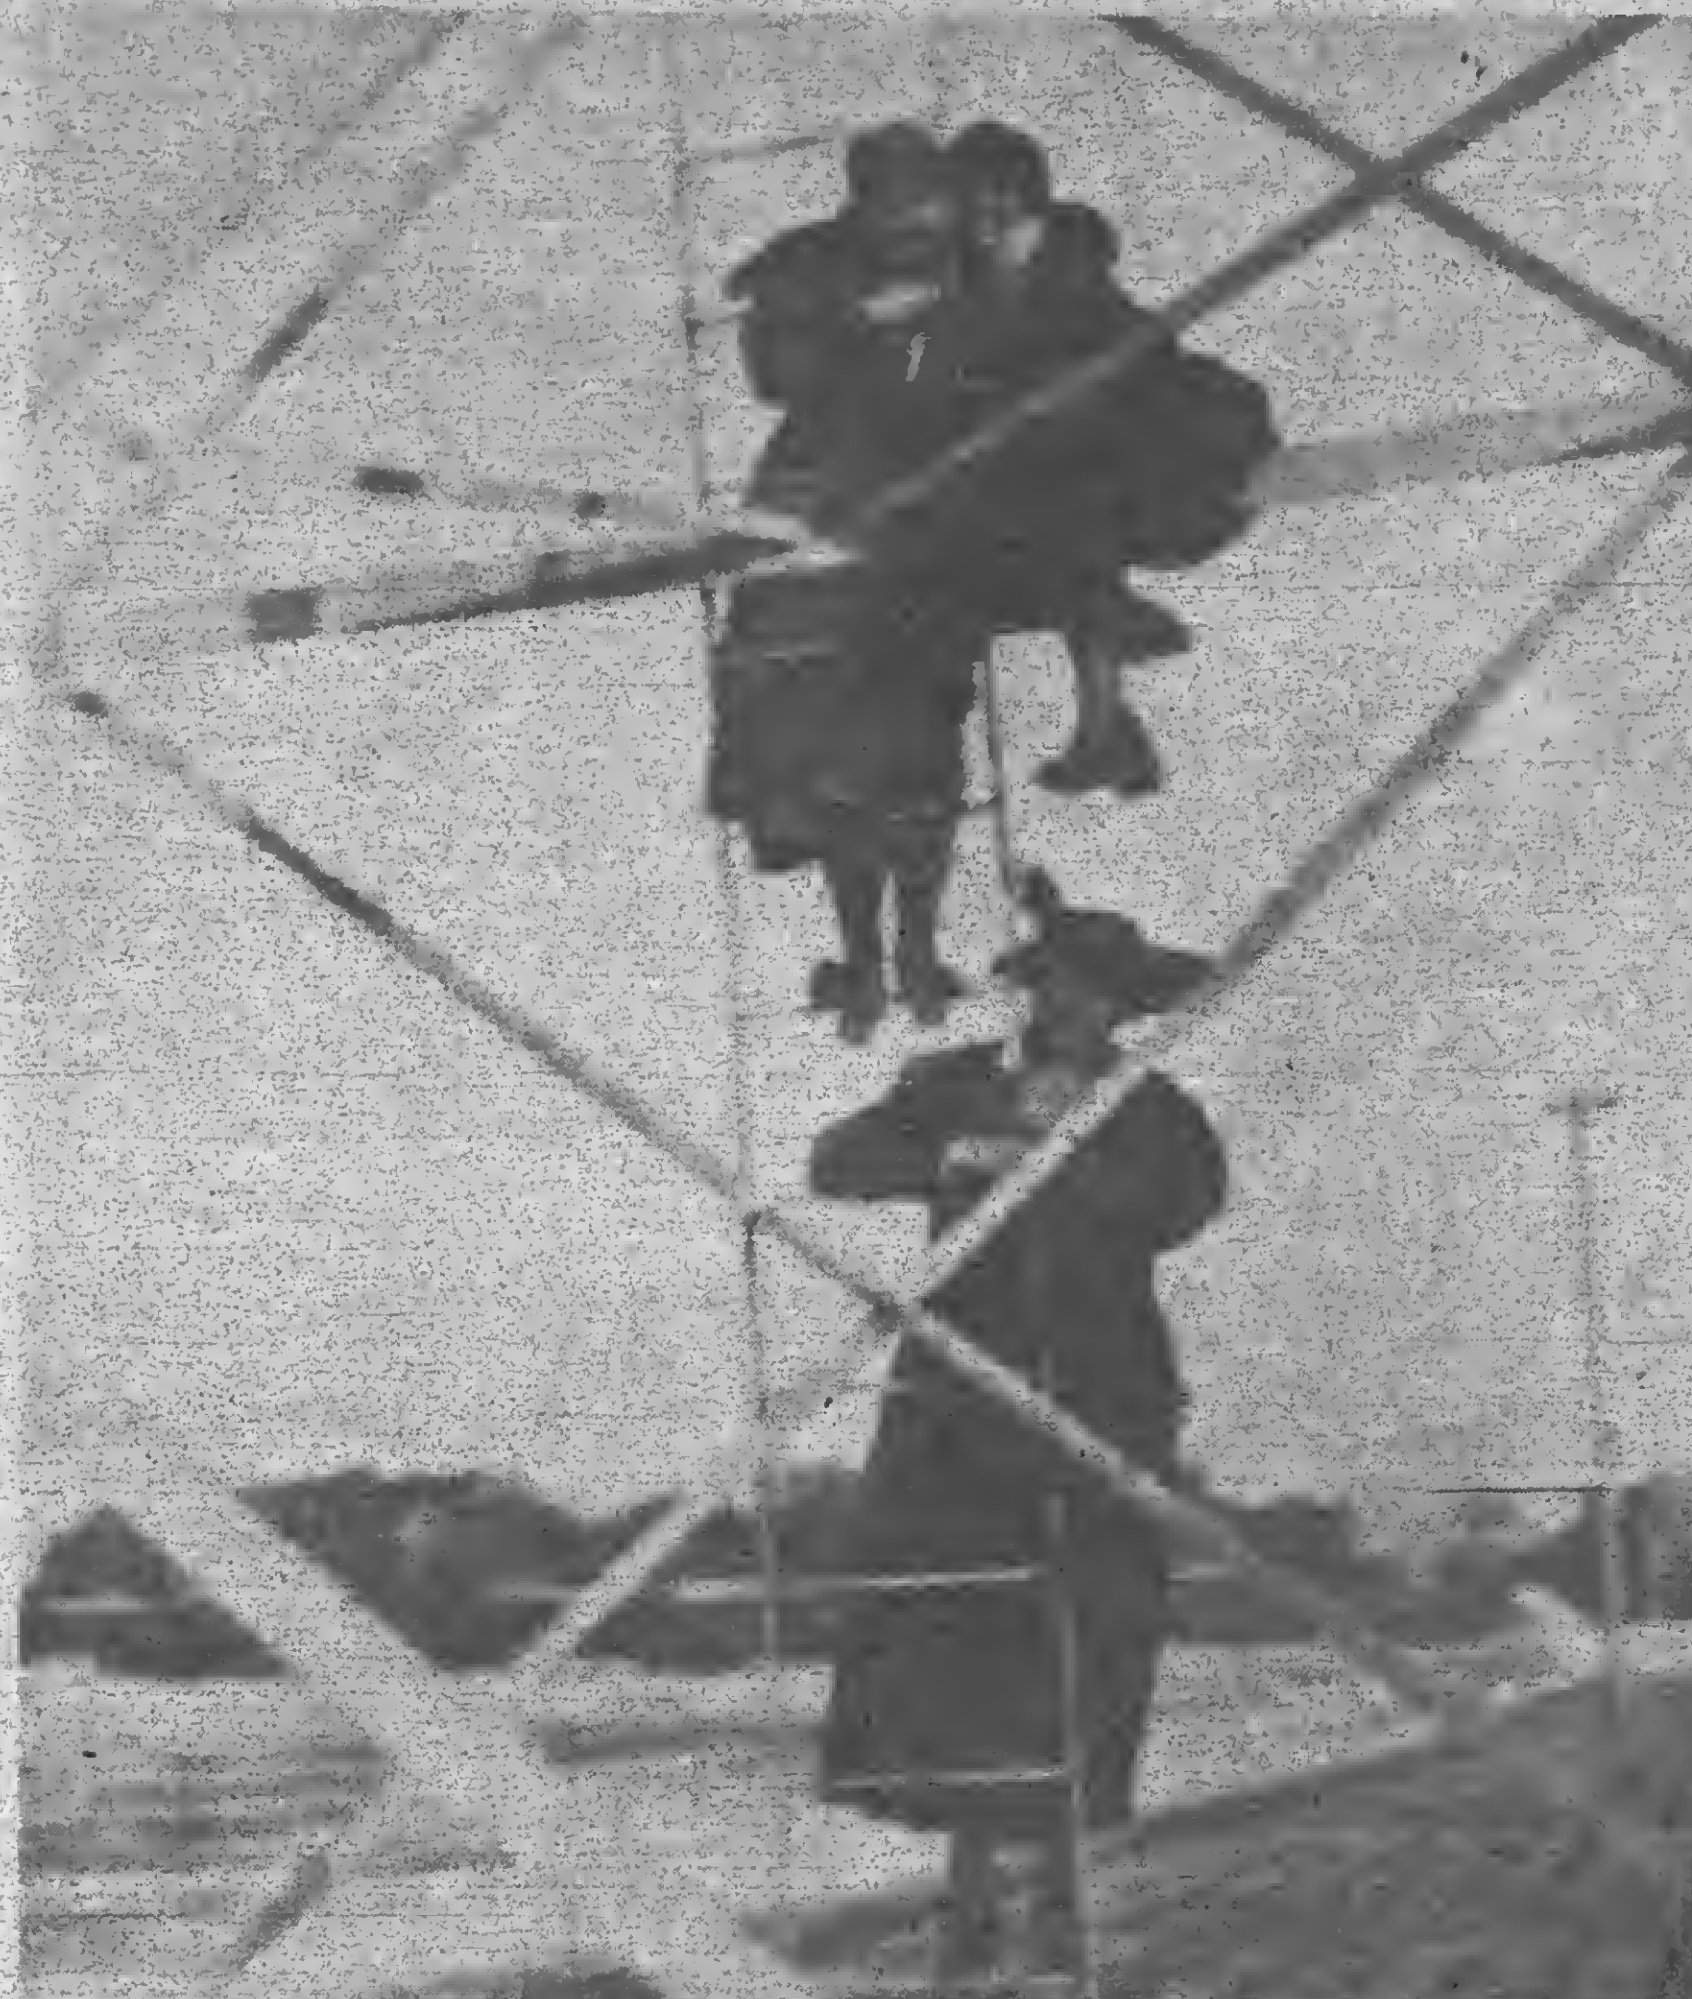

A police department news release said, "The investigation would designate these four points as major contributing factors in Donald Mol's death. However, we would not designate one of these four to be more important than another. This would call for some amount of speculation which we are not prepared to do.

"These four contributing factors are not meant to be all inclusive. As an example, investigation did not reveal yearly physical examinations by Mol, nor could document a recent physical examination. Therefore, his physical condition at the time of the accident cannot be documented. However, absent any additional information, we will consider this investigation concluded."

Folk music at coffee house

The featured performers, Mary Anne and Elizabeth Rivers, have been singing together for twenty years. Mary Anne has written many original works which will be part of the program.

cated among authorized project purposes, so the City of Charlevoix will not have to fund the project. Neal Gehring, of the Army Corps of Engineers, said of the legislation, "Congress passed the law, so we'll be happy to build the fishing platform."

Trout Tournament organizer Jim Withers was pleased with the decision. "It wasn't that we wanted any more (fishing pier). We just didn't want any less," he said.

Fishing along the South Pier has been a popular recreational pastime in Charlevoix for many years. Ten to twenty years ago, when the fish in the channel were abundant, pier fishermen used to be lined up shoulder to shoulder as they caught small mouth bass, trout, and salmon. Withers is hopeful that the number of fish will increase again someday, making pier fishing as popular as it used to be. The DNR and the U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service have been monitoring the fish population annually, and since 1985 they have been planting lake, rainbow, brown and brook trout, coho and chinook salmon, and walleye. Withers and other area fishermen had been concerned that if the fishing in the channel increased in popularity again, the missing 220 feet of pier fishing would pose an overcrowding problem. "We're looking 100 years ahead on this," he explained.

The fishing platform will be 220 feet long and 12 feet wide, and will run in a straight line from one end of the U to the other, forming a continuous straight line of pier along the south side of the channel.

City adopts new ward boundaries

Some city voters will find themselves voting in different wards in the next election, Monday evening, the city council changed ward district lines. Such a change must be made every 10 years to accommodate population shifts and keep things so that approximately the same number of people live in each of the city's three wards.

Under the new ward boundaries, Ward 1 will encompass all of the north side plus a portion of the south side. That portion of the south side is bordered on the east by Round Lake and Bridge Street, on the south by Hurlbut over to Grant Street, then jogging down to Mason Street, then jogging over again to Sherman Street. The western edge of Ward 1 extends along Sherman Street north to Lake Michigan.

Ward 2 will encompass everything else west of Bridge Street. Ward 3 will encompass everything else east of Bridge Street.

Under the old ward lines, Ward 1 took in the north side and everything west of Bridge Street to Mason Street. Ward 2 took in the remainder of the south side west of Bridge Street and Ward 3 took in the rest of the south side east of Bridge Street.

The new ward lines were unanimously approved by the city council.

Fire chief interviews scheduled Saturday

Additional fireman will also be hired

The city council will interview six candidates for fire chief this coming Saturday. The candidates to be interviewed are: Jerry Bridges, Doug Carver, Keith Fralick, Alan Watts, Robert Roloff and Lyle Genett.

The six candidates were selected from among 36 applicants for the job. Candidates were paper-screened on a 10-point scoring system. Roloff and Genett are currently employed by the fire department. The other four candidates are with fire departments in other communities. Interviews will begin at 9 a.m. Saturday in the council chambers at City Hall and will be open to the public.

At Monday evening's council meeting, in addition to establishing an interview time the council reaffirmed an earlier decision to expand the fire department from two full-time firemen and a chief to three full-time firemen and a chief.

City manager Mike Wiesner spoke against adding another fireman at this time.

"I believe in a city operation that does a good job with a minimum amount," he said. "I don't believe the city should spend more than it has to."

Wiesner said the city may find a need for an extra full or part-time person in the fire department in the future, but he recommended waiting for now.

Councilman Ted Felter disagreed, citing previous debate which led to the decision to expand to a fourth person.

"This is what we opted for. I don't see backing up now," he said.

Council member Cheri Hoffman disagreed with Felter, saying she feels it is "financially irresponsible to create that position at this time." Hoffman added that she feels it will cost the city one-half to three-quarters of a mill (a mill is $1 per $1,000 of a property's state equalized value) to add a person.

Barry Wood, president of the Volunteer Firemen, supported the additional staffing saying it isn't the cheapest way to go, but it's the best way.

Games, prizes, face painting, balloons and fun carnival food will highlight the event which raises funds for special equipment and projects at the school.

Games will include the Bean Bag Toss, Putt Putt Golf, Knock the Cans Down, Pipe Toss, Goblet Toss, Alley Oop, Fish Bowl, Cookie-Cake Walk and the ever popular Waffle Ball Toss with the goldfish prizes, among others.

Food and drinks also will take several tickets.

So that all elementary school children can enjoy the carnival, an anonymous donor has agreed to provide tickets for several needy children from each grade. The P.T.A. will match this generous donation to make the carnival a special event for all. Teachers will identify children for this special donation.

Also adding excitement to the carnival is a raffle featuring a getaway weekend for two at Shanty Creek Resort. The package in-

Sawmills still are a part of this area

The mills and logs are just a bit smaller these days

By L. Scott Swanson

A pile of logs is a funny thing. Five different guys can look at the same pile of logs and see a dozen different things. One guy might see a log cabin. Another guy sees chairs. Where one guy sees cabinets, yet another guy sees baseball bats. Still another guy might see apple crates. Who knows? You can see a lot of things when you're looking at a pile of logs.

Ron Hilton doesn't necessarily care what you see. Just make up your mind and he can take that pile of logs and make it into boards for whatever project you've envisioned.

Zing! An ash log slides forward and a 52-inch diameter saw blade shaves a board from it. The board drops onto a conveyor and rolls toward a pile of other boards which it will soon join. The carriage holding the log rolls back from the blade and Hilton adjusts the log for another pass. He pulls a lever. Zing! Another board.

Although sawmills and lumbering are no longer center pieces of northern Michigan industry, they haven't disappeared. As Ron Hilton and his wife Teri of Charlevoix will tell you, there's still plenty of timber in the area and their sawmill at the corner of Phelps and Marion Center Roads keeps them quite busy.

The Hiltons' sawmill is a fairly small operation. Normally, just the two of them operate it. Ron generally sets the logs up and runs them through while Teri takes the boards down the conveyor and slides them off onto the pile. They can saw about 2,000 board feet of lumber a day.

Normally, they're in the mill about eight months out of the year.

The rest of the time is spent cutting or purchasing logs or selling the lumber. Hilton says he normally takes the whole month of February and cuts cedar logs. During February, the mill gets to be a cold place.

Hilton said that his is not the only sawmill near Charlevoix. There are two or three other similar mills and several small portable mills. There are three large mills over in the Mancelona area.

Anyone who has sorted through a pile of boards in a lumber yard and grown frustrated trying to find just one nice straight board without any big knots for some special home project can't help but get a little choked up watching some of the beautiful clean boards come out of the sawmill. These are boards the way that nature meant for boards to be. What happens to these boards? What twilight zone do they disappear into before they can be captured for that coffee table your wife's been after you to build?

Furniture factories buy much of the wood Hilton cuts. He also sells quite a bit of it to Meeder Lumber between Mancelona and Bellaire where it is kiln dried.

Hilton also contracts for various projects. He's cut logs for people to build log cabins and last week he was cutting logs for Aaron Williams of Williams Orchards for apple boxes.

"Whatever we get orders for," Hilton explains.

After graduating from Charlevoix High School in 1978, Hilton worked at various jobs for a few years before he began operating the sawmill. He's been working in the mill for 12 years.

In addition to working for himself, Hilton said, "I just like being out in the woods." He said that's a trait he comes by naturally. "Our family's always worked in the woods."

"My dad always had a sawmill. In fact, he set this up," Hilton explained. He and his wife are in the process of buying the mill from his father. Hilton said his father set up his first sawmill when he had a farm and wanted to build a new barn.

Ron Hilton stands in front of a pile of logs which he and his wife Teri will soon cut down to size in their sawmill at the corner of Marion Center and Phelps Roads.

City police investigating three robberies

City police are investigating three unrelated robberies which have occurred recently.

Shortly after 5 p.m. Saturday afternoon three women and a man robbed Central Drug Store. The three women diverted employees' attention while the man went to the back of the store and stole an undisclosed amount of money from a safe.

City police chief Dennis Halverson said it's quite possible the thieves may have acted the store earlier. He said that it appears that during the crime, the perpetrators removed the license plates from their vehicle. However, a short time later a car matching the description of the vehicle the people were driving was seen with Illinois plates. The three women and man spoke very little English.

EDITH

EDITH GILBERT

By Edith Gilbert

One of the first summer people I met when I arrived in Charlevoix in 1940 was Sis Coleman Loeb. Today's mail brings a delightful letter from her son Herbert A. Loeb III, of Highland Park, Ill. He joined the Charlevoix Historical Society last year and writes that he ordered the new and "wonderful" HISTORIC CHARLEVOIX booklet, in which he noticed by name as contributor.

"I've been collecting postcards from Charlevoix and the surrounding towns, to supplement the thousands and thousands of photographs which I took for so many years and which my mother took" — most were of people and the cards fill in the scenery, the buildings, the various stationary objects and so forth. I now have almost 200 postcards of this area," writes Loeb, who puts all this information on a very sophisticated computer program.

"Last spring, I bought a card at a flea market. When I got home, I read the back of the card. It was postmarked July 5, 1937 and was written about Mabel A. woman who evidently worked for my parents that summer had just arrived in Charlevoix and had taken 'Herbie' to the dock to see the North American. At the bottom she wrote '101 Ainslie, Charlevoix', the house which we rented for perhaps 20 years. An incredible find!"

When Sis died in 1983, Herb inherited all his mother's photos and negatives. He took it upon himself to sort out all the negatives and referenced them to the photos in her many albums — a massive job which took months. "I love detail," he confides.

As for me, I still have two vivid recollections of Sis's visits to Charlevoix during the 40's. One was a scene at the Railroad Depot when she was leaving with her family on the Resort Special train for the overnight trip to Chicago at the end of the summer. With her were her three children, their nanny and cook; a bird cage with a canary in it, a goldfish bowl, a paper bag filled with Petoskey stones, tennis racquets, fishing poles, golf bags, and of course hand luggage and several steamer trunks. The children were dressed for their arrival in Chicago. No T-shirts here. The young boys wore short pants and suit jackets; shirt and tie, and their sister wore a pretty dress and patent leather Mary Jane pumps.

My second recollection is of the starlit, pine-scented outdoor summer parties the Loeb's gave every year on the second Saturday in August. Hundreds of people were invited. Tables and chairs were set out on the lawn and P.R. Ross came with his bar and dance platform and strings of colored lights, — that was before daylight saving time and it got dark earlier, around eight/nine o'clock. The Loeb's were affiliated with the renowned STOP AND SHOP grocery store in Chicago and they had no difficulty in supplying the finest delicacies of liquor, which was rationed during World War II, to their guests. Most men wore tuxedos and women wore long dresses, real jewels, and high heels, which were sometimes tricky to stand in on the damp grass.

Now I wonder if Herbie has any photos of my very private recollections? I doubt it because there were no flash cameras in those days to record the night life either at the popular Koch's Gambling Casino, or at the weekly Charlevoix lawn parties that were held all over town.

It's always a surprise, but it shouldn't be, when one runs into a person who has such powerful nostalgic memories from his youth of pleasant summers spent in Charlevoix. Often they return with their children to climb Mt. McSaub, to walk along the docks on Round Lake and look at the boats, to watch the Bridge go up and down, to eat shrimp at the Argonne. You can usually spot them because they are wearing a big smile on their face and they don't mind waiting for the Bridge.

Letters to the editor

Fire chief should be local

Dear Editor,

Although I am a member of the local firefighters' association, I am first, and foremost, a citizen, and it is as a citizen, expressing a purely personal opinion, that I write this letter.

I would like to use your newspaper to encourage all citizens of Charlevoix to call their councilpersons this week, urging them to vote to hire a local person to fill the position of fire chief.

I do know that local persons have applied for this job, but so have persons who do not live in this community.

To me, it makes sense to hire locally. The fire department's services cover an area of 96 square miles, much of it rural, and it stands to reason that local people who have worked for the department for a number of years would know the general geography of the area (roads, landmarks, etc.) better than someone from out of town would. Knowing locations is a valuable time-saver in fire fighting. It is vitally important to know the location of a house, garage, barn, or farm and to know that location quickly when a fire occurs. Local persons already have that expertise.

Secondly, a local person, who might be named as fire chief, would no doubt have worked with the present fire fighters' group, also an advantage where morale is concerned.

Finally, in these days of high unemployment and when jobs are especially scarce in Northern Michigan, it makes sense to give an available job to a local qualified citizen.

My hope is that other Charlevoix citizens will feel the same way that I do. If so, I once again encourage you to contact your councilpersons and request that they cast a ballot for a local fire chief.

Sincerely,
Douglas Bergmann

Four band students compete in state competition

Four instrumental soloists from Charlevoix High School traveled to Big Rapids on Saturday, March 28 to participate in the Michigan School Band and Orchestra Association State Solo and Ensemble Festival held on the campus of Ferris State University. The Charlevoix High School Band members qualified for the festival by receiving first division ratings at the district festival held earlier in the winter. Flutist Jake Porath passed proficiency II at the state festival with a very high score of 96 out of a possible 100 points. Clarinetist Chris Cupp passed proficiency I with a score of 92. Callie Siwarga, entering the ninth grade solo division, received a first division rating with a trumpet solo. Bassoonist Annette Gardner also participated in the state festival. Band director Terry Isenbarger pointed out that working toward instrumental proficiency at the state level requires much hard work and self discipline and commended all four student instrumentalists for their efforts. Piano accompaniments for the solos were played by Mr. Steve Stargardt.

Exceptional Riders Program begins

Planning is now underway at Lake Charlevoix Farms for the Spring Session of the Exceptional Riders Program. Classes are scheduled to begin Tuesday, April 14 with orientation for volunteer helpers. Student orientation will take place Thursday, April 16. If you are interested in volunteering to help with the classes or would like to register a student, please call Barb Lane at 347-3300.

Students are wanted! The classes are open to the physically, mentally and emotionally challenged of all ages. Students are taught to ride a horse, not just taken for a "pony ride". Each student is assisted by a volunteer horse leader and, depending on the student's ability, one or two side helpers. Safety is emphasized. The classes are one hour long, and are held in the indoor riding arena at Lake Charlevoix Farms, located on the Boyne City-Charlevoix road. They run for eight consecutive Tuesdays starting April 14.

One difficulty for handicapped persons has always been a lack of confidence in their own abilities. Put that person on horseback and they gain a new perspective. For some it is a new-found mobility, for others it is the challenge of controlling such a large and powerful animal, and the physical and emotional rewards appeal to all.

Several factors are important to making this program a success. The first is people, every session requires approximately 30 volunteer helpers — to lead horses, assist the students and help with many other jobs around the barn and class area. Secondly, we need financial support from our community. LCFERP is a non-profit, tax-exempt charitable organization. There is no fee for these classes, but students should arrange their own transportation to and from the farm.

If you would like more information about this program, would like to volunteer to help with the classes, or know of a person who would benefit from participating as a student, please contact Barb Lane, Program Director, at 616-347-3300. A note to potential students, classes fill up quickly, so please call as soon as possible.

Garden Club to arrange flowers

The Charlevoix Area Garden Club will meet Tuesday, April 14 at the home of Nancy Wood, 106 Oak St., Charlevoix. Co-hostesses are Nan Vandenberg and Esther Ringler. Phyllis Block will present the program on flower arranging. Members are asked to bring to the meeting three interesting branches, pencil and paper for notes, a paper bag to collect scraps and clippings, a bath towel or plastic cloth to work on, flower shears, a heavy frog or needlepoint holder and a low dish approximately eight to 10 or 12 inches in diameter.

The members are asked to contact Lois Lewis at 547-2949 if they are planning to go to the District Meeting in Benzonia April 24. The donation of $12 which will cover registration and lunch is asked to be sent to Lois by April 13. They are also to contact her about transportation arrangements. This is important for reservations.

At the club's last meeting Rod Cortright, County Extension Director from Boyne City gave an informative program about planting and care of plants trees and shrubs. He stressed that planting and caring for landscape plants can improve the appearance of your home grounds and add substantially to your home's value if properly maintained and landscaped.

Help for the grieving

A series of weekly sessions about recovering from grief will run from Monday, April 27 to May 25 at 7 p.m. in the Charlevoix Area Hospital Conference Room. The Grief Recovery program is to help anyone recovering from a loss.

Rev. Buzz Walls, retired minister of the Presbyterian Church and Charlevoix County Hospice spiritual advisor, will conduct the Grief Recovery sessions. Please call the Hospice office at 536-2842 to indicate your desire to participate in the free program.

County placed in new state house district

Supreme Court rejects Charlevoix proposal

Despite an appeal to the State Supreme Court, Charlevoix County has been put into a state house district with three northeastern Michigan counties. Under the state redistricting plan which was proposed and subsequently adopted despite local opposition, Charlevoix County will be in a state house district with Cheboygan, Presque Isle and Alpena counties.

Charlevoix County Republican Party Chairman John Haggard led a protest of the redistricting. Haggard contended that due to geographical differences, Charlevoix has interests which are much more in common with the central and western counties Charlevoix has been affiliated with in the past. Haggard had proposed an alternate plan which would have let Charlevoix continue to share representation with western and central Michigan counties and would have also met redistricting population requirements.

Don Smith, the chairman of the Charlevoix County commissioners, presented the alternative proposal at a State Supreme Court hearing, but the court chose not to adopt the alternative. The only changes the court made were in southern Michigan in response to complaints regarding minority representation.

Haggard said he was disappointed with the court's response to Charlevoix County's request.

"It's a sad situation when the Supreme Court failed to take into consideration northern Michigan and geographies and just took care of southern Michigan," he said.

Charlevoix, which is currently in the 103rd District and represented by Ralph Ostling of Roscommon will now be in the 106th District. Bev Bodem, R-Alpena, will be the incumbent for that district in the August primary election.

Haggard said that given the new district lines, his proposal for Ostling and Bodem will be to forget about district lines and jointly represent the two districts they serve.

BEACONS

OF BLESSINGS

by Rev. Philip Schairbaum

I've done some reading this Lenten season in a book that addresses the things that killed Jesus. It's a very interesting and convincing book. The chapter headings list the people involved in the crucifixion (the Pharisees, the Zealots, Judas, the Roman Soldiers, Pilate, the public, etc.) and then gives these subtitles for the parallel modern-day things that kill Jesus: privilege, nationalism, opportunism, secularism, militarism, acquiescence.

The idea is that all these things are still present in our age and in our society and are ways that Christ still gets crucified when we give our first loyalties to them. As Christians, we are called to give our first and highest loyalty to God in Christ, even when that means our life may become a little uncomfortable.

In a world which for many seems to be falling apart, each of us is called by God to do what we can to hold it together. It doesn't matter that often times we feel small and powerless. By God's grace our efforts will make a difference in the world. Sometimes the smallest, least noticed things turn into the greatest, most important of all. In the final analysis, being visibly successful is not what we Christians are primarily about. We're about faithfulness to the caring, loving tasks that God in Christ has put before us.

Jesus did everything He could to bring the world closer to God. And yet, as he stood at the gates of the city where he was to be crucified, he cried out:

"Jerusalem, Jerusalem, killing the prophets and stoning those who are sent to you! How often would I have gathered your children together as a hen gathers her brood under her wings, but you would not! (Luke 13:34)

Here's what one Bible commentator wrote about this passage:

"Jesus had been faithful to his mission to Jerusalem. He loved that city and its people. Jesus wept over Jerusalem. They were tears of pity and compassion, not anger. But one can cry only so much. One does one's best and that's all one can do. God doesn't ask for more than that."

As we commit ourselves over and over to being true to the best that is in us as Jesus did, so then we don't have to worry so much about what's going to happen next. After we have done what we can, we simply turn the rest over to God.

The dynamic here is one of working and then waiting, of trying our hardest and then trusting God, of putting our best efforts and then putting our efforts in God's hands.

(Rev. Philip Schairbaum is pastor of the First Congregational Church of Charlevoix. Beacons of Blessings is provided to the Courier by Schairbaum and other members of the Charlevoix Ministerial Association.)

CMU quintet to play

The newly formed CMU Alumni Club of Northern Michigan is pleased to announce an upcoming performance of the Powers Quintet in Petoskey. The alumni club is hosting the concert at the McCune Art Center on Thursday, April 9, 1992.

The Powers Quintet is made up of full-time faculty members of the music department at Central Michigan University. The group was formed in 1963 and has since performed hundreds of concerts throughout Michigan and the Upper Midwest. The group had also toured Japan performing before enthusiastic audiences there. The quintet has also released a recording titled "Quintet" by Jean Francaix and "Eight Etudes and a Fantasy" by Elliott Carter.

Members of the group describe their performances as having a great deal of variety. Although their concerts are generally "classical" in nature, they appeal to a very wide audience and will be appreciated by any music lover. The Powers Quintet includes these members: Joanna Cowan, Assistant Professor of Music and teacher of Flute; Roger Rehm, Professor of Oboe; Linda Bartley, Assistant Professor of Clarinet; MaryBeth Minnis, Assistant Professor of Bassoon; and Jack Saunders, Professor of Horn.

The concert will begin at 8 p.m. Thursday, April 9 at the McCune art Center on Mitchell Street in Petoskey. A reception will follow the performance at the art center. That will allow alumni from Central Michigan University and other guests the opportunity to mingle. The concert is open to everyone. Admission is $3 for adults; and $2 for students.

Halverson said travelling thieves come through the area periodically. Last year on Labor Day another local store was hit by them.

The police chief said he has contacted a law enforcement officer who specializes in crimes committed by travelling thieves and he hopes to have the expert visit the community sometime next month and present a seminar for local retailers.

Early in the morning hours April 3, a house on West Hurlbut was burglarized while the 79-year-old man who owned the home slept. Halverson said some cash and oboes were taken. He said that it's uncommon in this community for burglaries to be committed while someone is home.

Halverson said the incident points out the need for people to periodically review their house and vehicle security. The burglary is still under investigation. Anyone with information is asked to call the police at 547-3255.

In the third incident, someone pulled a change scam with a $100 bill at a local restaurant. The person ordered a soft drink, paid with a $100 bill, then said he didn't want the drink and wanted his money back. Ultimately the person left with both the $100 bill and the change which was previously made on the soft drink purchase. That incident is also under investigation.

Break out the bikes, spring is here

Don't let the icy winds and freezing temperatures fool you. It's officially spring, time to put away the skis and skates and get out your bicycles. Bicycling, always a favorite recreational activity, has become even more popular with the advent of cross training bikes and mountain bikes. Mike Hilligan, owner of Ace Hardware, explained that the new cross training bikes feature a mountain bike frame with upright handle bars, but have a slightly bigger wheels and narrower tires, making them the ideal bike for a refreshing ride around town. Mountain bikes work well on almost any terrain, and can take a rider up hills and down rugged roads.

As traffic increases in town, bike riders might want to head off the main roads and onto bike trails in the area. Bell's Bay and Mt. McSaub's North Point both offer off road biking trails.

Some avid bicyclers are still eagerly waiting for the proposed bike path between Charlevoix and Petoskey, which is supposed to be built on the old railroad bed. Fred Fetus, a member of the Charlevoix Emmett Trails Committee, said that the progress being made on that project is starting to look good. The committee was appointed by former State Senator Mitch Irwin and State Representative Pat Gagliardi two years ago, and committee members continue to work toward a goal of having a bike trail from Charlevoix all the way to Harbor Springs. The committee is trying to acquire the necessary easements from private landowners along the railroad bed. "We're working with the Little Traverse Conservancy on how to approach the property owners about this," Fetus said. "While the bulk of the bike trail will follow the railroad bed, Fetus explained that in some places the trail will have to run along the highway. "In some cases it's just impossible to go over private land," he said.

Since bike trails are not yet plentiful in this area, bikers will be doing a lot of riding on public roads in and around town. Hilligan recommends certain safety features for bicyclists. "Helmets are definitely a must," Hilligan said. Hilligan also recommends rear view mirrors for bicyclists. Rear view mirrors are available in two varieties. One rear view mirror mounts on the bike handlebar, and another mirror can be attached to a biker's helmet. The handlebar mounted mirrors are preferred by most cyclists. All bicyclists should remember that whatever their destination may be, they should stay off Bridge Street whenever possible, taking State Street on the South side or Dixon Avenue on the North side as alternate routes, using Bridge Street only to get over the bridge.

Golf tournament helps D.A.R.E.

Northwest Michigan law enforcement agencies are joining forces with Boyne Mountain Resort to host the third annual D.A.R.E. (Drug Abuse Resistance Education) benefit golf tournament on Friday, May 22. The event will take place on the Alpine 18-hole championship golf course, renowned for spectacular views of Deer Lake and wide and inviting fairways.

Players will compete in a four-person scramble format which is considered the best way to involve both novice and expert golfers. A $70 entry fee is required per competitor and advance registration is recommended. All tournament contestants will be eligible to compete for prizes in the following categories: Hole-in-one, closest-to-the-pin, longest drive and the team with the most putts.

Each year the event attracts sports celebrities to add excitement and a touch of prestige to the event. More than $13,500 was generated to support anti-substance abuse education for children in northern Michigan at last year's event.

An elegant prime rib buffet dinner will be served prior to the awards banquet at 4:30 p.m. in the Civic Center. Door prize donations and golf hole sponsorships are currently being sold through the Char-Em D.A.R.E. Association.

For further registration, volunteer or sponsorship information, contact Deborah Storm at the Charlevoix County Sheriff's Department at (616) 582-6212.

BUSINESS

Keeping people healthy takes a lot of work

(The following story is part of a series of stories about area businesses, business people and organizations being written for the Courier by Ralph McRae. McRae is a former mayor and city council member and currently is a member of the Charlevoix Industrial Committee.)

By Ralph McRae

District Health Department No. 3 is a four-county consortium, composed of Antrim, Charlevoix, Emmet and Otsego counties. It has its own board, made up of two county commissioners from each county. Dr. Brian L. Youngs is the Director, and Gerald M. Chase, the Administrator of the health department's four branches. Dr. Youngs is also the Director of Districts No. 2 and No. 4, each with four counties.

The headquarters and administrative center of District 3 is in Charlevoix and occupies its recently completed building at 220 W. Garfield. Before moving into its new building, the Charlevoix County branch of the department had several scattered offices. The new building allowed departments to be consolidated and services expanded.

Dist. 3 was founded 62 years ago, the first such agency in the state. It is a complex organization, but has a very low turnover in personnel. F. Dean Mikulski, with his 27 years of service, is the most senior member of the staff.

The district has five main sections. They are: Family Health Services, under the direction of Linda Yaroch; Adult and Aging Services, directed by Nancy Bottomly; Health Promotion and Prevention Services, directed Linda Yaroch is director of Family Health Services at the District 3 Health Department. Family Health Services is one of five main branches of the department.

Back Room features fine food and beautiful view

By Laurie Lounsbury

Laurie Gilbert and Ross Maxwell, owners of the Bridge Club, wanted to open their new Back Room restaurant quietly with a simple gathering for friends. When they opened the doors to The Back Room April 1, their friends showed up in droves, all eager to sample the deli delights offered in the casual new restaurant. A cheerful, well prepared staff smoothly handled the increasing numbers of people that filled the room overlooking Round Lake.

The Back Room, situated in the back of the 218 Bridge Street building, will be featuring a full menu of traditional kosher style deli meats and sandwiches. Gilbert explained that the idea of doing kosher style deli foods sprang from conversations with their accountant, Bob Hoffman, as they considered the possibilities of opening a restaurant in the back room of the building. Hoffman, a fan of great deli food, suggested they serve authentic deli foods.

Ross and Gilbert made many trips to Detroit with Hoffman, sampling their way through some of the finest deli restaurants the metropolitan area has to offer. The three of them found their way to the Star Bakery, the definitive bakery for deli bread. Gilbert and Maxwell learned how to double bake the bread, a necessary procedure for achieving the proper crispy breadcrust. The Back Room will feature Star Bakery breads on their deli sandwiches.

Steve Kenfick joined Gilbert and Maxwell as the new restaurant's kitchen manager, and he discovered that the business of preparing kosher by Carol Paxton; Environmental Health Services, directed by Mikulski; and Administrative and Financial Services, directed by Christie Vogelheim.

There are also two smaller units, Michigan Health Initiative, coordinated by Ann Smith and Emergency Medical, headed by consultant Cynthia Bulcher.

The vast majority of people working at the health department are female. Of the total staff of 116 people, 103 are women. Fifty of the women are registered nurses.

District 3 and other district health departments are not part of the Michigan Department of Public Health, however they do cooperate with each other and also work closely with the local branch of the Department of Social Services.

To fully report and explain all of the various duties and services of the health department would require several pages. To lightly mention or barely touch all the departments would be unfair. It would be more revealing to concentrate on one particular department. With that in mind, we will concentrate on the Family Health Services section.

style deli meats is really an art. Kenefick went to Detroit on three separate occasions to work with the owner of Deli Unique, learning the special techniques required for preparing deli meats. Dave Berg, a deli meat supplier out of Chicago, will be supplying the meat for The Back Room.

The Back Room has more to offer a customer than just a pleasing menu of deli sandwiches, homemade cheese blintzes, and a variety of salads served with homemade dressings. The Back Room offers a spectacular view of Round Lake Harbor from the airy room decorated in an outdoorsman motif, with wildlife prints, nostalgic hunting and fishing paintings, and some collectable fishing equipment.

Starting in May, the Back Room's menu will expand to offer more lunch and dinner entrees, including whitefish and more specialty salads. Deli-caessen platters and a full take out menu will be available to boaters and picnickers.

Kenefick plans to be serving breakfast in the restaurant by June 1, serving lox and bagels, grilled cinnamon toast, and grilled banana bread, along with the more traditional breakfast food.

SEE-North explores the Journey Home

SEE-North (Science and Environmental Education - North) invites all area third, fourth, and fifth grade students to participate in "The Journey Home." The center's last Saturday Science program of the season. This year's SEE-North Saturdays began with a fall program that explored the natural cycles and systems on our Spaceship Earth. The winter program examined the connections between the passengers traveling on Spaceship Earth. In "The Journey Home," the program will examine natural and unnatural changes that effect Earth's cycles and Earth's passengers. The adventure will involve students in out-door, hands-on activities and games that explore the effects of change, both man-made and natural. Join the SEE-North staff and other northern Michigan 3rd, 4th, and 5th graders to solve the "Border Dispute," to discover who is "On the Street Where You Live," to find out just what a "Cliff Hanger" is, and to discover the "Deadly Links."

"The Journey Home" will take place Saturday, April 25 from 9 a.m. until 3 p.m. the fee is $15. To obtain more information or to register for the event, contact SEE-North at (616) 536-8920.

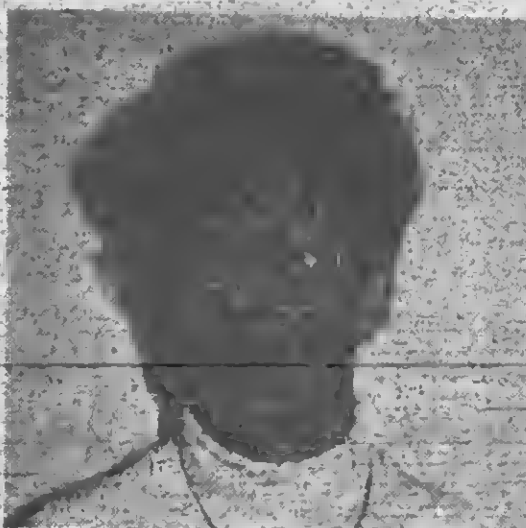

Spring in Michigan is unpredictable so participants must come dressed for the weather (warm and cold) and they must be prepared to be outside most of the day. Participants will also need to bring a sack lunch. Beverages will be provided by SEE-North.

SEE-North is located at the University of Michigan Biological Station on Douglas Lake. The Station's entrance is 5.5 miles east of Pellston, or 2.5 miles west of I-75 (Exit 322) on C-64 (Riggsville Road). Drivers should look for a wooden sign on the north side of the road marking the Station entrance. Follow the road to the auditorium on the lake shore.

Chuck Morrow (center) of Charlevoix County State Bank is among 24 graduates of the Class of 1992, Northern Michigan School of Banking. With Morrow are (left) Dr. Phillip Buekema, vice president for Academic Affairs, and Hal Dorf, director of the Northern Michigan School of Banking. The school, sponsored by the Michigan Bankers Association, Groups I and II, was founded in 1964 to meet the need for continuing education in banking. Students attend for two weeks in each of two consecutive years to further develop banking skills and learn new concepts in banking. More than 600 bankers from the Upper Peninsula and northern Lower Peninsula have been graduates of the program.

A 52-inch diameter blade spinning at 550 revolutions per minute quickly slices boards from logs.

...sawmills still humming

About half of the logs Hilton currently saws are ones he's cut himself. The rest are purchased from loggers or are logs that people bring in for a specific project. Cedar, poplar, ash and some pine are the most common species. There isn't much big pine or oak near Charlevoix, but within about 50 miles, you can get about whatever kind of wood you want.

There's plenty of timber in northern Michigan, Hilton explained. In fact, mills from downstate are buying logs from northern Michigan.

In terms of managing the area's timber, Charlevoix is kind of behind neighboring Antrim County which has a county forester.

Operating the sawmill is not without its drawbacks. Hilton said one of the biggest nuisances in the business is hardware left in trees by bowhunters. Climbing up on a pile of logs set off to one side of the yard, Hilton picked up a metal hook driven into a tree and remarked how something like that just raises havoc with a saw blade. He said that if he hits something like that, if he's lucky it will only break a few teeth on the blade. The teeth are inserts and can be replaced. If he's not lucky, the whole blade has to be resharpened.

The sawmill is also not without an element of danger. Asked about that, Hilton pointed to the blade and replied, "A guy told me once, if you ever get so you're not scared of that blade, it's time to quit."

While in the past, sawmills might have been working with huge virgin timber, that's not the case anymore. Hilton said that anymore, a 16-inch diameter log is considered fairly large. Most of the logs sawmills of today work with are second and third growth timber.

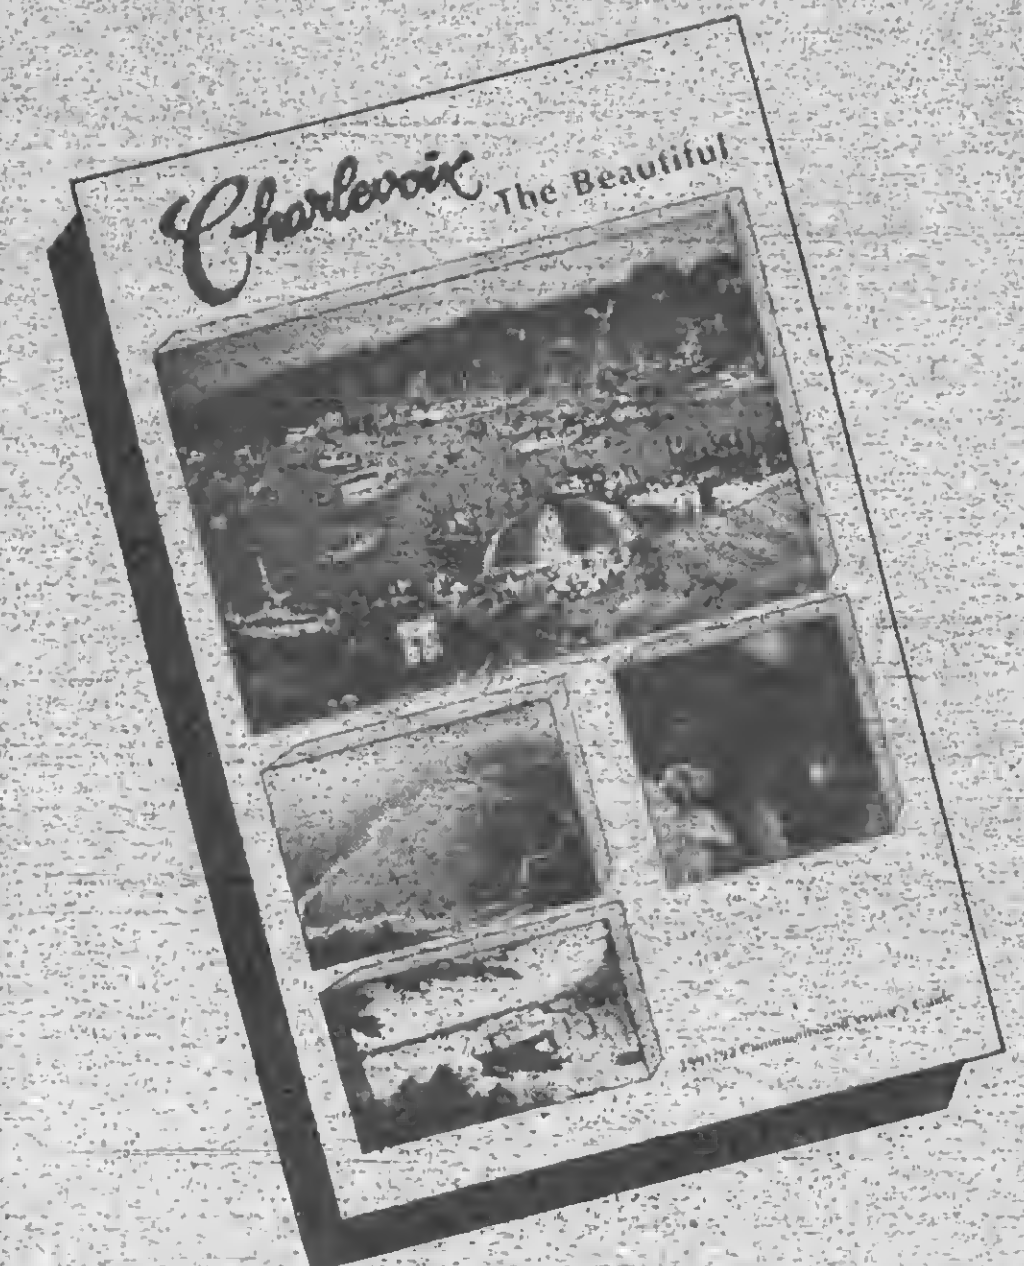

After the boards are cut, they fall onto a conveyor and roll away from the blade so that they can be safely stacked.

F.B.I. report concurs with State Police

Investigation finds no need for further action on allegations of police brutality

By L. Scott Swanson

A long-awaited Federal Bureau of Investigation (FBI) report has cleared Charlevoix City police officer Pete Shrift and the city police department of allegations of police brutality made by Arthur Reibel.

Shrift took Reibel into custody shortly after 2 a.m., Feb. 28, 1991. Reibel and Shrift offer different accounts of what occurred at that time.

Reibel has alleged that Shrift pulled into the driveway behind him at his Castle Farms home, came running up to him and hit him in the forehead above the eye with a heavy object, presumably a large flashlight.

Shrift has maintained that he began following Reibel when Reibel ran a stop light at the intersection of State and Antrim Streets. Reibel failed to pull over when Shrift signaled and consequently Shrift followed him to his home. After arriving at the home, Shrift took Reibel into custody and placed him in handcuffs. While escorting Reibel to the patrol car, he began struggling. Shrift took Reibel to the ground and in the scuffle Reibel hit his head on the ground or a snowbank, breaking his glasses and injuring himself.

Reibel was subsequently charged with fleeing and eluding, operating under the influence of liquor and attempted resisting and obstructing of a police officer. More than a year later, that case is still pending in District Court.

Shortly after the incident, Reibel began alleging police brutality. He appeared at a city council meeting with a draft of a federal lawsuit asking for millions of dollars in damages. In February of this year, he filed a suit in Federal Court against the City of Charlevoix seeking $44 million in compensation and damages. That case is also still pending.

Shortly after the incident, city police chief Dennis Halverson requested an investigation of Reibel's allegations by the Michigan State Police. The state police officer who conducted that investigation wrote that he found "no basis for his (Reibel's) allegations against officer Shrift."

Reibel contended that the State Police investigation could not be impartial because Halverson's father is a former director of the Michigan State Police. Reibel requested the FBI investigation.

A U.S. Department of Justice, Civil Rights Division letter issued April 1, 1992, and based upon the FBI investigation and report essentially concurred with the State Police findings. The letter, which was written to Halverson, said the Reibel matter should be closed and that the Justice Department has no intention of taking further action.

Probate Court adds cases while subtracting costs

By Laurie Lounsbury

For the third year in a row, the probate court has been under budget and has reduced court expenditures.

"We've worked hard, and maybe had some luck, too," Judge Frederick Mulhauser said as he and court officer David Bitler presented the court's year-end report to the Charlevoix County Board of Commissioners April 8.

Don Smith, Chairman of the Commissioners, commended Mulhauser by saying, "I don't know about the luck part, but I know you've worked really hard."

The probate court's financial report was particularly impressive in light of the fact that hearings in the court have risen from 137 hearings in 1987 to 1,122 hearings in 1991. When the commissioners questioned Bitler about the dramatic rise in hearings, Bitler speculated that maybe the crime rate is up due to a depressed economy, or perhaps po-

Students tune up for musical

Marina LaBlance leads second grade students through a rehearsal of the songs they will sing in this year's spring musical titled, "That's How The West Was Won." The musical will feature cowboy western songs and dances.

K-5 students prepare to sing their very West songs

By L. Scott Swanson

Last Thursday afternoon Charlevoix's second graders found themselves facing a miffed music teacher. Oh, oh! They'd brought in on themselves. They'd been goofing off while they were supposed to be learning to sway in unison to one of their songs for the annual spring musical. That temperamental performer stuff might play on Broadway or in Hollywood, but for the Elementary School Annual Spring Musical there'll be none of it.

Thursday afternoon, K-5 music teacher Marina LaBlance let her charges know that even though this year's musical has a Western theme, horsing around during rehearsal will not be tolerated. A good performance requires good rehearsals. Her point made, LaBlance returned to her piano, struck up a chord and quickly ran the students through a couple more songs before the class was dismissed.

This year's spring musical is scheduled for 7:30 p.m., April 23 at the high school gym. The theme will be "That's How The West Was Won."

After practice, LaBlance paused for a few moments to talk about this year's musical. "The kids are really excited," she said. She promptly added as an afterthought, "They're excited about this every year."

Despite the students' occasional frolics (perhaps the product of spring fever), LaBlance noted, "They're working hard and they're doing well."

As show time draws near, LaBlance, the students and the many other people enlisted to help make the show an annual gym-filling, capacity crowd, proud parent and grandparent drawing success are busily wrapping up preparations. Last Thursday, while LaBlance worked with the second graders in the elementary school gym, another group of older students practiced their songs in the music room. On the floor, in the hallway between the music room and art room a lady cut out cardboard heads for 100 stick horses which will be part of the performance. Meanwhile, inside the art room pieces of starched cord dried into miniature laniars.

Time flies. This will be the Elementary Spring Musicals 19th year. LaBlance recalls doing a show with a country western theme back in 1981, but this year's show will be different. This year's show is more

Among the songs featured in "That's How The West Was Sung" will be: Happy Trails; Don't Fence Me In; Home On The Range; Get Along Little Doggies; Ragtime Cowboy Joe; and I'm An Old Cowhand.

The show will also feature dances such as the Texas 2-Step; Virginia Reel; Square dancing; and a lasso dance.

peared in August, 1990. Her body was found in May of 1991 and 19-year-old Andrew Wynkoop was subsequently convicted of her murder. Her disappearance prompted a change in the community's attitude and awareness of juvenile crimes.

Mulhauser said in a later conversation that the bulk of the increase in hearings is juvenile cases. He explained that there are three filters a juvenile will pass through before ending up in court. The first filter is the possibility of not getting caught. The second filter is that a victim may choose not to prosecute. Even if the police are notified, they may choose not to make an arrest. The third filter is at the prosecutor's level, where he may decide not to prosecute. If people's attitudes change at any of these filtering levels, that will cause an increase in hearings.

Police Chief Dennis Halverson said that an increased awareness of juvenile problems, particularly unlawful blood alcohol level, has taken place over the last ten years. "Ten years ago, there might have been a lot more tolerance towards kids with unlawful blood alcohol levels and the kids would just be turned over to the parents," Halverson said. He also theorized that juvenile's mature more quickly in today's society, which increases the criminal end of juvenile problems in probate court.

Although the number of case hearings has gone up, the number of repeat offenders has dropped substantially. Mulhauser attributes the success of having fewer repeat offenders to the court's approach to treatment, and the county's non-secured detention home for juvenile offenders. The non-secured detention home was cited in the state of Michigan as being one of the most effective homes in the state, and will be promoted as a model. Juvenile offenders spend week-ends or vacations in the detention home; doing community service-work or watching instructional videos on drug abuse and building self-esteem. By serving time in the detention home, juveniles are able to stay in their own community and attend school while serving their time.

If we can, we like to keep the good parts of their lives going while dealing with the problem areas, Mulhauser explained.

The court's approach to treating juvenile offenders is to keep them in their home environment whenever possible, and teach the child or the whole family how to deal with the pressures of the real world when the court is out of their life, Mulhauser said.

Scouts make contribution

The Boy Scouts of Troop 11, Charlevoix, recently donated $45 to the Northwest Michigan Council for the Prevention of Child Abuse and Neglect. The Scouts have felt that they have been so well supported by area businesses and service organizations that they wanted to do a "Good Turn" for someone in the community. The Scouts ran a concession stand for the Cub Scouts during their annual Pinewood Derby competition. The Scouts voted to donate one-half of their profits to NWMPCAN.

OPINIONS

By Laurie Lounsbury A suitable test for missiles

Looks like the Patriot Missile is in danger of becoming an ex-patriot. The Patriot, our high-tech hero of Desert Storm, is under fire again, but this time the heat seeking accusations are coming from ex-Pentagon officials and Michigan Congressman John Conyers, among others.

It would appear that while the Patriot scored high marks from the T.V. viewers back home, (based on data from the Ooh...Aah...Fireworks Ratings Review) it was missing its mark more often than not over Saudi Arabia.

Two experts argued the Patriot's accuracy record on Ted Coppel's Nightline, while viewing network footage of the Patriot in action. The guy defending the Patriot would point to the screen and say, "See? There's the incoming Scud, and now there's the Patriot going up, and, see? Right there! That explosion is the interception!" Then the anti-Patriot guy would watch the same film footage and say, "That explosion is NOT from the Patriot interception! That explosion was from the trick exploding cigar we sent to Saddam Hussein with a note that said, 'Congratulations SADAM HUSSEIN...You have just won ten million dollars.'"

You would think that a government willing to spend millions on a Patriot Missile could have coughed up a few measly dollars for a device to test the accuracy of the missile, but they didn't.

So now we're going to have-on boy-a Senate Hearing to get to the bottom of this. Gee, guys, we all want answers to the questions surrounding the Patriot, but another senate hearing? What will that solve? We all know what the outcome will be.

First, some senator will stand up and accuse Reagan of stealing the idea for the Patriot, then he'll read page 92 of a George Lucas book. (He might be right about Reagan, but that's neither here nor there.) The hearings will drag on until some former prom queen gets coerced into testifying that she had relations with the Patriot. She'll get raked over the coals with probing questions until she finally admits that she was confused: it was a New England Patriot she knew, and as for his aim and accuracy, well, she never cared that much for football statistics. The hearings will really start to deteriorate when a Desert Storm Vet claims he found Patriot shrapnel on the top of his coke can.

So let's do away with another silly senate hearing. Let's give American viewers what they really want: A Patriot Scudperbowl game. Networks can get big beer companies to sponsor it, and they can run commercials featuring George Bush and Saddam across the bar from each other, catapulting beer cans and shouting, "Aim's Great! Less Killing!"

Then the network cameras will take us safely to the Scudperbowl game, which will probably be held in Tiger Stadium. A couple of exploding Scuds can't do much more harm to the old stadium than the usual sold out crowd of Tiger fans do on a typical Saturday.

We can watch as the pro-Patriot Senators and Pentagon boys line up on the Patriot goal line, cheering, "Block That Scud! Hey, Block That Scud!" Sure, it might be risky for them to be standing in the way of incoming Scuds if the Patriot misses, but for once, I'd like to see them put their own money where their mouth is, instead of rendering that privilege to the taxpayers' money. They could always wear protective vests lined with House Bank checks, so the Scuds would bounce right off them.

When the Scudperbowl draws to a close, we'd all know, by the rockers' red glare and bombs bursting in air, whether the Patriot has earned it's right to protect the public, or earned a home in the Banana Republic. And if we lose a few Senators and Congressmen in the process, well, that's one way to get around this term limitation business.

Durance to be honored at birthday celebration: 99th

Frances Durance will be the guest of honor at a party for her 99th birthday, Wednesday, April 15 at the First Congregational Church. During the party, which begins at 6:30 p.m., there will be a program recalling highlights of Durance's life. There will also be a birthday cake baked by chef Dave Phillips and decorated with items depicting events from Durance's life.

Durance grew up on the Durance Farm at the corner of Mercer and Waller Roads. During her childhood, that area of the country was known as the "Commons." Durance has lived on the farm all of her life, although for 30 years she went away during the school year to teach in other communities. She taught during the winters and in the summer would help her mother and brother Albin raise and sell strawberries on the farm.

The Durance farm is a Michigan Historical Centennial Farm, having been owned by the same family for more than 100 years. Durance is one of ten children of the late George Durance and Mary Isabel (Cook) Durance.

Durance has always been very active in the community. She is a lifelong member of the Congregational Church and has also belonged to the Eastern Star, Shrine and Rebekkah Lodges, the Retired Teachers' Association, the Charlevoix Historical Society and the County Farm Bureau.

For many years, the Durance farm has also operated as a hostel where travelers could spend the night for a small fee.

The program at the party will include several of Durance's favorite hymns and songs, two poems and viewing of a videotape about her life.

In an autobiographical sketch which Durance wrote for the party, she noted, "The last few years I spent in Florida were rather lonesome. I am thankful for the opportunity to be home this winter where I feel more secure."

Evening to feature fine food and entertainment

The Foreigner, a two-year comedy success on Broadway followed by long runs in Chicago and on the west coast, will be presented on Wednesday, April 29.

A "sneak preview" benefit for the Crooked Tree Arts Council's Endowment Fund, the performance will be at the Virginia McCune Arts Center in Petoskey. Produced by the Little Traverse Civic Theater, area cast members include Beth Swawbridge from Charlevoix, Dawn Johnson of East Jordan and J.P. Haneckow of Bay Shore.

Benefit-goers can further enjoy their evening as at 7 p.m., Wes Westhoven, proprietor of The Rowe Inn at Ellsworth, along with Matt Bugera of the New York

Restaurant and Harbor Springs Gourmet, will jointly host dessert wine-tasting and finger desserts prior to the 8:30 p.m. performance.

Special playgoing pre-fixed dinner arrangements have been made by the Arts Council with the Park Garden Cafe and Stafford's Perry Hotel, both within easy walking distance of the theater.

Little Traverse Civic Theater has a long term lease for the use of the Ross Stoakes Theater to stage their yearly series of plays, and when they offered to present The Foreigner's pre-run performance, the Arts Council decided to have it in memory of Stoakes who died recently. He was a founder of the theater group and an active participant until the last few years.

Tickets which cover the pre-theater tastings are $20 each and can be obtained by calling the Virginia McCune Arts Center in Petoskey, 347-4337, or may be obtained locally at The Appletree on Bridge Street, 547-2962 or by calling Edith Gilbert, 547-6443.

Greensky Hill Church planning to build new fellowship hall

By L. Scott Swanson

Work groups will be coming from throughout the Midwest this summer to help build a new fellowship hall for the Greensky Hill Methodist Church. Rev. Benton Heisler said 12 different work teams will work on the hall. Two of the teams are from Indiana, one is from Wisconsin and another is from Ohio. The remainder are from Michigan. Heisler noted that one of the work teams has an average age of almost 70.

Greensky Hill was a church founded by missionary Peter Greensky for Native Americans (American Indians) in the 1840s. Approximately three-fourths of the members of the present day church are Native Americans.

The new fellowship hall will be a 70' by 80' building with seating capacity for up to 175 people. There will be dividers so that it can be separated into three classrooms. An eight-foot deep covered porch will provide an additional outdoor area where people can sit and talk. The projected cost, including both material and labor, for the building is $250,000.

In addition to serving for routine church functions, the hall will also be used for camp meetings and retreats.

Heisler said it may also be used for other Native American programs such as satellite health clinics.

The present fellowship hall is not winterized. There is water available, but due to inadequate heat the water must be shut off from November to April each year. The new hall will be heated and insulated.

Anyone wishing to assist with the project may contact Heisler at 547-2654.

Charlevoix High School Symphonic Band to perform spring concert

Members of the Charlevoix High School Symphonic Band will perform in a spring concert Tuesday evening, April 21 at 8 p.m. in the Charlevoix High School Gym.

The 85 band students will entertain the audience with a variety of instrumental music selections. The concert will open with Manhattan Beach, one of John Philip Sousa's most well known marches. The group will also play the three selections which it will perform later in the week at the State High School Band and Orchestra Festival in Romulus.

Flutist Jake Parath and clarinetist Chris Cupp will play instrumental solos which brought them first division ratings at the State solo and ensemble festival in Big Rapids.

To close the program, the band will join forces with students from the performing arts department to present highlights from Andrew Lloyd Webber's hit musical "Cats".

Band director Terry Isenbarger promises that the concert will provide an hour of entertainment which will present the band at its best, in a culmination of the work which has been accomplished over the past school year. An admission charge of $2 per person or $5 per family will be collected at the door.

Habitat for Humanity breaks ground for home

The Northwest Michigan Habitat For Humanity broke ground for their first home Thursday, April 9 in Boyne City. The Northwest Michigan group encompasses Charlevoix and Emmet Counties. It was formed approximately two years ago.

The goal of Habitat for Humanity is to help people get into a home of their own. The Habitat group selects a family and helps that family fund and construct a new home. The family participates in construction, or contributes time in some other way, and pays for the home through a low down payment and an interest-free 20-year mortgage. The money paid on the mortgage is put back into a revolving fund which helps fund additional homes.

"It's not a hand-out. It's a hand-up," explained Habitat public relations officer Maxine Hough. The home will be at the corner of Arthur and Jefferson Streets on a lot donated by the city of Boyne City. The building trades class from Boyne City High School is going to help build the home.

Dan and Sherri Robinson head the family chosen for the first home. They have three young children. The home is a fairly simple, straight forward design. Town and Country Homes worked with the Robinsons to design the home. If things go well, the home will be completed by the end of this summer.

The Habitat chapter will build its second home somewhere in Emmet County and then will be looking for another lot to build on in Charlevoix County.

The Charlevoix Ministerial Association is working with the Salvation Army and the Manna Project to found a soup kitchen in Charlevoix. At the organizational meeting for the project were (from left): Duane Nelson - Church of the Nazarene, Capt. David Hugger - Salvation Army, Jan Boss - Community Reformed Church, Budd Tallberg - Manna Project, Larry Grooters - Community Reformed Church, Benton Heisler - United Methodist Church, Joe Johnston - Assembly of God Church, Cliff Molnar - Assembly of God Church, Lander Carter - Episcopal Church, Bruce Hamilton - Church of God, Robert Zeerup - East Upright Church of God, Phil Schairbaum - Congregational Church.

Ministers organize soup kitchen

A soup kitchen will open in Charlevoix early next month. The kitchen, which will operate out of the United Methodist Church, will provide free lunches to needy people Monday through Friday. The kitchen will be a joint effort of the Charlevoix Ministerial Association, Salvation Army and the Manna project.

"It's really a trial effort to see if there are the kind of people (in this area) that need this kind of assistance," Rev. Benton Heisler of the United Methodist Church explained.

A similar kitchen is co-sponsored by Manna and the Salvation Army in Potosky. That kitchen served 500 meals last month.

Heisler said that although the Ministerial Association is coordinating the kitchen and the United Methodist Church is serving as a host site, he hopes this will be a community effort. People who wish to help by contributing time, food or funding are asked to contact Heisler at 547-2654.

The soup kitchen will be open from 11:30 a.m. to 1 p.m. Monday through Friday once it begins operation next month.

Track team takes second

Charlevoix's boys' track team opened their season with a second place finish in a five-team meet at Traverse City April 8.

The host team dominated the meet, compiling 129 points. The Rayders placed second with 31 points. Rounding out the field were: Suttons Bay with 30 points; Traverse City St. Francis with 27 and Benzie Central with 27.

Charlevoix took two first places. Matt Smith, a junior, won the 1600 meter run in a time of 4:40 while the 1600 meter relay team of Lance Emig, Luke LaBlance, Mike Sevinski and Jason Frabis broke the tape in a time of 3:37.7.

Charlevoix's 400 meter relay team was running first, but was disqualified due to a fouled up handoff.

In addition to running a stint on the winning relay team, Sevinski, a senior, also placed second in the 300 hurdles in 43.4 and third in the 110 high hurdles in a time of 16.4.

Other top finishers for the Rayders were:

Emig, second in the 100 yard dash in a time of 11.3.

Jason VanLo, fourth in the 100 yard dash in a time of 11.9.

Zach Pajtas, Erik Hess, Denny Jenksi and Mike Bush, fourth in the 3200 yard relay in a time of 9:04.

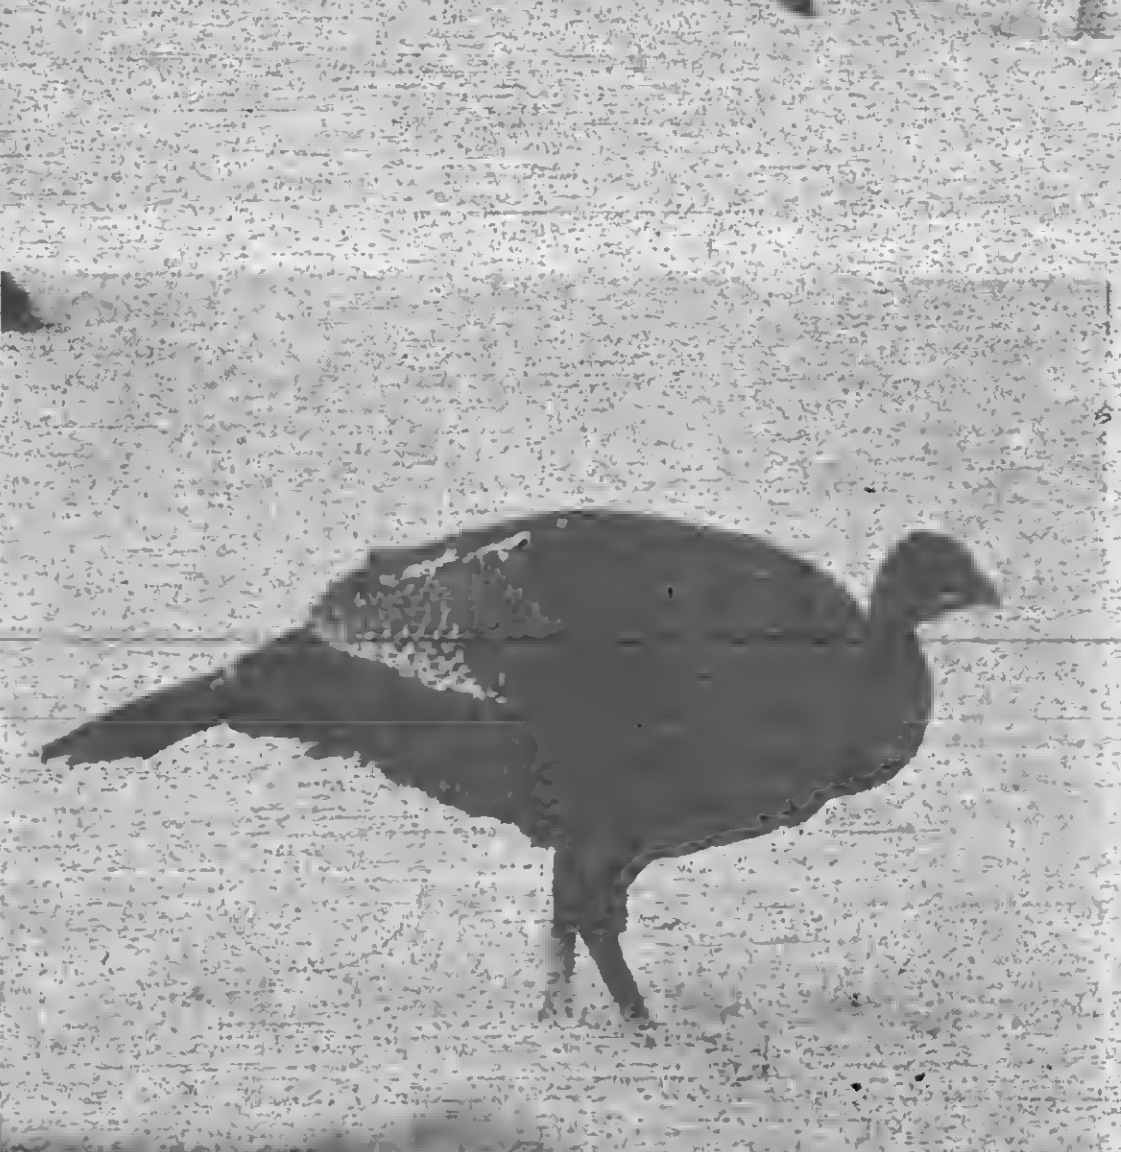

Brian Coolman, fourth in the 200 meter dash in a time of 24.5.

Emig, Coolman, Jason Frabis and Chris Pease, fifth in the 800 meter relay in a time of 1:44.

Charlevoix will have its first home meet April 22. The Rayders will be hosting county rivals Boyne City and East Jordan.

With the onset of spring, turkeys have come out of the swamps and have been turning up all over Charlevoix. This batch was photographed in the backyard of a home on Barnard Road. Other flocks have also been seen near the Charlevoix Area Hospital and in the yards of homes right in town on the north-side.

Petting Farm brings small children and small farm animals together

Debby and Chuck McDermott bought an historic old farm outside of East Jordan two years ago, and moved in with a few dogs and a cat. Now they have a total of 80 animals on the farm, including horses, sheep, ducks, geese, chickens, bunnies, goats, and ponies. "It's all for the benefit of the kids," Debby McDermott said.

Debby McDermott, motivated by a love of animals and a love of kids, started a petting farm at their 121-year old farm last year. Her daughter, Jamie Riddle, had acquired two lambs for the 4H fair, and the McDermotts decided to buy back the female. The purchase of a ram led to the breeding of sheep, and this spring the McDermotts have 19 new lambs. All of the other animals that the McDermotts have acquired are solely for the purpose of children's enjoyment at the petting farm.

"I love kids, and I love my animals, and this is a way to do both," Debby McDermott said.

McDermott, a petite blonde dressed in jeans and a blue denim work shirt, strolls through the farm yard, rubbing her animals behind the ears and talking to them in a soft voice. Even the shetland pony, which was wild and unapproachable when she acquired it, now nuzzles her gently in response to her touch. Indian Runner Ducks waddle past in formation, and a pair of geese honk at a car passing by. "Those are my watch geese," she says. McDermott stops to check up on a sleepy goat, and then help a nervous ewe search for her missing lamb. McDermott is clearly quite comfortable with her variety of animals, which receive a lot of attention and affection from her. Frequent handling is necessary to keep the animals tame enough for eager little children's hands.

The McDermotts haven't always been in the animal farming business. They owned and operated the Snickerdoodle Bank in East Jordan, where they baked a variety of upscale muffins and other baked goods. "East Jordan just wasn't ready for the Snickerdoodle Bank," Debby McDermott said of the business. When the bakery business failed, the McDermotts were about to head back downstate when they saw the For Sale sign on the side of M-32. They followed the sign to the old Pesceck farm, called Stone Hedge because of the stone wall running around the border, and when Debby saw the huge maple standing between the farmhouse and the barns, she knew she'd found a home. "I said to myself, 'that's my maple tree, just like the one I grew up with.'"

McDermott always wanted to own horses, so she bought a few horses for riding and showing. A Belgian work horse named Christa pulls kids on hay rides and wows them with her tremendous size and affectionate nature.

All of McDermott's plans for new animals are geared with children in mind. Last year, she had two regular bunnies for the petting farm, but they quickly grew to be twenty pounds each and unmanageable. This year she'll be buying dwarf bunnies, which will remain small and docile. McDermott would like to buy a small buffalo to round out the animal menagerie, but the $750 price tag for a buffalo has been a deterrent.

McDermott plans to open the petting farm May 1, and the hours will be 10am to 4pm, Sunday through Tuesday. There is no admission charge, but donations are welcome. Debby McDermott explained that donations help to cover the cost of veterinary bills and the 2,000 bales of hay they buy annually to feed the animals.

School groups and church groups are encouraged to visit the farm. A gift shop is housed in the old chicken coop, featuring local artists' wares and crafts.

They honk, quack and cackle constantly. They often appear to lack any sense of mission or direction. And they seem to learn very little from one day to the next. Yet, this is not a group of politicians on the campaign trail. This is a family of ducks. They can be seen at the Stone Hedge Petting Farm near East Jordan.

Sure, he's the black sheep of the family, but he's cute just the same. And he's also friendly. The sheep is one of several small animals on a petting farm near East Jordan.

Good health leads to good living

(The following story is one in a series of stories being written for the Courier by Ralph McRae. McRae is a former mayor and city council member and is currently a member of the Charlevoix Industrial Development Committee. This week's story concerns District Health Department #3. It is a continuation of a story from last week. Last week's story was an overview of the entire Health Department operation. This week's story focuses on one particular branch, Family Health Services, of that operation.)

By Ralph McRae

Linda Yaroch is the director of the Family Health Services branch of District Health Department #3. Under her direction Family Health Services provides and promotes programs to improve the lives of mothers, infants and young children. Assisting her is a professional staff of public health nurses, social workers, nutritionists, hearing and vision technicians etc. Yaroch has been with the Health Department for 15 years, the past two as director.

A special program, called WIC (Women, infants and children) promotes healthy women, infants and children by offering better nutrition through supplemental food coupons, good only for certain food items. The program also includes health counseling and immunizations.

Families are also served through medical health screening which provides health screening and counseling for people under 21 years old who qualify for Medicaid. The comprehensive health physical exam checks hearing, vision, weight, growth and development and includes lab tests and counseling.

The Family Health program is very involved in working toward the goal of seeing that all children receive proper immunizations. In 1991, District 3 administered almost 15,000 vaccines through 7,800 appointments - almost three times more than were given by the private sector in the area.

Family Health Services is also involved with helping crippled children. It gives assistance to handicapped and chronically ill children. This assistance includes diagnostic and medical evaluation, counseling, home care, special equipment and clinics. School service scoliosis screening checks sixth, seventh and eighth grade students to detect potential problems with curvature of the spine.

Even before children are born, the health department works with many mothers to provide quality prenatal care. The department is also involved with nursing, nutrition, social work services and child birth classes.

Recently, District 3 has added for young Medicaid patients a Dental Health Service office, located at 601 Bridge Street in East Jordan. Dr. Harry Suckert and two assistants provide full dental services.

One of the guiding philosophies of Family Health Services is that prevention campaigns should be structured to allow for paying less now rather than paying more later. An example of that philosophy is the Woman's Care program which is providing women who are 40 or older with pelvic exams, pap tests, breast examinations and, if needed, mammography screening. The cost to the woman for all of these services ranges between nothing and $100, depending upon ability to pay. Although there are 18,000 women older than 40 in the area covered by District 3, the department has funding for only 12,500. District 3 has worked with area physicians and made arrangements so that all area women will have access to the program.

Care for children is always a main focal point for the District 3 Health Department, but in April it is given special emphasis. The following facts are offered as an indication of some of Michigan's child care problems:

-One fifth of Michigan children are not covered by health insurance.

-In 1990, more than 50,000 cases of child abuse were recorded in Michigan.

-In 1990, there were more than 16,000 children in foster care homes in Michigan.

-Forty percent of Michigan infants who are less than two years old lack one or more recommended immunizations.

-On average, 56 children are born in Michigan each day to mothers who are still children themselves.

-Every day in Michigan, 27 babies are born to mothers who never had prenatal care.

-In 1990, 1,638 infants died before reaching their first birthday. Michigan has one of the worst infant mortality rates in the nation.

Retailers to host Easter Egg Hunt

The Retail Promotions Committee of the Chamber of Commerce will host an Easter Egg Hunt this Saturday, April 18. The hunt will be broken into two sections. Children between the ages of three and five will begin hunting for eggs in East Park at 2 p.m. The eggs will contain prizes. Children who are six, seven and eight years old will begin hunting for eggs in Harbor-side and Memorial Parks (the parks near the Chamber building) at 2:30 p.m.

There will be a grand prize awarded in each category to the child who finds the egg marked

"Special."

The Weathervane will be offering a special Easter Egg Hunt lunch before the event, and the Easter Bunny will be making an appearance there. No hunting license is required, but hunters should bring their own baskets.

Saturday Festival to promote Earth Summit

Saturday, April 18 from 1 p.m. at the Petoskey Waterfront there will be a celebration and educational event sponsored by Don't Waste Michigan and Ecowatch. The event will focus on options for a sustainable energy future and learning about the upcoming Earth Summit which will take place June 1 and 2 in Rio de Janeiro, Brazil.

The Earth Summit will be attended by delegations from 166 nations, as well as dozens of international agencies and hundreds of non-governmental agencies. Some of the issues to be addressed are: atmosphere, biodiversity, forestry, biotechnology, oceans, toxic chemicals, hazardous wastes, trade, poverty, overpopulation, health and education.

"The primary goal of the Summit will be to lay the foundation for a global partnership between developing and more industrialized countries, based on mutual need and common interests, to ensure the future of the planet," states Maurice Strong, Secretary-General of the conference. "We need to find a viable and equitable balance between environment and development."

The festival Saturday in Petoskey will offer two actions people can take to support the Earth Summit. A letter to President Bush asking him to attend the Summit and a postcard with a leaf on it which will make its way to the Summit to let participants know that people care and want action.

There will also be two video presentations Saturday. One is called "One Child, One Voice." The second is called "Personal Effects."

There will also be live music, games, storytelling, a display of solar toys, educational displays and popcorn.

Lake levels rising

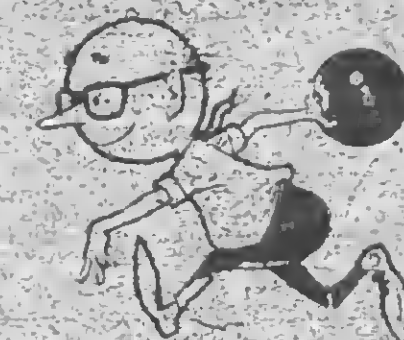

With the exception of the Lake Superior region, the overall Great Lakes basin received above average precipitation during March. The 30-day outlook published by the National Weather Service projects light to moderate precipitation for the Great Lakes region for the month of April.

The forecast, published in the monthly Bulletin of Lake Levels for the Great Lakes, shows Lakes Superior and Michigan-Huron slightly below and above their respective long-term average levels during the next six months and Lake Ontario approaching its long-term average level in May. Lakes St. Clair and Erie are anticipated to continue to be above their long-term average levels throughout the forecast period.

A more detailed summary of Lakes Michigan-Huron water levels follows. All elevations are referenced to International Great Lakes Datum 1985.

Lakes Michigan-Huron at the end of March were at elevation 578.74 feet (176.40 meters) above the mean water level at Rimouski, Quebec, or 15 inches (38 cm.) above Chart Datum. This was about the same as what it was a year ago, and about the same as one month ago. The March monthly mean level of 578.72 feet (176.39 meters) was about 1 inch (3 cm.) above the long-term average for March. The lakes, however, remained about 29 inches (74 cm.) below their all-time high March monthly mean level, which was recorded in 1986. The forecast shows that at the end of April, the level of Lakes Michigan-Huron will be about 4 inches (10 cm.) above what it was at the end of March. The lakes are expected to continue their seasonal rise into July. The water level in September 1992, is expected to be about 2 inches (5 cm.) above long-term average for that month, and about 8 inches (20 cm.) above what it was in 1991.

City Council selects new fire chief

Doug Carver of Petoskey has been selected by the city council as the new Charlevoix Fire Chief. Carver, who is currently with the Resort - Bear Creek Fire Department was chosen from among three candidates who interviewed for the job earlier this month.

Prior to Monday evening's council decision members of the audience expressed dismay that the job did not go to a local person and also questioned what the new fire chief's starting salary would be. Two men currently employed as city firemen had turned in applications and were among those selected for interviews, but dropped out of the process prior to interviewing. Mayor Dave Novotny said that a salary for the new fire chief has not been determined and will have to be negotiated.

Hiring a new fire chief has been an issue of contention for the past several months. The position became vacant when the current fire chief John Martin was hired as the city's street department superintendent.

With the impending transition in fire chief's, city manager Mike Wiesner hired a consulting firm to review the fire department's manager structure and recommend improvements. The consulting firm recommended combining the management structure of the city police and fire departments and have them administered by a public safety director. Over the objections of volunteer firemen, the city council adopted that recommendation, but subsequently reversed that decision.

Currently the fire department employs on a full time basis a chief and two firemen. They work rotating 24-hour shifts. The remainder of the fire department is made up of volunteers who are paid on a per fire basis.

After reversing the public safety director decision, the council adopted a new structure in which there will be four full time fire department employees - a chief and three firemen. The three firemen will work rotating 24-hour shifts. The new chief will work from 8 a.m. to 5 p.m. Monday through Friday or fill in on 24 shifts when one of the three firemen is on vacation.

After finalizing Carver's hiring, the council will begin the process of hiring an additional fireman.

This house slowly rolled through town Monday morning. It was moved from its former location on Clinton Street out to the Boyne City Road. It had to be moved to make room for the new First State Bank building. The house was purchased and moved by Ed Gregory.

Private Property

Home plate, pitcher's mound and third base will be purchased

By L. Scott Swanson

Tiger Stadium can crumble to dust and to folks in this neck of the woods it's no big deal. But if there's a problem with Bud McDonough Memorial Field on Beaver Island, then that's something which just has to be addressed.

How many locals ever get to play ball at Tiger Stadium? Darn few! But every August in conjunction with the Island homecoming those Islanders host a softball tournament and Charlevoix and Island teams get together and have a grand old time.

The problem was that even though people have been playing ball at Bud McDonough Memorial Field for years, not all of the field was public property. Three separate pieces of property, and that's not counting an old road right of way in short center field, merge in a bizarre configuration at the softball field.

"This is kind of a landmark for the Island to own the ballfield and not be trespassing when you round third base."

Lisabeth Clapham, St. James Township Supervisor

The township bought the outfield in 1986. They also have a lifetime lease on first base. But pending finalization of a recent agreement, homeplate, pitcher's mound and third base are still on private property.

St. James and Peaine Townships recently struck an agreement with Eric Martin which will allow the townships to buy the property which encompasses home plate, pitcher's mound and third base. When the purchase is completed, the entire ballfield will finally formally be in public hands.

"This is kind of a landmark for the Island to own the ballfield and not be trespassing when you round third base," explained St. James Township Supervisor Lisabeth Clapham.

County board leans toward coordinator

By Laurie Lounsbury

When the Charlevoix County Commissioners discussed the cost of hiring a county administrator, Chairman Don Smith said, "Somebody's going to have to pay the fiddler, and it could come out of us."

Commissioners met April 15 to consider the advantages and drawbacks of having a county administrator. When the conversation shifted to an administrator's duties and the cost of the position, Smith asked the other Commissioners, "Are we talking about relinquishing some of our fringes and per diems to pay for an administrator?" Commissioners Hostler and Hufford quickly said they would be willing to give up their per diems and fringe benefits in order to pay for an administrator.

Smith calculated that $71,800 was budgeted for the commissioners in 1991, with another $25,000 allotted to their benefit plans, for a total of $97,800. If the commissioners relinquished their benefit plans and some of the per diems they are paid for committee meetings, there would be a savings of about $40,500.

"Between fewer per diems and giving up health fringes, we could afford about 50 percent of a county administrator," Smith said. A fact finding committee had projected the cost of having an administrator would be around $90,000.

What remains to be determined is whether an administrator would save the county enough money elsewhere to justify the position. A lot of time was spent discussing potential savings.

Hufford outlined key areas of responsibility for an administrator:

Acting as personnel officer and fiscal officer, along with handling data processing and central purchasing, were some of the job duties Hufford mentioned.

Hufford said a county administrator would also be helpful in setting annual budgets for the county; because an administrator could spend time reviewing the actual needs of the county's different departments. "Budgets shouldn't be based on what you spent last year, they should be based on what you need next year," Hufford said.

The title of the new position was also discussed, and commissioners agreed that the title, "County Coordinator" would most accurately describe the position.

Jane Brannan, the Charlevoix County Clerk, presently acts as fiscal officer for the county. An administrator performing the same job would considerably alter Brannan's position. When Smith raised the question of Brannan's job, Hufford answered, "Jane does an excellent job, but as an elected official, Jane works for the voters, she doesn't work for the board."

Smith said functions of the board of commissioners and functions of the clerk's office are the two major areas of change with a coordinator. He added that an accurate job description should be written to avoid problems down the road.

Smith summarized the commissioners' position on the coordinator's job by saying, "We're leaning toward it. We have to make a decision on the fiscal officer, make a decision on the job description, and make a decision on how to finance it, with the biggest cut coming from the Commissioners."

The property problem at the ball field is one the township has known about for several years. According to Clapham, Martin is planning to plat the property he owns in the area so that buildings can be constructed. Those plans prompted the resolution of the ball field situation.

"The fact is we really could have lost it," she noted.

Although the property is in St. James Township, Peaine Township agreed to pick up half of the cost. Township officials and Martin agreed on a price of $15,000 for the property which, if it weren't going to be part of a ball field, would amount to about two nice building lots.

"Truthfully, it's a really good price for what we're getting," Clapham remarked.

Now that the field is entirely in public hands, the township has some improvements planned. As time and money permit, the township would like to put up lights, turn the field so that hitters and fielders don't have to look directly into the sun, add bathrooms and a septic field, add a drinking fountain and build dugouts with some benches.

A new Rayder bus was recently delivered to the Charlevoix schools. The bus has reclining seats and reading lights to allow students and chaperones to relax or study during long trips.

New Rayder bus arrives

Varsity athletes and senior citizens will be riding in style and comfort on their upcoming outings, thanks to the new Rayder bus, which arrived last week. The white, grey and maroon bus has been custom outfitted for the purposes it will serve over the next 20 years. The bus has air conditioning, and each reclining seat has its own reading light, which will allow students to read or sleep on long trips.

It also has a price tag of $106,804. The bulk of that money, $83,000 was paid with money left from a temporary school transportation millage. The remainder is being covered by the sale of some old buses and a contribution from the Sports Boosters.

The new Rayder bus will be used by the varsity athletic teams, the high school band, performing arts, and the senior citizen groups.

"This bus is built a lot better. It should run up to 200,000 or 300,000 miles without any problems. The old bus never would have done that," said Gordon Russell, the school's transportation supervisor.

Special features on the new Rayder bus also include extra large luggage bins under the bus, and overhead luggage racks inside, a stereo system with inside and outside speakers, a public address system that works inside and out, electrically controlled rear view mirrors, an extra six feet in length, and four more seats than the old Rayder bus. The additional length and extra width will pose a challenge for the bus drivers. Russell said that the new bus requires more room to turn, and is not as forgiving as regular school buses. When drivers are selected for the new bus, they will have to go out and take some practice runs with the bus before heading out on a trip with it.

Russell has a few minor details to finish up on the bus before it will be ready for its first road trip. Emergency equipment needs to be mounted, and C.B. radios need to be installed. Russell hopes to have the bus ready for the high school band's trip to Detroit in a few weeks.

EDITH

by EDITH GILBERT

Reading about the Hoffa movie being made on location in Detroit recently, brings back a flood of vivid memories.

The scene I recall best takes place in the spacious dining room in the large family home on Arden Park and Woodward Ave., where three generations lived amicably together — usually.

During the early '40s my late father-in-law, Samuel T. Gilbert, was given an honorary post and appointed Detroit Street Railway Commissioner for the D.S.R. by the then mayor, Ed Jeffries. Gilbert was instructed to run the streetcar system just like the successful cigar corporations he had headed for many years, and at first he tried.

One evening, S.T. as we called him, came home for dinner and asked me, "Who wrote Aida?"

"Why, Verdi," I replied. "Why do you ask?"

"Because that's one of the questions they ask on the test for street car conductors!" he answered in a huff. "Now in order to attract black conductors and bus drivers to replace the men who have gone off to war, this slanted test has to be changed." And it was, followed by a smooth transition, without any rioting, when black drivers were hired for the first time and put on new inner city routes.

Things didn't go that well on the labor front, however. The Detroit Railway System was represented by the Teamsters Union. The head of the local union that S.T. had to deal with was Jimmy Hoffa. During the war years the unions, of course, were in the driver's seat. Workers had to get to work to produce war materials. Factory workers were making good money and Hoffa wanted part of the action for his drivers. The threat of a strike to the transportation system was unthinkable! Detroit, "the arsenal of democracy" had to function! Night after night S.T. came home in a rage railing against Hoffa and the g.d.. unions! It didn't help matters when I came to the unions' defense as the soup passed. I described the sweat shops, and the terrible working conditions during the industrial revolution, where men, women and children toiled long hours in dreary factories. I had no sympathy nor understanding for what S.T. was going through. No one had ever heard of Jimmy Hoffa before this. I do know one evening S.T. came home and announced without joy during the meal that the strike was settled.

"Good!" I cried. "How did you do it?"

"Under the table," is all he said. It was a hollow victory for S.T. but his threatened strike launched Hoffa's dramatic career within the union.

For the rest of us the dinner hour drifted back into the usual orderly routine. When are we opening the cottage on Park Avenue this year? Who is driving which car up north? Have you heard they are teaching a Red Cross Life Saving class at the Charlevoix City Hall? Did you know the Beach Hotel will be open early season?

Editorial

A deserving recipient

First question for Mary Ann Chew - How did you feel about receiving an award naming you as this area's teacher of the year? (See related story and photo on page 6.)

Her reply - "I felt very humble because there are so many people more deserving."

A correction on behalf of anyone who has had enough contact with the Charlevoix K-5 School to have even an inkling as to what goes on there - She may feel humble if she wishes, but nobody, nobody is any more deserving of an award for teaching in a northern Michigan classroom than Mary Ann Chew.

The following is cited as an example of her dedication.

The Courier needed to set up an interview with Mary Ann Chew about some school project she is involved in. Over the phone, she indicated she would be glad to do the interview, but her class time is very busy. It is devoted to her fourth grade students. She often doesn't refer to her students as "students." More often she refers to them as "My kids..." or "My children..."

So with her class time devoted to her students, when could the interview be done? Mary Ann Chew usually is at school well before classes actually begin. Would it be possible, she asked, to do the interview then?

Would it be possible? When someone works that hard and is that dedicated to helping the children of your community, it's possible. That type of dedication makes a lot of things possible.

Mary Ann Chew has been teaching fourth grade at the Charlevoix Elementary School for 25 years. Last week, in conjunction with the honor she received, she took home a little plaque. It's a nice little plaque. But as far as being something to take home and keep with her, it is nothing compared to what hundreds of her children have been able to take home from her classroom and keep with them.

A compilation of awards, praises and good deeds by Charlevoix people.

Navy Airman Recruit Michael G. Stoneham, son of Ronald D. and Marla K. Stoneham of Charlevoix, recently returned aboard the aircraft carrier USS Dwight D. Eisenhower, homeported in Norfolk, VA, following a six-month deployment.

Stoneham participated in operations in the Atlantic Ocean, Mediterranean Sea, Red Sea and Persian Gulf, as well as in the NATO Exercise Teamwork 92 in the Norwegian Sea.

Teamwork 92, designed to improve the professionalism and effectiveness of NATO force while operating in the realistic environment of the North Atlantic and coastal waters of Norway, included maritime, air, amphibious and field training exercises.

Other exercises conducted by the crew include "Eager Mace," a 10-day, joint amphibious landing exercise in Kuwait, and "Sandstorm," a joint effort with the U.S. Air Force, which included simulated air strikes and tested the carrier's ability to retaliate against air attacks.

Stoneham visited the cities of Dubai, United Arab Emirates, and Palma, Spain.

The 1990 graduate of Charlevoix High School joined the Navy in June 1991.

Jill Austin, a senior at DePauw University from Charlevoix, is a volunteer this semester for the university's Sports Night project, a university service program for children in the DePauw area.

The program is designed to provide elementary, junior and high school children with alternative recreational activity. Volunteers participate and organize a variety of sports for the children.

The Sports Night program is operated by DePauw's Community Services, which also operates a number of other public service volunteer projects.

In October, DePauw University's community service program was named by President Bush as the nation's 592nd point of light. Students participated in a total of 150,000 hours of community service last year and helped in community efforts both in the local region, and abroad in Third World countries.

Austin, a 1988 graduate of Charlevoix High School, is the daughter of Pauline Austin of Charlevoix.

(Submitted by Bern Cannan, Charlevoix Lions Publicity Chairman.)

Once again the Ellsworth and our Charlevoix Lions are sharing in the refurbishing of their respective club paraphernalia -- to wit -- the Club bells, gavels and the Ellsworth stone lion.

This year it began at our late March Lions Club noon meeting when two teachers from the Charlevoix Elementary School had just finished a presentation about the school's youth science program.

One of these teachers -- a member of the Ellsworth Lions Club -- noticed that our Club Bell was badly tarnished. So -- as a friendly surprise and in the true spirit of our Lions' motto "WE SERVE" -- she took our bell with her to clean it up for us.

Not to be outdone by this generous act, the Charlevoix Lions have reciprocated in like manner and have taken the Ellsworth Lions Club bell and gavel for restorative work. And -- noticing that the large gilded stone lion gracing the Ellsworth Lions' meeting place was in poor condition -- it was also picked up for restoration.

Bill Dreyer, the Charlevoix Club's King Lion has announced that his Club's restorative handiwork on the Ellsworth club's symbolic mascot can be observed for a limited time at Stafford's Weather-vane Restaurant, the current home for the Charlevoix Lions. As of this date, plans for the ceremonial exchange of club properties are in the early formative stage.

Charlevoix hospital to host health day

"Hometown Healthy" is the theme of a community service program for Michigan's small and rural hospitals. Charlevoix Area Hospital will take part in the program by opening its doors for a health day at the hospital Monday, May 11, during National Hospital Week.

It will be a day for a personal spring health check-up for area residents. There will be free pulse oximeter tests, hearing screening tests, and blood pressure checks. For $5 a total cholesterol test will be available.

The slogan for 'Hometown Healthy' is neighbors caring for neighbors," says Richard Krueger, hospital administrator. "This reinforces our commitment to provide community education and wellness programs, to help make people aware of healthy living habits and the importance of regular examinations."

The American Cancer Society will be present to provide free information on cancer prevention and the hospital will offer free colon cancer test kits.

Mary Ann Chew receives award

Fortunately, when we speak of a teacher broadening young minds, we're speaking in the abstract. If young minds expanded in a concrete way, there could be no walls in Mary Ann Chew's classroom.

"I try to stretch their (fourth grade students') imagination," said Chew, who last week was named Educator of the Year by the Delta Kappa Gamma Society of Women Educators.

The award is given to one Northern Michigan educator each year. This is the thirteenth year that it has been given. The first winner was Chew's sister. Chew is the third Charlevoix teacher to win the award. Last year middle school math teacher Kay Fiedorek won the award. High school French teacher Yvonne Wendt is also a former winner.

Chew said she felt very humble when she was told she had won the award. She was nominated by the local education association. The association had no difficulty finding letters of support for the nomination.

One of those letters of support was from Betty M. Henne, a well-respected high school English teacher in her own right, whose three sons all were students of Chew's.

"I have not met in my 22 years of teaching a more dedicated conscientious teacher than Mary Ann. As a mother, I will always be grateful to her, and as a teacher, I highly respect her," Henne wrote.

Henne was not the only one of Chew's alumni-parents endorsing her for the award. John Frey is the parent of five students who were in Chew's class room. He is also outgoing president of the Charlevoix Schools Enrichment Foundation. Chew served as teacher representative to the Board of Trustees for the enrichment foundation.

In his letter of support for Chew's nomination, he wrote, "Mary Ann has such a wonderful caring educational talent which she gives to each student and professional academic which she gives to Head Start program to register students

The Northwest Michigan Human Services Agency, Inc. is announcing recruitment activities for enrollment in the Petoskey, Pellston, Boyne Valley and Ironton (serving Charlevoix & East Jordan) Head Start Programs for the school year 1992-93. Phone 347-9070 to make an appointment for registration.

Head Start is a comprehensive, interdisciplinary preschool program primarily for children three to five years of age whose families have a limited income.

The basic goal of the program is to encourage well-rounded development. This is done through the teaching of health, language, self-help, large and small muscle, socialization, and cognitive (thinking) skills. Teachers, community professionals, support staff, and parents (whose participation is extremely important) work together to accomplish this goal. Through the involvement of parents, the program aims at enhancing the parent's role as the prime educator of their children. This program is carried out through center and home-based activities.

To qualify for Head Start, you must be within the Federal Income Poverty Guidelines listed below:

Household size: 2, $9,190; 3, $11,570; 4, $13,950; 5, $16,330; 6, $18,710; for each additional person add $2,380.

While this is an income-eligible program, families whose income exceeds these guidelines may still qualify if their child has a special need documented by a professional (doctor, psychologist, teacher, social worker) who makes a referral to the program. Ten percent of the enrolled families are over the income guidelines.

4H Fashion show planned

The Charlevoix County 4H program will host a "Spring Splash of Fashion" luncheon and fashion show from noon to 2 p.m., Saturday, April 25 at One Water Street in Boyne City.

4H members will be modeling their own creations as well as spring fashions from stores in East Jordan, Boyne City, Boyne Falls and Charlevoix.

...teacher award

her colleagues... Mary Ann's infectious enthusiasm for her profession and her students creates a natural nomination for Educator of the Year.

Last week after the award was announced, some of Chew's fourth grade students brought in cards congratulating her. They found time to make those cards between reading and writing assignments. Her students do one book report each week. "Right now, my children are on their 28th book this year," she said last week.

Chew's class is no cakewalk. She challenges her students and expects the most from them.

"First of all, I have high expectations for all of my students. I don't believe in slow kids," she says with conviction.

She says one of the strengths of Charlevoix's K-5 school is that the staff has high expectations for students and tries to provide enrichment activities which give students room to excel. She offered the school science fair as an example of an activity where each student can perform at their own level.

Prior to coming to Charlevoix in 1966, Chew taught for four years in Flint and for one year in Grand Blanc. How does she stay motivated after 30 years of teaching? On an academic level, she continues to take classes. Last year she took a science instruction class through Michigan State University. This year she is taking a math class through Central Michigan University.

On a personal level, she doesn't have a problem maintaining her enthusiasm.

"It doesn't take a lot of motivation when you like to work with kids," she noted.

The Promise

This past weekend, members of the Charlevoix Assembly of God Church staged several performances of The Promise, a musical drama depicting the life of Christ. The public was invited to see the performances. As one member of the church noted, so many people from the Assembly Church are involved in the performance, that it has to be open to the public, otherwise there would be nobody to watch the show.

BEACONS

by PASTOR DUANE NELSON

Around my home as a child, Easter was just about as exciting as Christmas. I couldn't wait to see what was in my Easter basket. Every Easter, which I can remember as a child, offered up an Easter basket at the foot of my bed. In fact, my wife still prepares an Easter basket for me every year. I love Easter!

But what happens after Easter? You know what I mean. What happens when the Easter candy, toys and eggs are done? What happens when those wonderful church services are over? What happens when the excitement of Christ's resurrection is diminished? What happens after Easter?

For the Christian, Easter should never be over but should be a daily occurrence in lives and hearts. That "resurrection" living should create our lives, sustain our lives and renew our lives. So what happens to us after Easter?

The Holy spirit reminds us through Paul's letter to the Romans, "Never be lacking in zeal, but keep your spiritual fervor, serving the Lord" (12:11, NIV). I believe this is "resurrection" living. In its context, it declares that we, who have sought forgiveness for our sins and given everything we are and have to God with no strings attached with a lifestyle pleasing to Him (Romans 12:1-2), should never lack in our zeal for the Lord. We should, however, always be resurrected or alive to and for God.

So what happens to us after Easter? Do we stay alive to and for God? Or do we watch our zeal and all those Easter commitments fade away? No matter what the case, there is always hope with Christ!

Take some time right now and recommit yourself to a holy God. Ask Him to give you that "resurrected" living - that never lacking zeal for the Lord. Let today be the turning point in your relationship with Christ. From now until eternity, "keep your spiritual fervor, serving the Lord." So tell me what is going to happen to you after this Easter.

(Rev. Duane Nelson is pastor of the Charlevoix Church of the Nazarene. Beacons of Blessings is provided to the Courier by Nelson and other members of the Charlevoix Ministerial Association.)

It was a slow and deliberate process, but a house was moved from Clinton Street out to Boyne City Road Monday morning. Ed Gregory purchased the house from First State Bank. The bank needed to have the house moved to make room for their new building and parking area. Bill Ochs, a former owner of the house, was present to watch the move. He said he was born in the house's living room June 1, 1922. While watching the house being moved, people jokingly asked Ochs if the move meant he would have to have his birth certificate revised.

Junior Grange hosts pancake supper

Barnard Junior Grange, an organization established to build leadership skills, patriotism, and community service in children ages 5-14, is sponsoring an "ALL-YOU-CAN-EAT" pancake supper at the Grange hall on Barnard Road Wednesday, April 22 from 5 p.m. to 7:30 p.m. Junior members will be serving the dinners.

Last year, Junior members, lead by Ginger Stevens, participated in Charlevoix's annual Petunia planting, visited Clay's Cabin and a horse farm, hosted swimming, Halloween, and Christmas parties. They also attended Junior Grange camp. Barnard Juniors took the top three places in the camp talent contest, earning them a special invitation to perform at the Michigan State Grange Session in Flint last October.

Program initiated to help pre-schoolers

Nine area school districts - Ellsworth, East Jordan, Boyne City, Boyne Falls, Central Lake, Charlevoix, Littlefield, Pellston and Petoskey - offer a program of preschool services where home visitors come to the home and help parents and children prepare for school.

The districts have formed a consortium known as the Be-Four School Project. The consortium is funded by Section 36 of the State School Aid Act and a grant from the Frey Foundation. It is operated by the Charlevoix-Emmet Intermediate School District in each of the local districts.

Eligible families with three and four-year-old children participate in a variety of activities aimed at helping parents help their children get ready for school. Each participating family receives individualized home visits, participates in workshops and field trips, and has opportunities to visit the local elementary school to meet teachers, the principal and explore the environment. Four-year-olds even visit kindergarten when class is in session to see what school is all about. There is no charge to participating families and income is not an eligibility factor. Interested parents should contact the Charlevoix-Emmet Intermediate School District at 547-9947 for a round-up appointment. The round-up schedule is: Boyne City, May 8; Boyne Falls, April 22; Central Lake, April 24; Charlevoix, May 27; East Jordan, May 21 and 28; Littlefield, May 15; Pellston, May 1; Petoskey, May 19.

Senior Citizen dinner

The Charlevoix Senior Citizen Center will be hosting a roast beef dinner from 5 p.m. to 7 p.m. Tuesday, April 28 to raise money to pay off center building improvements. The cost of the dinner is $5 for adults, $2.50 for children between five and 12 years old, and free for children less than five years old. The Senior Citizens' hall is located at the corner of Carpenter and Norwood Roads.

Boys' track: Looking to go from good to better

By L. Scott Swanson

Last year the Charlevoix boys' track team won the conference and regional meets. This year the team could be even better according to coach Hal Evans.

In addition to having several returning seniors to provide leadership Evans said, "We've got the greatest numbers we've had in years. There are a lot of new kids out this year."

The team's backbone is expected to be its relay teams, Evans says. Charlevoix will field a team that is strong in all of the relay events.

Among the individuals Evans expects to see do well in the running events are: Matt Smith, Mike Sevanski, Luke LaBlance, Lance Emig, Jason VanLoo and Brian Coolman. Smith a junior and Sevanski and LaBlance, both seniors, were integral performers for the state championship cross country team. Despite their distance background, all three comfortably step down to middle distance for the track season. Sevanski also is an exceptional hurdler. Emig, VanLoo and Coolman do their best work in the speed events.

The field events are going to be interesting to watch this season. The Rayders have lots of people, but few proven performers. Bruce Waha, a former field events coach at Michigan State University, is working with the Rayder field athletes. Evans said Waha and the field athletes are working hard, it's just a matter of waiting to see who performs well as the season progresses.

In addition to his own team, Evans expects Traverse City St. Francis, Elk Rapids and Kalkaska to compete for the conference title. Elk Rapids has a traditionally strong running program and Evans said this year's Kalkaska boys' track team appears to be loaded with talent.

Girls' track team looks to defend conference title

Charlevoix's girls' track team won the conference title last year and is returning many members of last year's team. Coach Ken Plude says that with 40 girls out for track this spring he has the personnel to be competitive in virtually every event.

For openers the Rayders return a school record setting mile relay team made up of Aimee Livingston, Nicole Moore, Kristen Ranville and Michelle Keem.

Sheila Siegwart and sophomore Jaimie Doan are expected to fare well in the hurdles and Doan is also one of the area's better long jumpers.

Carrie Wakulat, another sophomore, set the school record in discus last year and is expected to lead the team again in that event this season.

In the team's first meet this year, Char Cunningham tossed the shot a foot farther than anybody on the team was able to throw it last year.

Plude said his distance runners are somewhat inexperienced with the exception of Elsa Conlan, yet they could do well. Gina Webster, a senior is out for track for the first time this year and has been running well. Trina Holm, a sophomore, is also expected to be competitive.

Plude credited sophomore Becky Bragg for starting the season well conditioned. Consequently, she has been running very well.

Although Plude is comfortable with the team's prospects in the middle distance races, he's concerned about the team's abilities in the short sprints. Moore is a sprinter, but she's also an important person on some relay teams.

If Charlevoix is to defend their conference title, Plude said they likely will have to withstand a challenge from Kalkaska.

Softball team splits with Cheboygan and Harbor Springs

Saturday, Charlevoix's softball team opened with an 11-1 win over Cheboygan and lost the second game 15-7. Monday, the Rayders tied Harbor Springs 11-11, before winning game two 18-11.

Tammy Holm pitched a three-hit game in the Cheboygan win. She walked only one batter as the Rayder defense stifled the visiting Chiefs.

The Rayders collected three runs in the first inning which as things turned out was enough for the win. Charlevoix collected nine hits in the game. Mary Jane Grunch had a triple and a single. Angelina Doan had a double. Waja Wujcik, Liz Grunch, Melissa Murray, Melissa Eaton, Lori Darrah and Holm each had singles in the game.

In game two, the Rayder's defense fell apart in the third inning and gave up eight runs. Holm took the pitching loss.

Charlevoix mustered only five hits in the game. Wujcik had two while Liz Grunch, Melissa Murray and Christy Siwarga each contributed one.

Monday the Rayders had to rally for two runs in the sixth inning just to scrape out a tie in the opening game against Harbor Springs. The teams played an extra inning, but neither team scored and under a new league rule the game was declared a tie.

Wujcik, a freshman, had an excellent game at the plate, collecting three hits including a triple. Murray also had three hits, all singles. Holm and Stacy Tilton each had two singles for Charlevoix while Tara Morrow and Liz Grunch each tripled.

Holm got the pitching indecision for the Rayders.

Baseball team hammered by Chiefs, sweep Harbor Springs

After an ugly day against Cheboygan Saturday, the Rayder baseball team righted itself and swept Harbor Springs Monday.

The Rayders never got started Saturday, while the visiting Chiefs started with a bang. In game one, which the Chiefs won 13-4, Cheboygan scored four times in the first inning and hit a total of six home runs in the game. Charlevoix could muster only three hits in the game, two by Ken Olinger and a

Mary Jane Grunch pitched the second game for the Rayders. She got the pitching win with six strikeouts against four walks.

In game two, Holm rather than pitching the ball across the plate, ran across it. She tripled, singled and scored five runs.

Liz Grunch had three singles in the game while Murray doubled and singled. Darrah bunted twice for singles.

two-run home run by Brandon Webb. Travis Blissett took the pitching loss.

In the second game, Cheboygan scored eight times in the first inning on their way to a 16-0 win. Charlevoix got only one hit in the game, a single by Luke Porath.

Monday, the Rayders had better luck while hosting Harbor Springs. Charlevoix trailed in both games, but rallied for a 7-6 win in game one and a 9-5 win in game two.

In the first game, Charlevoix came up with two runs in the bottom of the final inning, winning the game when Porath doubled to bring home David Skeel.

In addition to his single in the final inning, Skeel had a double earlier in the game. Brandon Webb also had a double and a single while Randy Williams doubles and Travis Blissett also had a single. Don Jess got the pitching win in relief of Skeel who had relieved starter Jody McGlinch.

In the second game, Charlevoix trailed 5-2 before scoring four runs in the fourth inning and then holding on for the win.

Olinger had a triple and a single in the game while Jess and McGlinch each had a double and a single. Porath and Skeel each doubled while Williams had a single.

Blissett got the pitching win with Olinger mopping up in relief.

Tammy Holm pitched a three hit game to open the season Saturday against Cheboygan.

Rayder tennis team beats Boyne City

Charlevoix's tennis team opened its home season on a good note Monday with a 5-2 win over Boyne City.

Coach Eric Lundieigen said of his team's performance, "It's early in the season, but we're improving. We've got a ways to go, but we're going to be competitive."

Charlevoix results from the meet were:

One singles: Chris Pair won 6-3, 7-5. Two singles: Jeff Joy won 4-6, 6-2, 6-1. Three singles: Seth Arnold lost 6-0, 6-2. Four singles: Anne Lovell lost 7-6, 1-6, 6-3.

One doubles: Corey Crain and Mike Dobulis won 6-2, 4-6, 6-4. Two doubles: Dave Dobulis and Dan Avery won 6-3, 6-1. Three doubles: Jasper Sweeney and Dave Kenwabiske won 5-7, 6-2, 6-2.

Winning exhibition matches for Charlevoix were: Jaime Crain, Gerri Lovell, John Paul Erber, Edith Pair, Greg Holmes, Tim Terry and Chris Matye.

Stacy Tilton swings at a pitch during the second game of Saturday's double header with Cheboygan. Charlevoix split with Cheboygan and swept Harbor Springs Monday.

Nancy Bottomley

Health agency helps elderly

(The following story is one in a series of stories about area industries and agencies being written for the Courier by Ralph McRae. McRae is a former mayor and council member and currently is a member of the Charlevoix Industrial Development Committee.)

By Ralph McRae

People entering the reception room of the District 3 Health Department would do well to read the special tribute on the wall. The tribute, which was given to the department by the area's state senator and representatives on the department's 60th anniversary, defines some of the goals and purposes of the health department. Some of the goals are "to prevent disease, prolong life, to serve young mothers, infants, the elderly and all sick people. To give caring, comprehensive and equal treatment to those who need restorative health services."

Last week's story focused on the Family Health Services branch of the health department. This week the focus will be on the Adult Health Services branch which is directed by Nancy Bottomley, M.S., R.N.

Adult Health Services is primarily involved with the care of people who are more than 60 years of age. Many of these people require some type of health assistance which can be administered in their home.

Although Adult Health Services does sponsor certain clinics for the elderly, such as foot, influenza or hypertension clinics, the majority of the agency's efforts are directed toward in-home health care.

A few years ago, hospital patients often stayed in the hospital for 10 to 14 days while recovering from surgery. Hospital stays are much shorter now, generally six days or less. Many surgical procedures are even done on a same day checkout or overnight basis. One of the main reasons for these shorter stays is reducing the cost of health care.

Given shorter hospital stays, the need for skilled nursing care in the home has increased. This is the type of service provided by Adult Health Services.

When Bottomley's office is notified of an elderly person needing in-home health care, the first step is for a registered nurse to visit the home. The registered nurse will assess the patient's needs and determine the appropriate agency to provide for these needs. Before the nurse's evaluation visit, the patient's physician must consent in writing to beginning the home care program.

...elderly receive health care in their own homes

After the evaluation visit, nurses and medical aids will come to the patient's home to give the necessary treatment. Sometimes treatment may include contracted specialists who have assorted therapy qualifications.

The home care staff provides a multi item package of home care service. It is all geared toward treating, correcting or stabilizing the patient's health problems.

In addition to treating health problems, the health care workers also attempt to address the causes of the problems and promote healthier living habits.

The cost for the health care visits are all accounted accurately. Based on sliding fees, typically less than one percent of the cost is paid by the client. Another three percent is paid by private insurance policies. As much as seven percent is covered by Medicaid while the majority of the cost is paid by Medicare.

Most of the activities of Adult Health Services occur in Charlevoix, Antrim and Emmet Counties. Additional staffing will be required to do more with the program in Osego County.

Last year 4,400 people were directly worked with in one way or another by someone on the Adult Health Services staff. Through clinics and home health care visits, 25,000 personal contacts were made by Bottomley and her staff.

Bottomley is assisted by two field supervisors, Charlotte Lundy, R.N., B.A. and Evelyn Richardson, R.N.C., B.S.N. Twenty-seven members of the staff are R.N.s - some only working part time. In addition to the in-house staff, there are several agencies and technical individuals who work on a contract basis.

Recent hospital discharge is not necessary to be eligible for home care service. Anyone can phone District 3 Health Department offices for a health care assessment.

Special attention can be administered to the terminally ill patient.

Adult Health Services can be divided into two main categories: the first is Health Promotion and Disease Prevention; the second is Disease and Disability Control.

Before 1985, generalized Public Health Nurses provided most home care services. In the past several years, aided by State and Federal incentives, Adult Home Care projects have taken on a much larger health care role.

Bank acquisition to end 87 years of competition

By L. Scott Swanson

Two Charlevoix banks which have been competitors for 87 years will soon join forces. CB Financial Corporation of Jackson, Michigan, which earlier this year completed the acquisition of Charlevoix County State Bank has announced a plan to acquire First State Bank of Charlevoix.

In late December of 1991, Tom Duke, the majority share holder in First State Bank announced that he was putting his interest in the bank on the market. At the time, he said his reason for selling the bank is simply that he is 63 years old and that it is time for a change in ownership. Duke and a group of partners purchased majority interest in the bank in 1967. CB Financial will be buying all of the stock in the bank if the acquisition goes through as proposed.

First State Bank President Lou Hollow said the amount of interest shown by prospective bank purchasers was flattering. He said a dozen prospective buyers took a close look at the bank and almost 80 percent of those made written offers. The top group of prospective buyers, among them CB Financial, was taken through the building.

"CB came and looked and liked what they saw," Hollow said. "That's a Both Hollow and Charlevoix County State Bank President Francis Flanders expressed enthusiasm for the merger.

"We're excited about the thing (the acquisition)," Flanders said. "It's going to be really good for our people (in terms of) staff opportunities and good for the area. It's like we got energized."

Flanders explained that as of yet the acquisition has not been officially finalized. There are several paperwork and regulatory hurdles and hoops to jump over and through before the merger of operations can begin.

Flanders said CB Financial hopes to have those aspects of Charlevoix band receives top rating at state festival

Charlevoix's High School Symphonic Band brought home a top rating from the state band and orchestra festival Saturday and was greeted with a victory parade.

The band traveled to the Detroit area this past weekend to participate in the state high school band and orchestra festival at Romulus High School. The band performed Friday evening and their concert was judged by adjudicators from Spring Arbor College, Manchester College, Asbury College, and Ot sego High School. The three concert selections which the ensemble played were: Raging Thunder March, by David Shaffar; Short Prelude With Perspectives, by John Caruso; and Chorale and Shaker Dance, by John Zdechlik. The group received an overall first division (one) rating, the highest rating attainable at the festival, and it was the only class C band at the festival site to receive a one.

Band director Terry Isenbarger had special praise for the band's performance in the sight reading portion of the festival, where students were required to play two musical selections which they had never seen before.

The band stayed overnight in a motel in Southfield, returning home Saturday afternoon to a "victory parade" through Charlevoix, complete with police escort and fire engines. Isenbarger expressed his thanks to the organizers of the welcoming parade, which he felt added to the students' sense of accomplishment.

Seminar will focus on traveling bands of thieves

One of Michigan's leading experts on the subject of traveling criminals will be the featured speaker at a seminar for local retailers. The seminar, which is being cosponsored by the Charlevoix Chamber of Commerce, Charlevoix Retailers Association and Charlevoix City Police Department, is being offered to help Charlevoix County retailers avoid falling victim to the seams of traveling criminal bands.

The seminar was prompted by the recent robbery of a Charlevoix store. Some members of the group of criminals distracted the storekeeper while another member of their group took money from a safe. The group then quickly fled town in a car which had no license plates. City police chief Dennis Halverson said local retailers have been victimized in similar incidents at least three times in the past three years.

"Definitely, we're on these guys map of places to stop," Halverson noted.

After the most recent robbery, Halverson contacted the Michigan State Police and asked for the name of an expert to bring to town to inform local business people of ways to stop traveling criminals. State Police told Halverson that Sgt. Chris Johnson of the Wayne Police Department is considered Michigan's top expert in the area of traveling criminals.

With the help of the Chamber and Retail Association, Halverson has arranged to have Johnson conduct a seminar from 8 a.m. to 11 a.m., Thursday, May 7 in the City Hall Council Room. The cost to attend the seminar is $2 per person or $5 per business. All Charlevoix County retailers are invited to attend. Organizers of the event are encouraging store owners to not only attend themselves, but also to bring their employees. Those who plan to attend are asked to preregister by calling the Chamber of Commerce at 547-2101.

the merger completed by the end of this year.

Aside from how the consolidated bank will function operationally, another question is where it will function from a building standpoint.

Charlevoix County State Bank is in a historic building at the corner of Clinton and Bridge Streets, the center of Charlevoix's business district. First State Bank is preparing to move into a beautiful new 15,000 square foot building at the southwest corner of Clinton and State Streets. First State Bank presently occupies a 7,000 square foot building which was constructed in 1969. Flanders said he's not sure whether the merged bank will be in one office or two.

Aside from the main offices, the two banks also have several branch offices throughout the area. First State Bank has branch offices in Boyne City and on Beaver Island. Charlevoix County State Bank has branch offices on M-66 in Charlevoix as well as in Eastport, East Jordan and Ellsworth.

"It's perfect because it doesn't overlap in that no (branch) offices are across the street from each other," Flanders explained.

In separate phone interviews Hollow and Flanders both said consolidation creates an opportunity for expanded banking services.

"It makes a $110 million bank, by total assets. That's a heck of a nice size," Hollow noted. He explained that currently there are people who need to borrow more money than either bank can afford to loan by itself.

Flanders said expansion of services may help minimize any staffing cuts caused by the proposed merger. Presently Charlevoix County State Bank employs about 40 people and First State Bank about 20 people.

If there are staffing cuts, the bank will try to be gentle, Flanders said. He noted that some retraining may take place so the banks can continue to utilize employees in a meaningful capacity.

In recent weeks, the area's banking business has been very brisk. Flanders noted. He said that in the past month, Charlevoix County State Bank closed 22 mortgage loans and there's a backlog.

Even with the merger of Charlevoix County State Bank and First State Bank, there will still be competition in the local banking community. First of America, Heritage National and the Charlevoix Credit Union all have offices in Charlevoix.

As for the end of competition between Charlevoix County State Bank and First State Bank, Hollow said, "We still haven't gotten used to that. We've got to think that one over." He said First State Bank was founded 87 years ago to "go get those guys on the corner." He added that Charlevoix County State Bank has had great leaders and that has made the competition interesting.

Double the people and double the money. More than twice as many people raised more than twice as much money in this year's Charlevoix WalkAmerica as compared to last year's. Approximately 110 people walked and raised more than $10,000 Saturday.

Local walk raises $10,000

More than 110 Charlevoix people went the distance for America's babies Saturday raising $10,000 in the March of Dimes WalkAmerica. Funds raised will support the West Michigan Chapter March of Dimes and its Campaign for Healthier Babies.

While some participants walked individually or with family and friends, many others walked on teams from their company, school or club. Individuals and teams challenged each other to walk further, raise more money or sign up more sponsors for healthier babies.

LEXALITE was the top team overall for the day, followed by the team from CHARLEVOIX COUNTY STATE BANK, followed by the team from VITAL OPTIONS. The top team per capita came from SUBWAY, followed by the team from CHARLEVOIX COUNTY STATE BANK, followed by the team from LEXALITE. The top adult walker was JAMES SOULIERE the top youth walker was MANDI MEGGISON.

The March of Dimes is a national voluntary health agency whose mission is to improve the health of babies by preventing birth defects.

Question:
How do you feel about Charlevoix County hiring a county administrator?

Clarence Rabach

A: Clarence Rabach-
"Government is like a cancer- it keeps growing and growing and this (a county administrator) is just another growth."

Chris Papineau

A: Chris Papineau-
"If the person in the position can show a savings to the county equal to the amount of his salary and benefits, then it might be worthwhile."

Gary Kanoff

A: Gary Kanoff-
"If the commissioners feel they need someone, and are willing to cut their wages and benefits to create the position, then it sounds like it's warranted."

Editorial

Administrator proposal has merit

Charlevoix County Commissioners should be encouraged to go forward with a plan to hire a county administrator. Hiring a county administrator can and should lead to more effective decision making and through more effective decision making, better handling of finances.

Not that this position should be construed as an attack upon the present decision making or financial efforts of county commissioners and the county's other elected officials. They do what they can in the present system. The point is that the system they work in can be improved.

County Commissioners are elected to serve the public on a part-time basis, not to be a full-time employee of the county. It is unreasonable to expect county officials to have the time to fully research all of the variety of issues which come before the county board. The county board needs someone on a day to day basis to do the legwork for them, to do the research and then present county commissioners with detailed costs and options so that commissioners can make informed policy decisions.

If you have doubts as to the benefits of having a day to day staff member to assist an elected board, take a couple of nights and go first to a meeting in which there is a staff member (for example a school board or city council meeting) and then go to a meeting of a board which has no day to day staff member (the county board of commissioners is one of the few that comes to mind).

Watch what happens when a question is raised. At the board with the staff member, the board will immediately look to that staff member. If the board is effective, the staff member will either have the answer or be instructed to find the answer and be ready to report at the next meeting. That doesn't mean the board members can walk into the meeting bone ignorant. Good board members still must do enough research to ask intelligent questions.

What happens when a question is raised at a board meeting without a staff member? Well, maybe one or more of the board members will know the answer and then again maybe they won't. In a worst case scenario, one or two board members will know just enough to persuade the other members to go ahead and vote and skip the time it would take to find out details. Perhaps you've heard it said that a little knowledge can be dangerous. This is a prime example.

Another advantage of having a county administrator is that in conjunction with some other changes, such as having county board meetings in the evening rather than on business days, more people would be able to serve. Theoretically, in a representative democracy everyone should have an opportunity to serve on elected boards. In reality, given the current structure of the county board of commissioners, if you have a full time job, it's at the very least extremely difficult to serve as a county commissioner. Consequently, over the years the number of retirees or self-employed people on the county board of commissioners has been disproportionate to the general population.

Financially, the county should be able to save enough money to at least cover the cost of a county administrator. Given the county's multimillion dollar annual budget, it only takes a couple of bad decisions or missed opportunities due to a lack of complete information to outweigh the cost of a administrator.

Several county commissioners have said they are willing to take a cut in their own compensation to help fund the administrator's position. The commissioners deserve to be applauded for that stance. One of the areas where they are willing to take a pay cut is in their health insurance coverage. Health insurance coverage for part-time elected officials is something which should never have been initiated in the first place. Cutting that is merely righting a wrong. Cutting it in order to improve the overall operation of the county should be seen as a bonus.

Hiring a county administrator would be a step forward for Charlevoix County.

Preschoolers splash as they study

Water is always an endless source of fascination for young children. That's why Rene Golovich-Keje, Director of the Growing Tree learning center, decided to devote a unit of study to water for her students.

The children, aged two and a half to five, can splash and enjoy sensory play at a water table, or they can work on pouring and measuring water at another work area. The kids also thumb through old National Geographics and cut out pictures of anything that's water-related.

Golovich-Keje is teaching her students about bodies of water, ranging in size from the Great Lakes to a puddle. Next week they'll start learning about different life forms found in water. Weather permitting, Golovich-Keje will take the children to the beach, where they can find shells and Petoskey stones, and other examples of water inhabitants.

Golovich-Keje started the Growing Tree last fall for pre-school children, and will be hosting an open house and Spring Art Fair May 21st, for any interested new parents. Keje also hopes to have a summer art program for pre-schoolers, available in two week sessions.

"I'd really like to see this happen," Golovich-Keje said of the summer art program. Golovich-Keje would have lessons in making paper, working with clay, weaving, and nature forms for art. She'd like to incorporate some of these ideas with the building of a float for the Venetian Festival. For further information, call 547-4457.

McCanns celebrate anniversary

The children of Lt. Col. (Ret.) and Mrs. John Giles McCann recently hosted a dinner in honor of the couple's 50th wedding anniversary. Giles McCann and the former Dorothy Gallagher are Beaver Island natives who now make their home in Jackson, Michigan. They were married March 29, 1942. The dinner took place April 4 in Jackson.

Although McCann's career with the Air Force required them to move often, they returned to Charlevoix and Beaver Island each summer to visit with family and friends.

The McCanns are the parents of Stephen McCann of Jackson; William McCann of S. Burlington, Vermont; John McCann of Dallas, Texas; and Mary Ann Maichett of Muncie, Indiana. They have seven grandchildren.

Dorothy McCann is the sister of Mae Coppens of Charlevoix.

Launched truck promptly sinks

When police arrived, they found two soaked people standing on shore and a set of truck headlights shining up from the bottom of the lake.

... Shortly after midnight Sunday evening a 31-year-old East Jordan man drove his 1986 GMC pick-up through the Ferry Avenue boaters parking lot and into Lake Charlevoix via the city launching ramp. According to city police, the truck was traveling at a high rate of speed and got several feet out into the lake before coming to a stop and sinking. The driver of the vehicle, and a 36-year-old female passenger, both escaped without serious injury and made it back to shore.

The driver was taken to jail and charged with operating under the influence of liquor. The man's name has not been released pending arraignment.

Members of the East Jordan dive team and a local towing service pulled the truck from the lake. City police chief Dennis Halverson said the truck went right between two of the launch ramp docks and did not damage them.

Social Services has many volunteers

Fortunately for the Charlevoix County Department of Social Services (DSS) there are people who have volunteered their services to help others in need. Volunteer Services Supervisor, Vasco Zucchiatti, at Charlevoix County DSS said "You just can't say enough about people who give and want to help in any way they can to enhance the quality of life of others".

Who volunteers? With Charlevoix County DSS, volunteers come from every background. Zucchiatti said, "We have retired people, housewives, college students, high school students, church members, contractors, and recipients of public assistance."

Volunteers perform a variety of duties including transportation, friendly visitor, donation pick up and delivery, food distribution to the home and at food pantries, clerical aids, money management, telephone reassurance, and special pro-

"Sometimes an unusual request comes to our attention and usually a volunteer has the talent to give us a hand," Zuchiatu explained. "An example of this would be the need of an elderly person for a living room chair to be raised several inches so she could transfer from the chair to her wheel-chair. A volunteer provides the material, labor and installation."

Charlevoix volunteers include: Robert Black, Julie Carter, Laverne and Genetia Cole, J.O. Crawford, Lloyd and Sara Cummings, Omar Darrah, Philip and Donna Decker, Charlevoix Community Pantry, Raymond Giffin, George Hamilton, Louis and Frances Hooper, Ethel Kermer, Margaret Landman, Lucile Martin, Mel Morrison, Harold Nelson, Dianne Penfold, Roland Putman, Shirley Roloff and Les Vandergert.

Historical Society to discuss U.S. Life Saving Station

The Charlevoix Historical Society's May program will focus on the old U.S. Life Saving Service Station. The program is scheduled for 7:30 p.m., Tuesday, May 5 at the Harsha House, 103 State Street. The program will include slides and pictures provided by Helen Marsh O'Neill, whose father, Fred Marsh, was the Officer in Charge at the Life Saving Station for many years. Many photos from the Historical Society collection will also be used. The program will be narrated by Lou Orlowski.

Rayders sweep St. Francis

Season record now 6-1-1

Charlevoix's girls' softball team clobbered Traverse City St. Francis twice Monday afternoon. The Rayders took game one 19-2 and eased up a bit in the second game, winning by a mere 10 runs 18-8. Both games were called after five innings.

In the first game, Rayder pitcher Tammy Holm gave up only three hits. She had excellent control in the game. The only walking the St. Francis hitters got to do was from the dugout to homeplate, then back again.

Charlevoix set the tone for the game in the first inning, scoring seven runs. They added six more in the second.

Freshman Waja Wujcik and Angelina Doan each had two hits. Melissa Murray and Liz Grunch, another freshman, each had doubles. Melissa Cox, Stacy Tilton, Mary Jane Grunch and Lori Darrah each had a single.

Mary Jane Grunch pitched the second game. She allowed only four hits, while striking out five and walking five.

Liz Grunch picked up her third and fourth hits of the day with a

Baseball team now 4-4

Charlevoix beat Traverse City St. Francis 8-6 to open a double header Monday and then used three home runs to take the second game 14-4.

Jody McGlinch got the pitching win in the first game. He pitched a complete game and struck out seven batters. Ken Olinger had a double and a home run.

Travis Blissett got the second win as the Rayders scored a total of 12 runs in the first three innings. Olinger hit his second home run of the day. Brandon Webb had three hits, including a home run. McGlinch had two hits, including a home run.

The wins raised the Rayders' season record to 4-4 overall and 4-2 in league play.

Softball team has loads of potential

Charlevoix girls' softball coach Ron Cox has a lot of familiar faces on this year's team. And given that last year's team was one of the better teams in the area, that's a comforting thought.

With the exception of a third baseman, the entire Rayder infield returns from last year's team. That includes all-state second baseman Stacy Tilton and all-district shortstop Mary Jane Grunch.

Freshman Liz Grunch steps in at third to give the Rayders three strong arms on the infield. Tara Morrow returns at first base to flag the throws that come hissing her way.

After health problems kept her out of the line-up for the first few games of the season, Melissa Cox is back behind the plate catching. Cox is an aggressive catcher who will make runners pay for daydreaming. She will throw the ball to any base anytime the mood strikes her.

Pitching is often a tough commodity to come by for northern Michigan softball teams, but the Rayders have several players who are comfortable slinging the ball.

Tammy Holm and Mary Jane Grunch are the team's top two pitchers, with Holm normally opening. When Grunch comes in to pitch, Holm is versatile enough to move to another infield position.

The outfield is also a veteran unit. Melissa Murray, Lori Darrah, Angelina Doan and Melissa Eaton all saw a great deal of playing time last year and are back. Murray and Darrah both have exceptional range.

Freshman Waja Wujcik filled in for Cox at catcher early in the season and is expected to contribute in various capacities throughout the year.

Other players on the team are Christy Siwarga, Amy Spang and Melissa Anderson.

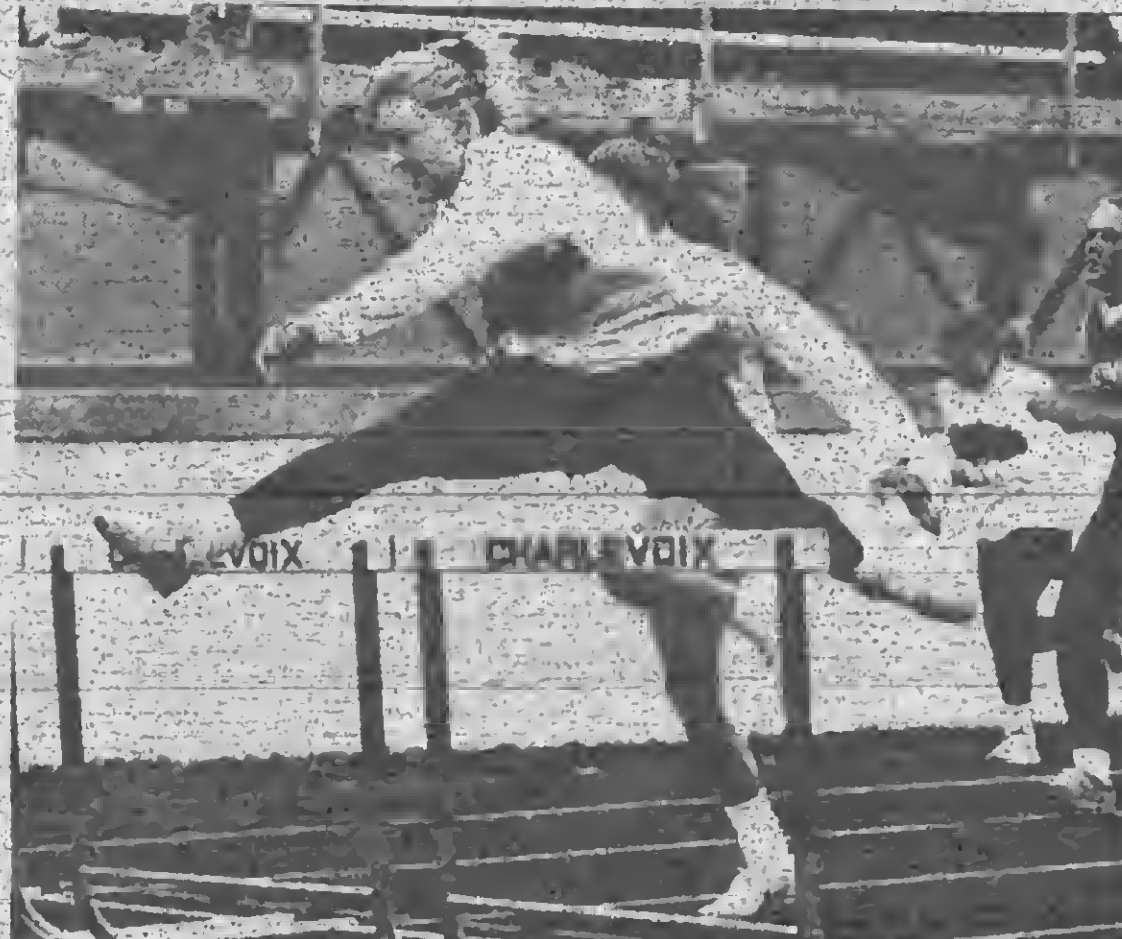

Tennis team splits matches

The Charlevoix High School tennis team split two matches this past week, losing 5-2 to Traverse City St. Francis April 24 and beating Northport 5-2 April 27.

Jeff Joy and Seth Arnold at number three and four singles were the only winners against St. Francis.

Against Northport, Joy and Arnold won as did all three doubles teams: Corey Crain and Mike Dobulis; Dan Avery and David Dobulis; and Jasper Sweeney and David Kenwickise.

Anne Lovell and Nancy Dammann also won exhibition matches against Northport.

Sheila Siegwart goes over a hurdle on her way to a win in a meet last week against Boyne City and East Jordan.

Rayders run well at CMU relays

Smith named athlete of the meet

Matt Smith was named athlete of the meet as Charlevoix's boys' team finished second among Class C schools in the 52nd annual Lyle

Bennett Relays at Central Michigan University.

Smith, a junior, won the 1600 meter race and anchored two winning relay teams. Charlevoix won four of five relays at the meet.

Results for Charlevoix were as follows:

Distance medley: first - Mike

Sevenski, Jason Frabis, Zach Pajtas and Smith.

Sprint medley: first - Luke LaBlance, Lance Emig, Brian Coolman and Frabis.

1600 meters: first - Smith.

BUSINESS

Adolescent Health is a major concern

(The following story is one in a series about area industries and agencies being written for the Courier by Ralph McRae. McRae is a former city council member and mayor and is currently a member of the Charlevoix Industrial Development Committee.)

By Ralph McRae

For the past few weeks, these stories have dealt with various sections of District Health Dept. #3. For an overview of the department, this story is based upon an interview with the department's administrative director, Gerald M. Chase, M.P.H.

Chase is quite proud of the department's operation. He credits the director's of the department's five sections for much of District 3's success. Every Monday, Chase and the five directors meet. In these meetings, they discuss situations which have arisen during the past week and determine priorities for the coming week. These priorities are passed on to the registered nurses and other technicians in the field. Once a month the field supervisors make reports to the department's administrative center in Charlevoix.

One of Chase's primary concerns at this time is to have the department effectively work with the growing problems faced by the area's adolescents. Each month advisory seminars are conducted in schools throughout the department's four-county region. Students are advised and cautioned to avoid bad decisions which can jeopardize their futures. Substance abuse and teenage pregnancy are common problems in this area. Fortunately, area schools are still reasonably safe and free of gang violence.

...helping keep adolescents and others healthy

One of the tools used by the health department to help adolescents is a booklet called "Get it? Got it. Good!" The booklet is published and distributed by the health department. The 110-page booklet contains advice and lists of agencies which offer various types of help to adolescents. It has been distributed through schools in Charlevoix and Emmet Counties.

Information in the booklet was compiled based on information compiled by an Adolescent Advisory Committee in 1989. Carol Paxton of the health department coordinated the work of the committee and the compilation, publication and distribution of the booklet. The committee surveyed approximately 1,400 area students to gather information. A revised edition of the book is being formulated. Some subjects in the booklet include: substance abuse, sexuality, communications between parents and adolescents and employment.

Lately, there has been special attention given to the prevention of AIDs in adolescents. There have been several cases of AIDs in Charlevoix County. As far as can be determined, only one of the cases originated in the county. The other cases involved former residents who were infected elsewhere and then moved back into the county.

Another area of concern is a lack of health insurance coverage for many county residents, particularly single mothers and their children.

Even among two parent households, there are instances where both the husband and wife are employed, yet can't afford health insurance.

Smoking related health problems are something which could be almost completely negated if people simply chose not to smoke. In Marquette, they are testing the effect of abolishing cigarette machines and strictly enforcing laws prohibiting the sale of cigarettes to minors. The local health department is involved with this program, in that smoking habits of local adolescents are being used for comparison purposes. According to health department figures, 30 percent of Charlevoix area high school students smoke. Of those who smoke, the majority are girls.

It takes time and money to fund the various health department programs. One of the most time-consuming tasks for Chase is securing funding. Much of the funding for special health department programs is secured through grant programs.

for the court to block the sale and says Charlevoix Investment Company offered $100,000 more than the offer accepted.

First State Bank majority shareholder Tom Duke, Bank President Lou Hollow and the bank's attorney, Lloyd Fel all say the suit is completely without merit.

Duke said the bank received nine cash offers from solid Michigan banking institutions. The bank board met April 11 and agreed to accept the highest offer.

April 13, Charlevoix Investment Co. made an offer contingent upon being able to get financing within 60 days.

Hollow compares the situation to two people agreeing on the purchase of a house for $50,000 and then having a third party rush in at the closing and offer $50,001.

The suit was filed Thursday, April 23. In a special hearing Friday, April 24 Circuit Court Judge Richard Pajtas denied the plaintiff's request for a temporary restraining order.

Another hearing is scheduled for May 12 and 13.

There is a First State Bank shareholders meeting scheduled May 16. Duke says his plans are to present shareholders with the "excellent offer" from CB at that meeting.

There's always a place for more great mothers

By Laurie Lounsbury

Some children are born to great mothers; others, the lucky ones, get taken in by them. That was the case for 30 foster children who found themselves in the care of Sharlene Spencley, a licensed foster parent and mother to five children of her own.

Spencley, along with husband Gary, first opened the doors of their home to foster children 11 years ago. Their youngest child was 10 at the time, and while Spencley says she isn't completely sure why she decided to become a foster parent, she did say, "I guess my own kids, my birth kids, started to grow up and I felt like there was still enough of me to go around. I had enough hugs for more kids."

Spencley has given more than hugs to her foster kids. Some of the children who were placed in her home on a long-term basis were given a permanent home. The Spencleys adopted five of their foster kids, two of whom are now grown and married, and three who are in grade school. Many others who lived with the Spencleys during their teen years still call the Spencley place home. "They're grown, but they all come back to visit. Christmas is a real zoo here," Spencley said.

The Spencley home speaks volumes about Sharlene Spencley's love for children. The walls, window ledges, and end tables are covered with framed photos of children. A thick, worn book titled, "The Courage to Heal" rests on a table in the foyer.

Spencley explained that children in the foster care program often come with emotional problems, having been born into dysfunctional homes. When they arrive at the Spencley home, they frequently display terrible behavior initially, as if to test the waters in their new surroundings. They jump on the furniture, the tables, even climb on the television. Spencley allows them to do that at first. She understands why they're doing it. "Some kids are like animals, they're so scared. It's bizarre," Spencley said. So how does a foster mother deal with wild-eyed, frightened children? "What we do most is just hold them. If you can distract them and hold them, they'll come around. Not overnight. It takes a long time, but they'll come around."

Being a foster mother requires a great deal of love and patience, along with a little insight. Spencley spoke of one weekend that proved the need for these parenting skills. The family, including two foster children, decided to take a last minute weekend trip. Spencley packed an overnight bag and loaded everyone into the car. When they stopped for dinner a few hours down the road, the foster children went into the restaurant bathroom and destroyed the place, tearing fixtures from the walls and wreaking havoc. When Spencley calmed them down and asked them why they did it, they finally explained, "We thought you were getting rid of us. We saw the suitcases."

Life doesn't always have a fairy tale ending for the Spencleys and their adopted children. Two of the children they legally adopted were removed from the Spencley home and sent back to their birth parents by a judge's decision. It was a very hard experience for the Spencleys and for the other adopted foster children. Spencley had reassured the adopted children that they were safe, and would never have to worry about being sent away. To see their adopted siblings being sent away shook their faith and threatened their stability. "That's what life is in the big world of foster care," Spencley said.

Other children under Spencley's care met with a happier fate, although the ending didn't always take place at the Spencley home. One child, a beautiful, wide-eyed little girl, came to the Spencleys with so much fear that she didn't speak a word, except to Sharlene Spencley. As much as Spencley adored the child, she knew it was in the girl's best interest to be permanently placed out of the area. The girl now lives downstairs, where she was adopted by parents who raised several boys of their own, and always wanted a girl. The new adoptive parents find it hard to believe

So there's no point in planting perennials

If Cheryl Georgi decides to plant flowers this spring in the flower bed near her home on Park Avenue, she'd probably be best off to go with annuals rather than perennials.

At Monday evening's council meeting, the council discussed the flower bed and Dick and Cheryl Georgi's driveway. Portions of both extend across a lot line onto city property. In what might better be characterized as a landscape, rather than a landmark, decision, the council decided not to press the driveway issue, but to require the flower bed to be removed if a plan to plant pine trees on the city land ever materializes.

The Georgis' property borders a city park on the bluff between Park Avenue and the city's water treatment plant. They purchased the property in the early 1970's. According to a 1954 survey submitted by John Ferguson, the driveway, which overlaps city property, has been there for nearly 40 years. The flower bed is something Cheryl Georgi began approximately five years ago.

Dan Barron, an attorney speaking on behalf of the Georgis, indicated that the Georgis didn't wish to make any claim to the property, but wanted to continue to be able to use their driveway. As for the flower garden, Barron said Mrs. Georgi enjoys tending it, but that if the city would rather the garden club or some other organization tended it, that would be fine.

June Cross and Gabe Campbell were two citizens who spoke against allowing the flower garden to remain in place. Campbell said he can't see how the city can give away a piece of city park land for any reason.

"I don't want to hear about enhancing the beauty of the area. I want the park," Campbell said.

Cross said a local women's club has planned to plant pine trees in the area where the flower bed is and that plan has previously been approved by the city council.

Third ward council member Jackie Cross said that even though the flower garden may be attractive, he feels the city should be consistent in prohibiting encroachment. He cited decks as something which also might be attractive, yet shouldn't be allowed on city parks.

First ward council member Ted Felter asked city attorney Jim Young what the city's prospects for success would be if it did go to court to fight about the driveway. Young said that since the driveway may have been there for nearly 40 years, it would be a toss up. He said a judge might very well say the city was right, yet stipulate that the Georgis continue to be allowed access via the driveway.

Felter said that given that scenario, he couldn't see where it was worth fighting about the driveway. A motion to let the driveway matter be and require the flowers to be replaced with pine trees some time in the future passed by a 4-2 vote with Cross and Butch Russell opposed.

Bank suit still awaits May 12 court date

Attorneys from Charlevoix Investment Co. and First State Bank of Charlevoix are filing briefs in preparation for a May 12 hearing. The investment company has filed suit against the bank to prevent it from being purchased by CB Financial Corporation.

The investment company maintains it made a better offer for the bank stock, despite not being given information provided to other prospective purchasers.

First State Bank officials and their attorneys maintain that they took great pains to see that the sale was handled properly, that CB Financial made an excellent offer and the investment company suit is entirely without merit.

The hearing will take place before Circuit Court Judge Richard Pajtas in the Petoskey court room. Two days, May 12 and 13, have been set aside for the hearing.

Performing Arts team takes state title

Fire engines, ambulances, and a long stream of horn blasting, light flashing cars welcomed home Charlevoix's Performing Arts team late Sunday afternoon, as they brought back the State Championship Trophy in Speech (Class C-D) for the fourth time.

It was a big win for the 17 Charlevoix Performing Arts students who competed this weekend at the two-day Michigan Inter-scholastic Forensic's Association Festival in Individual Events, at Western Michigan University.

Charlevoix outscored its perennial rival and closest competitor, Birmingham's Roper, a private school, 106 to 63. Fairview placed third with 45 points. Some 380 entries from 104 high schools around Michigan competed in a variety of speech events. Charlevoix's high score was based on the "outstanding performance of each entry," stated Performing Arts coach Mrs. Connie Ford.

Leading the scoring, Charlevoix's "The Last Cadence," won the overall championship for all class schools in the "Multiple" category. A dramatic presentation compiled, choreographed, and performed by Troy Bonar, Brian Coolman, B.J. VanLoo, David Skeel, and Randy Williams, "The Last Cadence" is based on a number of dramatic pieces about war, including the movies "Platoon" and "Full Metal Jacket" and Neil Simon's play "Biloxi Blues."

Also in the "Multiple" category, "Cats" based on the poem by T.S. Eliot and the musical by Andrew Lloyd Weber, performed by Danielle Loucks, Mindy Noiro, Gabrielle LaCroix, Nancy

 that the child never spoke, because now she apparently happily talks a blue streak.

Spenceley has no regrets about being a foster parent, although she says if she had it to do all over again, she might have done it a little differently. She said that having mostly teen-aged foster children at a time when her own youngest child was entering her teens was sometimes difficult. The 15 and 16 year old foster children would get into typical teen age trouble, and need a lot of help from Spenceley, who would make time for them at the expense of her 12 year old daughter. "If I had it to do over, I would have either waited until my youngest was older, or taken in only younger children, or taken fewer kids," Spenceley said.

The Spenceleys gave up their foster care license two years ago, to concentrate on the three adopted children they have at home, and to spend more time with their eight grandchildren. "There comes a time when it can burn you out," Spenceley said.

"I love all kids, any age, except 17, and you may print that," Spenceley said with a laugh. She explained that 17 is the age when everything seems to happen. Kids start going to parties, drinking, and wanting the car. "They're getting to be adults, but they're acting like two year olds."

Even with the challenges of raising foster children along with her own children, dealing with drinking and drug problems, Spenceley says that overall, being a foster parent was a beneficial experience. That's probably why her grown foster children and her own kids keep coming home to see her. "They know they can get hugs from us," Spenceley said.

OPINIONS

Question:

What's your most memorable Mother's Day present?

Lynn Crowley

"Katie gave me dandelions one year. She was so proud of herself, but by the time she brought them in, they were all wilted."

Mary Frame

"I always asked to have my windows cleaned for a mother's day present. My kids got sick of hearing me ask for clean windows, so they finally quit asking what I wanted. They would get me sweetheart roses instead. They're not dumb."

If you've ever held a fistful of pebbles in the palm of your hand and admired their color and smoothness, go to the Juried Fine Arts and Craft Show this month at the McCune Arts Center! Here you will see a powerful painting of stones hanging on the wall by Jean Kelly of Sioux St. Marie, Canada. It was awarded second place in the Fine Arts Competition, and no wonder. One has the urge to reach into the canvas and touch.

If you've ever saved a piece of wood, go see the exhibit at the Art Center and study the willowy wooden reclining sculpture carved by Walter Midener, nationally renowned artist, who lives in East Jordan, or the satin smooth wooden vase by Tom Clark of Traverse City.

If you've ever walked around a marina admiring the bobbing sailboats, take yourself to this superb exhibit and compare the two marine scenes painted by David Pickett and Mary Fink, both of Petoskey.

If you've ever held a needle in your hand, visit the Art Center and admire the delicate stitchery of the wall hanging done by Betsy Wallace of Alanson called "Japanese Fans and Flowers" which won 3rd place in the Craft Competition.

If you've ever stretched out on a warm summer day in a field of grass, and braided golden strands into a ring, to the Art Center and check the woven baskets on display by Carol Madison of Charlevoix.

If you've ever turned a spade in your garden, go to the exhibit and bask in the colorful reflection of yellow sunflowers by Marion Mac Kay of East Jordan, First Place Winner of the Fine Arts Competition.

This year's Juried Fine Arts and Crafts Show is by far the best ever! Judge Mary Riordan, former Curator at the Cranbrook Academy of Art Museum, and former Director of the Muskegon Museum of Art, admitted to me that only one third of the 150 entries were accepted.

and she acknowledges that the rejects alone would have made a good show!

The Arts Foundation of Michigan and the Crooked Tree Arts Council awarded a thousand dollars worth of prize money to the artists. Prices range from $175 for a wonderful prizewinning birch bark basket by a young man from Levering, Lee Brewbaker, to sculpture in the five figure range.

If you are a regular visitor to the McCune Arts Center, bring a youngster with you to enjoy this lively and colorful show. If you have never been to the rotating monthly exhibits, drop in for a few minutes and browse by yourself. You may find the experience exhilarating. The Juried Fine Arts and Crafts Show will hang through June 5. The gallery is open from 10 to 5 Monday through Saturday.

I REMEMBER MAY DAY AS THE DAY OUR BLEND TEACHER TOOK THE CLASSES FOR A WALK TO FIND MAYFLOWERS TO FILL THE TINY PAPER BASKETS WE HAD MADE. THESE DRY LITTLE GIFTS WERE CAREFULLY CARRIED HOME AND PRESENTED TO MOMS AS A CELEBRATION OF SPRING. THIS PAST MAY DAY I TOOK TO THE WOODS TO SEE HOW MANY FLOWERS I COULD LOCATE, DESPITE THE COLD WEATHER WE'VE BEEN HAVING. NOT ONLY DID I FIND LOTS OF DIFFERENT FLOWERS, I ALSO HAD THE JOY OF THE COMPANY OF A PAIR OF BUTTERFLIES. I BELIEVE THEY WERE ATLANTIS FRITILLARY AS THEY WERE DARTING AMONG THE VIOLETS, WHICH IS THEIR HOST PLANT. INSTEAD OF PICKING A BOUQUET I SKETCHED THE FLOWERS I SAW - SO HERE, A FEW DAYS LATE IS MY BOUQUET HAPPY SPRING!

Students now CPR certified

By Laurie Lounsbury

Nearly all Charlevoix High School freshman and sophomores are now CPR (cardiopulmonary resuscitation) certified, and last Thursday, 75% of the senior class attended CPR certification classes.

When a person suddenly suffers a heart attack, the actions taken between the time of the attack and the time the ambulance arrives can sometimes mean the difference between life and death. With that in mind, Mary Ann Cox, Patty Sizema, Jeannie Seymour and other members of project Heart Start have worked with the school to allow CPR certification training to become part of the high school curriculum.

Last Thursday, emergency medical technicians from Lifelink and certified volunteers demonstrated lifesaving techniques to the seniors on Resusci-Annie, the practice dummy for CPR training. Charlevoix High School owns their own, top of the line Resusci-Annie, which is equipped with a battery-operated computer that shows students the quality of compression they're achieving. As students worked on the computerized Resusci-Annie, with one eye on the computer screen, they were amazed at how much force is required to pump air into the lungs. Seymour, a certified instructor in CPR, took an interest in getting CPR training into the schools in 1987, when she learned that no one was certified in any of the Charlevoix schools. The first step was to have in-service CPR training for all teachers. Now, any student going through Charlevoix High School will get CPR certification training as part of their freshman physical education program.

CPR training lasted several hours for the students, with a break for lunch, which was donated by Pizza Hut, McDonald's, Pepsi, and Burger King.

Now is the time to prevent heartworm

Area veterinarians are warning dog owners that now is the time of the year to have dogs checked for heartworm.

Heartworm is a parasite disease which is transmitted to dogs by mosquito bites. The disease can be fatal to dogs.

The only way to be sure a dog is free of heartworm disease is to have the dog checked by a veterinarian. If the dog is free of heartworms, it can be given pills to prevent it from getting the disease.

BEACONS

OF BLESSINGS

by REV. BRUCE HAMILTON

"What's the big question?" the speaker asked. The voices of 1,000 teenagers replied, "Am I for real?" We were in Miller Auditorium at Western Michigan University for a church youth convention. It was a sight to behold to be in the midst of all those foot stomping, hand clapping kids. It was also a very appropriate question to consider.

Are we for real? We live in a day and time where illusion and fantasy are more easily accepted than reality. If you don't know what I mean, just consider the sales job that hundreds of commercials and advertisements do every day in shaping our self image and style.

That's where our convention speaker began. He asked the teens if they were real with themselves. He suggested that far more of us than would probably care to admit it are simply not happy with who we are. Then he repeated one of my all time favorite quotes, "God doesn't make junk." That's the first step to being real. You need to know that you are special. You are unique. You are a child of the most high.

We were then challenged to consider if we were real in our dealings with others. That's a tricky one not just for teens but adults too. We grown ups have always had our "game faces" that we use for business deals, public contact moments, and just to keep others from getting too close. That's not always the best way to do things regardless of what society dictates. There is more support and encouragement available for you than you may realize in the friendship that others can offer.

Can you guess what the last area was? Are we real with God? There is no doubt about how real God has been with us. The Bible reminds us that "in while while we were yet sinners, Christ died for us." You cannot get any more real than that. In a week where our whole nations had been challenged by the reality of events on the west coast, being real with God has never been more needed. Being real with ourselves is where it all begins.

Boys track team wins invitational

Nobody else came close to the Charlevoix boys' track team Saturday at the Warren Converse Invitational in Kalkaska. Charlevoix accumulated 128 points on the day while second place Lake City had 73 and a half.

Charlevoix senior Luke LaBlance was named athlete of the meet. He won the 400 meter run in 51.8 and the 800 meter run in 2:05.6. He also anchored the winning 800 and 1600 meter relay teams.

Matt Smith was also a multiple winner. He won the 3200 meter run in 10:23.6 and the 1600 meter run in 4:31.7.

Lance Emig and Mike Sevenski also won individual races. Emig won the 100 meter dash in 12:00 while Sevenski won the 300 meter low hurdles in 4:31.7.

Charlevoix won the 800 meter relay in 1:34.8 with Emig, Jason VanLoo, Jason Frabis and LaBlance.

The Rayders won the 1600 meter relay in 3:40.7 with Frabis, Emig, Sevenski and LaBlance.

Other top five finishes for the boys' team included:

Second - VanLoo, 100 meter dash; 3200 meter relay (Frabis, Josh Scheels, Mike Bush, Zach Pajtas); 400 meter relay (Emig, Mike Rostar, Chris Pease, VanLoo).

Third - Josh Martin, discus.

Fourth - Pajtas, 800 meter run; Skippergosh, shot put; Travis Wood, pole vault.

Fifth - Keith Carey, 300 low hurdles; Skippergosh, discus.

The girls placed fourth in the meet with 64 points; Lake City won the meet with 99 points.

Charlevoix placed first in the 3200 relay with a time of 10:29. The relay team was comprised of Gina Webster, Becky Bragg, Michelle Keem and Elsa Conlan.

Charlevoix will host Kalkaska and Mancelona on Wednesday, May 6. The Rayders will travel to Alma, Saturday, May 11.

Matt Skippergosh of the Charlevoix Middle School track team prepares to loft the shot put. Charlevoix won a four-team meet with East Jordan, Inland Lakes and Harbor Springs this past Thursday.

Pitching is critical for baseball success

The hitting has been coming around, but as any coach will tell you it's pitching that ultimately determines just how far a baseball team will go.

In the early season, the Charlevoix varsity baseball team's record has been hovering around .500.

"It all hinges on the pitching. If we improve on pitching, we should be above .500," explained coach Brian Certa.

The Rayders are currently throwing a combination of six pitchers at opposing teams. Jody McGlinch, a junior, has been the steadiest of the crew. Others are seniors Travis Blissett, Wayne Joy, Ken Olinger and Luke Porath and sophomore Don Jess.

While pitching is still a question mark, hitting is an area which is beginning to show promise. Certa said the hitters got off to a poor start, but have been working hard in the early weeks of practice and that has started to pay off. In recent weeks, Olinger has had a couple of big games.

Defensively, according to Certa the team can be sound, but occasionally self-destructs.

Base running is an area Certa is particularly pleased with. He said that thus far the Rayders have been very sound in that aspect of the game.

The Rayders are blessed with a nice blend of seniors and younger players.

Seniors include: Randy Williams who plays in the outfield, primarily right field; Olinger, who pitches and plays center field; Porath, who pitches and plays first base; Jay, who pitches and plays second base; and Blissett, who pitches, plays in the outfield and also does some designated hitting.

The team also has three sophomores who Certa says have been doing well. They are Jess, Brandon Webb and David Skeel.

Certa expects Elk Rapids and Kalkaska to be at the top of the conference this season with the rest of the teams being fairly evenly matched.

Through the first 10 games of the season, the Rayders were 5-5 overall and 3-3 in league play.

Baseball team loses a pair

Charlevoix's baseball team ran into some strong Kalkaska pitching and lost two games Monday. The Rayders lost the first game 5-1 and got clobbered 13-1 in game two.

Wayne Joy got the pitching loss in game one on a six-hitter. The Rayders were held to just three hits in the game. The hits were all singles. David Skeel, Jody McGlinch and Ed Johnson had the hits.

In the second game things fell apart in the first inning for the Rayders. Ken Olinger was brought in to relieve McGlinch with just one out in the first inning. Olinger pitched reasonably well in the final six innings, but given that Charlevoix wasn't scoring any runs, the runs Kalkaska scored early proved to be an insurmountable lead.

Charlevoix had just four hits in the game. Skeel, Olinger, Johnson and Don Jess each had singles.

The losses dropped the Rayders season record to 5-7 overall and 5-5 in league play.

This Thursday the Rayders will travel to Boyne City.

Nathan Jones of Charlevoix strains to get a little extra distance at last Thursday's middle school track meet. Charlevoix won both the boys' and girls' meets.

Softball team rallies after defeat

Giving up nine runs in the last inning of a close game and losing 23-11 apparently didn't rest well with the Charlevoix girls' softball team.

The blown inning occurred in the first game of a double header with Kalkaska Monday. In the second game the Rayders were leading 14-4 after three and a half innings when the game had to be postponed due to darkness.

Tammy Holm took the pitching loss. She was relieved by Mary Jane Grunch in the seventh inning.

Despite the loss, the Rayders had a good offensive outing led by senior second baseman Stacy Tilton who had two hits including a grand slam home run.

Melissa Cox also had a home run in the game while Holm, Liz Grunch and Angelina Doan each had singles.

Doan continued her hot hitting in the second game with a home run and a single.

The postponed game will be continued at a later date.

The loss left the Rayders with a season record of 8-2-1. This Thursday Charlevoix will travel to Boyne City.

Taylor preparing for Olympic trials

Bill Taylor of Charlevoix is preparing for the 1992 Olympic trials in June. He has qualified for the trials in both the 5,000 and 10,000 meter events.

Recently, Taylor competed in the 5,000 meter race at the Penn Relays. He placed fourth, six seconds six seconds off the pace set by two-time Olympic medalist Marcus O'Sullivan of Ireland. Taylor ran the race in a time of 13:38. He hopes to shave about 13 seconds off of that time in the next few months. He would like to run the 10,000 meter race in about 28 minutes. (In American distance figures, the 5,000 meter race equates to about 3.1 miles and the 10,000 to about 6.2 miles.)

Taylor's running career recently received a big boost when he was accepted into an Olympic Committee Job Opportunity Program with Annheuser-Busch. The program allows top athletes to work less than a 40-hour work week and make a living while also giving them enough time to train. Only world class athletes who are in the top 10 or 15 athletes in their event are considered for the program.

Taylor is working at the Annheuser-Busch plant in Williamsburg, Virginia where he lives and trains. The job is scheduled to end in September, but allows him adequate training time up to and through the coming summer Olympics in Barcelona.

Keeping the environment and paperwork in order

(The following story is one in a series of stories about area industries and agencies being written for the Courier by Ralph McRae. This is the final story of a group of stories about the District 3 Health Department. McRae is a former mayor and city council member and currently is a member of the Charlevoix Industrial Development Committee.)

By Ralph McRae

The Environmental Health Division of the District 3 Health Department is responsible for controlling environmental factors which could influence our well-being. Under the direction of F. Dean Mikulski, 10 sanitarians work to prevent area people from being exposed to health threatening conditions.

Despite a downturn in economic conditions in the last few years, there have still been a number of people retiring to lake access land sites. All of the new lakefront homes must have wells and septic systems which are approved by the sanitarians. Soil tests are made to determine where and how big the sewage systems must be. Wells can only be drilled in locations not endangered by contaminants. Each of the four counties in District 3 has a coordinating sanitarian. In 1991, 11,500 individual services by the Environmental Health Division resulted in 1,400 permits for septic systems and 1,200 approved well locations. Since 1968, 30,000 septic permits have been issued. Some of the land inspections are for banks-sellers and buyers. Purchasing property without these evaluations may result in owning unusable property.

All of the sanitarians are constantly checking, by unscheduled visits, the hundreds of facilities servicing food to the public. In 1991, 3,000 inspections were made and 600 licenses approved. In the city of Charlevoix, there are more than 30 food serving establishments.

Sanitarians must inspect a variety of different agencies including day care centers, adult foster homes, children's camps, camp grounds, mobile home parks, bathing beaches, swimming pools, public water supplies and gas stations. All of these facilities require inspection visits.

Permits are issued only after fees are paid. In 1991, more than $350,000 was received.

Last year the health department coordinated a series of tests for radon gas in numerous school rooms. No high levels of radon were found. Radon test kits are available for individuals at the health department. The test is a very simple procedure.

Other responsibilities of the Environmental Health Division include checks on golf courses for the use of pesticides near drinking water sources, reviewing cases where animals bite people, coordinating classes on the prevention or handling of nuclear contamination and checking material from dredging

a variety of functions. They include finance, accounting, billing, accounts receivable, accounts payable, secretarial, office management, purchasing, data management. The division is under the direction of Christie Vogelheim. Vogelheim has been with the Health Department for 12 years. Prior to coming to the Health Dept., she worked with accounting positions with other agencies. She has divided the division into three main sections with each section having a supervisor. Clerical/secretarial is supervised by Nancy Mikulski.

Accounting is supervised by Barbara Probert. Data management is supervised by Sue Miller.

One of the most critical responsibilities of administrative services is keeping track of revenues and expenditures from 50 different funding sources. Each day reports come in from scores of field and clinic nurses; sanitarians, aids and contractual agencies. Each of these reports must be accurately recorded and documented to audit changes to funding sources and clients.

Personal work station computers have been a big help to the division.

Currently more than 30 computers are used to help carry out the division's functions. Every two weeks, the payrolls are processed for the more than 100 staff members in the four counties. The annual payroll is $2.6 million with an annual budget of approximately $5 million.

The data management section of the division works on the systematic arrangement of the various computers and information they contain. Computers from the five offices in the four counties are all tied in to the same on-line system.

Library Activity Hour concludes for 1992

The Children's Activity Hour program at the public library has concluded its 1992 season. Through the voluntary instructional effort of several area people, more than 140 children learned how to bring birds to their backyards, how to warm up for sports activities, how to sing an Irish song, how different birds find food and they even took a historical tour of Charlevoix.

Hands-on learning played a major role in the Saturday morning activity hours. Children used tweezers and tongs to find food in the bottom of simulated marshes and under tree bark. They strung peanuts and cut nesting material to put out for birds. They learned about CPR and watched a puppet show as well as learning about the history of Charlevoix.

Adults who took time from their Saturday morning to work with the children included: Mary Samson and Jim Norgaard of S.E.E. North; Geoff Reynolds of the Charlevoix Historical Society; Bob Roloff of the Charlevoix Ambulance Service; Bill Tache and Larry Hansen of Life Link E.M.S.; Candy Smith of Vital Options; Sue Louise of Country Blossoms; and Patty Clark, singer and songwriter.

Lions honor charter members

At a Sunday evening candlelight banquet at the Weathervane Restaurant the Charlevoix Lions Club and their wives combined the official business of naming new officers and directors for the upcoming "Lion" year with a celebration honoring the twenty-four original Lions who formed the Club in 1962. Thanks to Don Meggison, the one Charter Lion still active, seven of these Charter Lions and wives were guests of the Club for the occasion — Roy and Dolores Cain, Henry Felix and Beth Geniet, Stanley and Jean Fiedorek, Frank Ochs, Jerry and Dorothy Whitley, Robert and Leona Winchester, Byron and Colleen Wright — and, of course, Don and Helen Meggison. It is also the Seventy-Fifth Anniversary of the founding of the parent Lions Clubs International in 1917.

Dean Davenport, Athletic Director of Ferris State University, was the speaker of the evening. "Deano" is a Graduate of Charlevoix High. His father Dean was a Charter Lion and the club's first King Lion.

In his address Davenport praised the critical roles that Lions and thousands of other volunteer organizations are playing in fulfilling the needs of people here at home and the world over. As a way of encouraging more people to volunteer he proposed a community plan be initiated whereby these volunteers can be formally and publicly recognized for their individual dedication and hard work — instead of one Citizen of the Year — why not a hundred — selected from the many service organizations?

In the official part of the evening the outgoing officers gave way to the incoming — Gordon Van Wieren takes over as King Lion from Bill Dreyer — Larry Levengood remains as First Vice President, Reed Freidinger, MD moves from Secretary to Second Vice President, Richard Brandt moves from Treasurer to Third Vice President, Richard Kelly is the incoming Secretary, Barney Way is the new Treasurer and William Trubilowicz added Lion-Tamer to his job of Tail-Twister. Ron Winchester is the new Membership Director, Chairman with new Directors, Kyle Smith and Traver Wood, his membership team. Bernard Cannan continues as Public Relations Director.

A reminder from the local police

Now that nice weather has finally drifted north, garage sale fever will soon strike the city. It's time again to trade treasures with our neighbors. For those planning to have a sale, here are a few pointers.

After placing your ad in the Courier, and attaching cards to store bulletin boards, most of you will place signs on the street.

When posting your sale signs, please do not attach them to trees. If you are using signs on stakes remember to keep them off the right of way. In most cases this would mean that the sign will be on the side of the sidewalk away from the road. If signs are placed too near the street they become a vision obstruction for motorists.

To keep Charlevoix beautiful please don't forget to take your signs down after your sale is over. Happy Sales To You!

(A reminder from the local police is provided to the Courier by the Charlevoix City Police Department in an effort to help keep Charlevoix a safe and pleasant place to live.)

Band concert scheduled

The Charlevoix Middle School Seventh and Eighth Grade Bands will present their final public concert of the school year Tuesday, May 12 at 7:30 p.m. in the Charlevoix High School Gym. About one hundred musicians in the two bands will play musical selections demonstrating instrumental techniques which they have learned during the school year.

The seventh graders will open the concert with several marches and overtures, and a novelty number which features the percussion section playing some "instruments" not commonly found in a band.

The eighth grade band will play the three pieces which they performed at the district band festival along with several other selections including highlights from the Broadway musical "Fiddler On The Roof". The concert will be about fifty minutes in length and is open to the public free of charge.

Merchants discuss ways of a criminal counterculture

Traveling thieves best stopped by prevention rather than apprehension

By L. Scott Swanson

According to some bands of traveling criminals, there's nothing morally wrong with stealing. It's just a way of making a living. Even beyond not being morally wrong, a good thief is held in high esteem for his cleverness and skills.

There is a particular Gypsy legend, which some Gypsies believe justifies stealing from non-Gypsies. According to the legend, Christ gave Gypsies permission to steal. This particular legend has it that when Christ was to be crucified, Gypsy blacksmiths were hired to make the nails. One of the nails was supposed to be destined for Christ's heart, but the Gypsies stole that nail. Because the Gypsies stole the nail, Christ granted Gypsies and their ancestors the right to steal.

Sgt. Chris Johnson of the Wayne Police Department spoke to approximately 30 Charlevoix merchants last Thursday about the problem of traveling criminals. Traveling criminals have hit Charlevoix several times in recent years. They go into a business, create a diversion and steal either money or merchandise. Once they're out of the store, the odds of catching and prosecuting them are very slim.

Traveling criminals are also frequently referred to as Gypsies, although that terminology is not accurate in all instances. While a significant percentage of traveling criminals may be Gypsies, Johnson pointed out that not all traveling criminals are Gypsies and not all Gypsies are criminals.

Johnson is one of Michigan's leading authorities on traveling criminals. After a local store was victimized by traveling criminals last month, Charlevoix City Police Chief Dennis Halverson worked with the Charlevoix Chamber of Commerce and the Charlevoix Retailers' Association to bring Johnson to the community for a seminar on traveling criminals.

In introducing Johnson, Halverson said that since traveling criminals are so difficult to catch and prosecute, the objective of the seminar is to keep the thefts from occurring. He said that with U.S. 31 running through the center of town, Charlevoix finds itself in the path of traveling criminals.

Traveling criminals, according to Johnson, are a counter culture living side by side, but not really participating in society with the rest of us. Many traveling criminals don't file tax returns, don't have birth certificates or marriage licenses and yet may have as many as 12 to 15 aliases. For these people, stealing and scamming is a way of life and they're good at it.

Johnson drew a triangle and at the three points wrote entry, diversion and theft. In the middle he wrote victim. Traveling criminals general work in groups. The size of the groups can vary widely.

A typical rip-off of a store would be for several people to enter a business and while some of the people created a diversion, others would steal money or merchandise.

Johnson showed a videotape of a robbery in Texas. While some of the traveling criminals distracted the merchant, others snuck into the back room to steal cash from the safe. In addition to the members of the group who were distracting the merchant and committing the robbery, another even posed as a clerk to distract a customer. When the merchant figured out that something was amiss and began walking toward the office, one of the females in the group raised her dress and tried to block him from the office. While the thieves headed for the door, the merchant went to the back room and got a gun. He fired a single shot into the ground and the thieves stopped and were apprehended.

Apprehension and successful prosecution of traveling criminals is rare. Once they're out of a store, they are likely to alter their appearance, pass the stolen money or merchandise off to someone else and get out of town fast. Johnson said that since traveling criminals enjoy being on the road, it wouldn't be unusual for them to be camped 50 or 100 miles away from a place they rob.

Even if a merchant or police officer is fortunate enough to apprehend a traveling criminal, prosecution presents a new set of problems. For police, the first challenge is figuring out just exactly who they've arrested. Often times the traveling criminals have several aliases and a pocket full of false identification. Traveling criminals also will frequently post bond and skip town. Johnson said that in one case in Washington, a traveling criminal posted a $60,000 bond on a larceny charge. Traveling criminals view bonds as just a cost of doing business.

Stores aren't the only places which traveling criminals will rob. They will also use the same technique of entry and diversion to rob homes. Johnson said that as an example, a lady will ask to use the phone. She might have her daughter with her and ask if her daughter may use the bathroom while she makes a call. While the homeowner is with the lady making the call, the daughter will be stealing things. Other scams to gain entry include claiming to be a utility repairman. Legitimate utility people carry I.D. cards.

In addition to outright theft, there are also scams. In scams, traveling criminals will do some work, such as sealing driveways or fixing roofs. The scam may include using poor quality materials or over-billing or both. Scams can be avoided by checking to see that the worker has a local office and checking references.

Johnson advised merchants of some ways they can avoid being victimized.

"Look at your own way of doing business and establish some checks," he said.

Cash drawers should contain only enough cash to make change. The rest of a store's money should be in a safe. The safe should be

Petunia Planting moved to May 29

Due to a dearth of degrees, there's been a poky proliferation of petunia petals this spring. Against that backdrop, the local brokers of beautification have decided to delay distribution.

Now, let's try that in English. Due to a cold spring, petunias have been slow in growing. Consequently, Keep Charlevoix Beautiful has decided to change the petunia planting date from May 21 to Friday, May 29.

Planting will begin at 5 p.m. People interested in helping should report to a block captain who will be wearing a bright orange vest.

Once you've been ripped off, catching traveling criminals and prosecuting them is very difficult. Sgt. Chris Johnson of the Wayne Police Department told local merchants that when it comes to stopping traveling criminals, an ounce of prevention is worth more than a pound of cure. Johnson spoke to merchants at a seminar last week.

...stopping traveling criminals

locked up and require a key to open. If the safe has a combination lock, it should not be left where it can be opened by only turning it a few clicks. The safe should also be heavy enough or anchored well enough so that it can't be carried away.

If a group of people come into a store and attempt to create a diversion, the first thing the cashier should do is lock the money away. Then, the police should be notified. If someone steals money and attempts to flee, the cashier should take a look at the car, grab a pen to write down information and get a look at which direction the car goes.

Johnson, who has been active in studying traveling criminals since 1982, estimates that there are 600,000 working traveling criminals in the United States in Canada, each with an average annual income of $75,000 to $150,000 in cash and merchandise. He said that the United States is the only civilized country which doesn't view the travelling criminal problem as a form of organized crime.

Veterans begin poppy sales

Local American Legion, Veterans of Foreign Wars members and their auxiliary members will soon begin their annual poppy sales.

Auxiliary members of American Legion, Unit #226, will sell poppies Thursday, Friday and Saturday May 14 through 16.

The VFW Auxiliary will sell their Buddy Poppies the following weekend, May 21 through 23. The poppies are made by disabled veterans who are hospitalized and sold to veterans' organizations throughout the United States.

The sale is derived from a poem about soldiers killed in war. The poem begins, "In Flanders Field the poppies grow, Between the crosses, row on row..."

Money raised through the poppy sales is used in relief work for veterans and their families.

The two veterans groups will be selling different types of poppies.

Veterans and auxiliary members who can help sell poppies are asked to call 547-4194 for the Legion or 547-2636 for the V.F.W. to make arrangements.

County Commissioners continue to discuss benefits for dependents

By Laurie Lounsbury
A rift between the Charlevoix county employees and the Charlevoix county commissioners was temporarily patched up at a special meeting of several commissioners and the county department heads last Thursday. County employees were disgruntled because of a resolution the commissioners adopted which would eliminate health benefits for retired employees' spouses and dependents.

At the commissioners' regular meeting April 22, Chairman Don Smith recommended that health benefits for dependents of retired employees be eliminated because "it would get way too expensive down the road." Smith was reversing his earlier decision made in 1987 to support the retirement benefit plan for employees and dependents.

County employees charged the commissioners with acting hastily on the new resolution, saying they should have consulted the employees before passing the resolution. Commissioner Phil Johnson concurred. "I think we rushed through it (the resolution) faster than it should have been done," he said.

Friend of the Court George Ebenhoe said county employees were upset to read about the commissioners' decision to cut benefits in the newspaper, where they also read a different news story about the county having a $200,000 surplus in the budget. Ebenhoe asked the commissioners to consider the true motives behind the benefit cut. "Is it that you don't want to spend it, or do you have it to spend? It makes a big difference," Ebenhoe said.

The county currently has 14 retired employees on the benefit plan, five of whom have dependents. The total cost of retired benefits to the county is $24,110.52. Three of the retired employees with dependents are under 65, and two are over 65, bringing the cost of the dependents' benefits to $6,857.64, which is about 28% of the total cost of retirement benefits. If the number of retired employees with dependents increases, the cost of the benefit plan could potentially double.

Commissioner Walt Hufford said his recommendation to the other commissioners would be to get an actuarial study, so they can more accurately determine the real cost to the county in the future. Hufford also said he would like to explore other alternatives and asked the department heads to volunteer any ideas they may have. "I don't want to leave the county open to a big liability that's unknown," Hufford said.

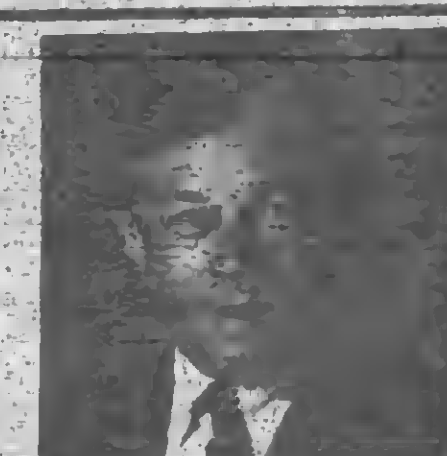

Along with an actuarial study, Hufford said he will recommend to the board that they amend the resolution to set the effective date back until the study is done.

No need to be in a hurry to landscape substation

In landscaping the new electrical substation at the corner of M-66 and Stover Road, money is an object. And while the transformer should eventually be screened, there's no need to rush the matter.

The city has budgeted $100,000 to landscape the structure and the project will be bid. In reviewing bids, the city should be willing to look at options which will reduce costs. Plans call for various forms of landscaping material to be put around the perimeter of the substation to screen it from view. In recent weeks, a plan was floated to build a shell of a building around the transformer, but that plan has been scrapped due to the expense it would require to make it feasible.

Currently, the substation isn't the most attractive sight, yet it's not something that the city has to be in such a hurry to cover up that they open the check book too far. If the substation isn't screened this year, the world will still turn. If there is money to be saved or improvements to be made by being patient in obscuring the substation, then be patient. If it takes a few years for the various plants to grow high enough to cover the substation, that's fine. Be patient and let them grow.

Planning and the construction of the substation have been in the works since at least the mid 1980s and it will be where it is and functioning for decades to come. There's really no need to get rushed at the last minute of construction.

Beautification is all well and good, but function and economics also have to be considered. Some things take time and as a community we should be willing to let things take the time to be done right.

Homeless Elks sought

The departure of the ELKS Lodge from Petoskey several years ago has left a number of ELK members "homeless." Many of these members have indicated that both Gaylord and Traverse City Lodges are too far to travel and be active.

In recognition of this the West Central District of the Michigan ELKS Association has appointed John Blount of Eastport to meet with these ELKS and investigate the possibility of forming a new lodge to be located in the Charlevoix area.

Blount and Gary Garvin, a State Committee Chairman, will conduct a meeting May 18 at 7:30 p.m. at the V.F.W. post home on US 31 North, Charlevoix.

All ELKS, past and present are invited to attend and bring any friends who may be interested.

Orville D. Hilton

Orville D. Hilton, 92, of Norwood Township, died May 7, 1992, at the home of his daughter and son-in-law, Elsie and Peter Joyce in Norwood Township.

Funeral service was Monday, May 11, at the Winchester Funeral Home in Charlevoix. Pastor Bruce E. Hamilton of the Community Church of God officiated with burial in Brookside Cemetery, Charlevoix.

Mr. Hilton was born Dec. 24, 1899, in Norwood Township, the son of Henry and Nora (Van Dusen) Hilton. He attended and graduated from Hilton School and lived in Norwood Township until 1920 when he moved to Caldwell, Idaho.

He married the former Marie Klusak on Nov. 25, 1920, in Caldwell, Idaho. The couple returned to Michigan and lived in Detroit until 1925 when they moved to Charlevoix. In 1927, they moved to Norwood Township where they made their home and Mr. Hilton worked as a farmer. Mrs. Hilton died Nov. 28, 1987.

Mr. Hilton was an active member of Charlevoix Chapter No. 72 Order of Eastern Star as well as a life member of Charlevoix Lodge No. 282 F. & A.M.

He attended the Norwood United Methodist Church and was a member of the Barnard Grange. He held the office of Norwood Township treasurer for 25 years. He loved his community and served in various ways to make it a better place to live.

He served in the U.S. Marine Corps during World War II. Mr. Vreeland was self employed as a realtor.

He is survived by his wife Dorothy of Sarasota; three sons, Michael L. of Kalamazoo, Peter L. of Sarasota and Robert L. of Palm Coast, Fla.; two sisters, Catherine Gillespie of Flat Rock and Mary Alice Dziedzic of Charlevoix; one brother, James Vreeland of Florida.

The family suggests memorial contributions be made to the American Lung Association, 1436 Royal Palm Square Blvd., Fort Myers, Fla. 33919.

Arrangements were handled by the Jackson Funeral Home in Sarasota.

Lutheran food challenge brings food to local pantry

The Charlevoix Community Food Pantry recently received a $295 check from Bethany Lutheran Church. The church raised the money through participation in the Lutheran Brotherhood Food Bank Challenge April 5. The Charlevoix church was one of 21 Lutheran churches from the region which participated in the challenge. Bethany Lutheran Church hopes to make the challenge an annual event to assist the Food Pantry in replenishing their cupboards and shelves after Thanksgiving and Christmas baskets are filled.

Even those who don't believe in a higher power have been known to respect the vision that the phrase "let us pray" calls up. Hopefully though, most of us know it is more than a vision. We know that prayer is our life link with the divine. When our hearts are in turmoil, prayer brings peace. When our spirits are uncertain, prayer brings direction. When our lives are restless, prayer brings comfort. So much can be said for the wondrous healing balm that being open and honest with our Creator brings to us.

A very short verse in the sixth chapter of Micah shares some insight on how we can make our prayer life more meaningful. "He has showed you, O man, what is good: And what does the Lord require of you? To act justly and to love mercy and to walk humbly with your God." The goodness he speaks of is the way we live our lives. When we invite the Lord into our lives, He not only forgives our sins but guides our steps in a fashion that helps us live life as we should.

"To do justly" is realizing that we are all friends and neighbors. Each of us has our moments when we are weak or may fail. When we seek forgiveness of others, we need to be equally sure that we are willing to offer forgiveness as well. "To love mercy" better have you understanding that we really do need each other. Just because we live in a small community, that doesn't mean that there are not any homeless people around here. That doesn't mean that no one suffers from AIDS. We need to pray and live in a fashion that lets any soul who is seeking help know that they can find it in us.

"To walk humbly with your God" brings to mind some words of Harry Truman.

He said, "We all can pray. We all should pray. We should ask for the fulfillment of God's will. We should ask for courage, wisdom, for the quietness of soul which comes along to them who place their lives in His hands." All our lives need to be in His hands. That's why we need to be linked with God. That's why we need to understand that He has never meant to take anything away from our lives. He has always meant to bring far more confidence and power to them. All of us need to pray. We need to join in with all our hearts any time someone else says, "let us pray."

Special dinner to combine herbs and art

Botanical art by Jan Glass to be featured

Blending herbs with art is the focus of a special dinner program sponsored by Wintergreen Herbs and Potpourri at Stafford's Perry Hotel on Thursday, May 28.

Botanical artist Jan Glass of Charlevoix will introduce her newest body of work: watercolor and pencil vignettes of herb gardens, plants, produce and garden butterflies. She will speak about the evolution of her work through hours of nature study, and as a bonus, will also discuss how to attract different species of butterflies by planting the flowers that entice them.

Glass, through years of artistic discipline, has created award-winning botanicals to capture the beauty of the Great Lakes region. Her studio, just a short walk from the North Point Nature Preserve, allows her access to some of Michigan's rare native plants. Her own gardens both inspire and reflect her artistry. By collecting, tending and observing an increasing variety of plants, Jan has become intimately acquainted with the subjects she paints.

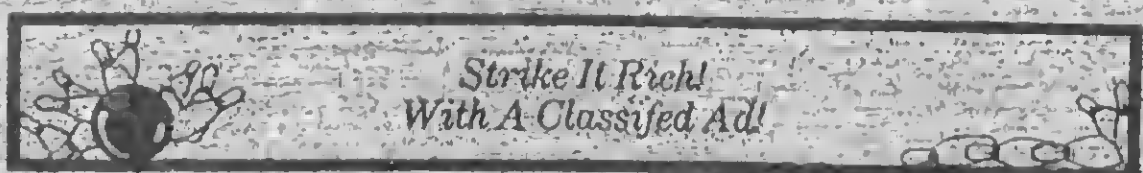

Among Glass' credits are acceptance to the Detroit Institute of Arts spring festival "Arts and Flowers" competition; the "Botanical Images" exhibition at Lansing Art Gallery; and several juried fine arts exhibitions sponsored by Crooked Tree Arts Council.

Wintergreen Herbs and Potpourri will offer herb plants for sale, and owner Mary Lee Huber will speak briefly during dinner on companion planting and square foot gardening. In addition to maintaining acres of herb garden, Huber is a contributing columnist for the Children's Corner of the Michigan Herb Journal. With degrees in social studies, English, fashion merchandising, advertising, modeling and dance, Huber has chosen to focus her career around herbs and the home. She is a knowledgeable and popular speaker on many topics surrounding the history, lore, growth, harvesting and uses of herbs and flowers.

Shane Brown, executive chef at Stafford's Perry Hotel, has designed a four-course herbal menu to include cold cucumber dill soup, smoked duck salad with rosemary and garlic vinaigrette, grilled chicken with lemon thyme butter, and mint creme brûlée.

The evening begins with a cocktail reception at 5:30. People are invited to shop for herbs and chat with Huber and Glass before dinner is served at 7 p.m.

Tickets are $30 per person and most be purchased no later than Friday, May 22.

Hospital unit reaccredited

Charlevoix Area Hospital's mammography services have received a three-year accreditation by the American College of Radiology.

Re-accreditation was necessary because the hospital purchased new equipment to upgrade its services. The accreditation means the new equipment has met the necessary requirements, which include a peer review evaluation of the qualifications of the staff, equipment, quality control and quality assurance programs, image quality and radiation dose. The hospital's mammography unit and procedures were surveyed by the Commission on Accreditation on Radiologic practice.

Dr. Tai-Ho Kang, radiologist on the Charlevoix Area Hospital staff, said, "ACR accreditation is not given to every facility. We are very proud that our mammography services meet these stringent requirements." The review process began in November, 1991.

Approval means that Charlevoix Area Hospital joins other facilities nationwide whose personnel are qualified to perform and interpret mammograms and whose equipment ensures that women receive optimum mammographic examinations with the lowest possible risk.

At Charlevoix Area Hospital mammograms are performed by women technologists. The X-rays are then interpreted by the radiologist, who is board certified by the American Board of Radiology.

One in ten women will develop breast cancer in her lifetime. Early detection through regular mammograms and a breast exam by a physician every year is the best defense.
